From other people, is an art which the British Gov ernment would doubtless be very glad to possess; but-even if brought before any judicial tribunal, and obliged under oath to make a statement upon the subject, we should say that there is no means by which the members of the Fenian Brotherh (though they must be numerously represented) could, be singled out from among the crowds attracted to Tower Hall by the cheapness, beauty and dura biliny of the Clothing there sold. EVENING BULLETIN. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1866.

THE PRESIDENT.

It is hard to say which quality of President Johnson is most to be admired, his patience or his candor. In the midst of overwhelming official business, he takes time to receive frequent deputations and to listen to long harangues, and to each he accords a frank and friendly reply. The gentlemen from Montana, who went to see him the other day, had no business except to advertise their territory, which, from their account, is a species of Paradise, with all the modern improvements. But the President received them graciously, and indulged them in one of those sensible, candid, off-hand speeches for which he seems to have a peculiar gift. He took occasion to define his position, which is that of a man who has one great, paramount duty to perform: that of restoring the country to a condition of secure Union as speedily as possible, without reference to combinations having in view a candidacy for the next Presidency. Having reached the top round of the political ladder, he can have no higher aspirations. That he is sincere in this assurance we have not the slightest doubt.

The reception given to the colored deputation, headed by Messrs. Douglass and Downing, gave another illustration of the qualities we have referred to as characteristic of the President. He listened respectfully to their arguments in favor of the immediate removal of all the disabilities that their race labors under, and then responded at length in a friendly way; nor did he suffer his temper to be rufiled by the several illtimed and inconsiderate interruptions that were offered. While acknowledging that they had good ground for complaint. he showed conclusively that their best policy is to be patient. Their race has gained immensely, within a few years, and in a few years more, if they pursue the right course, they will gain all they aspire to, without running the risk of bringing on convulsions which may be ruinous to them and damaging to the whole country. This is unquestionably whole country. This is unquestionably well done, rules or positive enactment, every pronosed law or charter affecting a city or local in its character, to be first submitted to and approved by the municipal authorities. The Legislature have given a sort of recognition to this idea by a common practice of not interfering with the local bills of each other, and, however kindly intended, has been productive of vast injury to the public, though sometimes profitable to the individual members themselves. A local bill is presented in manuscript, referred to a committee, duly manipulated by the members interested, reported back to the Legislature and passed. The public have no chance to examine its provisions or discuss them, and all it knows is the title to the act. Even the confidence, respect and support of every Legislature, seem to be fair and proper.

and we cannot forbear to wish such action on their part. Certainly the manner in which this proposed legislation has been brought before Councils merits our hearty approval. Councilmen, when true to the obligations of their trust, are better judges of the interests and wishes of our people on purely local subjects, than members of the Legislature could possibly be, and thus first submitting this proposed act to them for their consideration, the gentlemen moving in the matter have titles were drawn with such consummate skill, and so well sugar-coated, that the frauds and poison they concealed created such abuse and injuries that the Constitution of the Commonwealth had to be amended in 1864, and since then the titles to bills are required to disclose the object of them.

As an illustration of this secret and dangerous legislation, we need only refer to the "alleged corporation" of the Central Passenger Railway Company, many years ago, incorporated as the North Philadelphia Plank Road Company. Enterprising persons manipulated this harmless concern, under the titles of "supplement" and "further supplement toan act to incorporate" this plank road company, until it budded, blossomed and gave promise of becoming a gigantic railroad company, authorized to occupy Broad street and all other streets of our city, with dummies, locomotives, coal and frieght cars. That it is now merely a runt among the litter of similar schemes, is due to organic defects, and the astuteness of the Supreme Court.

Had these "supplements" and "further supplements" been fairly presented to this community through the Councils. and public attention drawn to these provisions, the Legislature might have been spared the travails of its birth, and its promoters and the residents on Broad streets saved many sleepless and anxious nights in the struggle over its existence. In common with all our fellow citizens, we prefer to look forward to the beautifying of Broad street under the provisions of the proposed act before Councils. rather than to the provisions of the "supplement" and "further supplements to the act to incorporate the North Philadelphia Plank Road Company."

MR. JARVIS'S MATINEES.-The preceding concerts of this interesting series give assurance that the remainder will be worthy a liberal support from the musical public.
