A NEW SONG ON AN OLD PLAN. A man of boastings vain and loud Is like a huge but filmsy cloud; And when you've bought such wretched suits, You feel your heart sink in your boots; And when you wish your heart to cheer, The Tower handy does appear; And when the Tower's garb you wear, You'll wish you always had gone there. THE SCARECROW THE SCARECROW. One morning sly, ere scarce the sky The sun began to tinge. I started out, intent to scout The woods which round did fringe The broad expanse of ripening grain, Which grew before me on a plain. When on said plain of ripening grain, Suspended by a pole, Garments quite new did meet my view, Upon a rising knoil, Which proved a suit of bad style clothes, Placed there to frighten off the crows. While in the field which there did yield, Its crop of yellow corn, With radiant smile and DEESSED is STYLE, Toward me came that morn, A man whose manner plainly told That he in fee the farm did hold. Said I, my friend, while I extend, With friendliness my hand; I'spose that you, if I judge true, Are owner of this land. And as his bright blue eye did glow, He quick replied, yes, sir, that's so, Well, if "that's so," I'd like to know, Why you have used NEW clothes To deck a pole upon a knoll, To frighten off the crows. For it to me doth strange appear, That any man should act so queer Well, now, said he, speaking to me, Well, now, said ne, spearing to not, It may seem quite absurd; But the suit there I bought to war, Ere of the "STAR" I'd heard; But as my neighbors had, I found, Been dressing there for miles around, I felt more proud and joined the crowd Then moving to that mart, And now appear in this suit here, So perfect in each part. And decked the man of straw with those, That he might frighten off the crows. nede Clothing is sold, astonish all who are so fortunat as to purchase at the STAR CLOTHING EMPORIUM, STAR CLOTHING EMPORIUM, 609 CHESTNUT STREET, SIGN OF THE STAR-PERLY & CO. WASTE IN PRINTING. In alluding to the great expenditure of money in printing public documents, especial allusion might have been made to the documents that come from the Agricultural Department. Several members of Congress have lately favored us with copies of a big volume, of nearly 700 pages, which is called the "Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1864." It has had a long period of gestation-thirteen months-and we do not think that it was worth the labor, either to the bureau of agriculture or to the nation. One might almost as wisely .. hunt up an agricultural report among the ruins of Pompeii, and have it transto know the reason why. Scientific men tell us that the quality of the gas lated and printed at the Government is inferior to anything ever produced expense.

The report proper, of Commissioner during Mr. Cresson's superintendence Newton, fills only twelve pages. But he of the Gas Works, and that consequently appends a mass of reports and letters we are compelled to use double the from all parts of the world and on nearly quantity to produce the same amount of every conceivable subject. If we were light. And this is abundantly proved to write a long essay on Newspapers and by reference to the consumption of gas send it to the agricultural bureau, it in numerous large establishments. would have a pretty fair chance of From several of these we have received coming out in one of the annual reports, statements that, with no increase of and probably with some pretty woodburners or in the time of consumption, their bills have fully doubled within the cuts. One Mr. West, of Georgetown indeed, who wrote a long and pleasant last few months. With all the burdens that our community have to bear and do article on Fresh and Salt water Aquaria, has had the good fortune to have it cheerfully bear, it is hard to have a tax printed in the Report, and the important like this added. Can we not have more relation of these nice toys to agriculture light? Light in our dark streets, and is thus officially established. Mr. West light upon the mysterious increase of our quotes poetry and makes altogether a gas bills. At present rates candles and lively contribution to Friend Newton's kerosene are a great deal brighter and annual. THE WORKHOUSE QUESTION IN ENG-LAND. template the printing of pretty magazine articles about aquaria? Fully three fourths of the contents of this volume reporter of the London Pall Mall might have been left out, and the world would have been no less wise.

Of this big and costly volume no less than one hundred and sixty-four thousand volumes were printed. If one thousand of them should be read thoroughly, it will be a wonder. The other hundred and sixty-three thousand, after being carried at Uncle Sam's expense all over the Union, will lie on the desks of editors, like ours, waiting for some besotted or insane creature to carry them off: or they will be stowed away in dark cellars, garrets or closets, or will, find their way to the grocers for wrapping paper, or to the paper makers to be ground up and made into new paper to be used for new agricultural reports, which will, in their turn, have the same fate. We shall probably, in about another year, be favored with a sight of the report for 1865, printed on paper
