The Dublin police on the 1st instant seized in a building formerly used as a stable in Longford lane, nearly 200 pikes, and about 300 incompleted pike handles. Small seizures of arms are also reported in several other houses. An influential meeting was held in Dub-

A resolution was passed declaring that the Fenian conspiracy had produced a feeling of well-founded alarm, and it was the duty of the Government to crush it and afford full protection to loyal and well-disposed citizens. Another resolution calls on the Government to increase the military force in Ireland Both resolutions were passed unanimously. On the evening of January 31st, during the progress of the Lord Lieutenant's drawing room, several troops of cavalry were placed in various parts of the city, the military paraded the streets, and the fire buckets were doubled. The Fenians, however, did not assemble as expected, and the crowd at the castle gate during the evening was peaceable. The commission for the trial of prisoners

FRANCE.
The Paris journals are actively discussing the Mexican question. The Constitutionnel defends the position of the French Government, and, evidently inspired by the foreign ment, and, evidently inspired by the foreign office, seeks to dissipate the disquiet in the public mind eaused by the publication of the correspondence with the United States.

The Constitutionnel says the Imperial Government will never yield to intimidation; and no excitement, whether it exists at home or abroad, will make the Emperor relax his habitual solicitude for the moral and material interests of the country. The troops from Mexico will return precisely on the throne, namely, "without endangering French interests we have gone to defend in those distant countries." The Constitutionnel expresses the belief that the Americans will conform to the law of non-intervention, and concludes as fol-

BRAZIL.

The Brazil mails had reached England. The allied army under President Mitre expected to enter Paraguay. The Brazilians were daily sending recruits to the river Platte. The army in Correntes numbers 40,000. The Paraguayan army is concentrated at Parole Petres, awaiting the approach of the enemy, and a battle was considered imminent. The state of the Argentine provinces is satisfactory. The markets were crowded with wool, and prices had de-clined in consequence of the stringency of the money market. The small-pox had been very destructive amongst the Paraguayan troops and the allied army. It is understood that the allies will listen to no propositions for peace the fundamental basis of which is not the expulsion of Lopez from Paraguay. A rupture had occurred between the Montevidean Government and the Chilean Envoy, and the latter's exequatur was canceled. The United States frigate Colorado, the flag-ship of Admiral Goldsbor-

How a Man Felt who was Hauged—A Sheriff's Story.

[From the Chattanooga Gazette.] * Wait till you hear it. Ten years ago I was elected Sheriff of this county. This was my first election, and I have been returned regularly ever since. My first attempt to open court was made during an important trial. The criminal was a depraved, desperate wretch, who had been indicted for an atrocious and brutal murder. The fellow was greatly hardened and seemed to care but little how the trial went—the evidence was strong against him, and when the case was submitted to the jury, they returned a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats.

The execution was fixed for a day, two weeks after the trial. Of course it was my duty to put the rope around his neck, and launch him into eternity. It was a distasteful duty. Tassure you: for, though I knew full well the man deserved his death, I did not relish the idea of hanging him. I got through with it, how ever, and set him to dancing in the air He did not struggle much and, I thought had an easy death. After hanging the usual time he was pronounced dead, and was cut down, and his body given to his friends for interment. I thought I had seen the last of the man, as the wagon containing the body drove out of the jail yard; but I was mistaken.

About four months after the execution, I happenened to be passing my barn, when I saw a man sitting in the doorway, with his head resting on his hands. I did not like his looks, so I approached him, and asked him what he wanted there. He raised his head, and looked at me in silence, I am not given to superstition, and I don't think I'm very timid, but I felt my blod grow icy cold, as I recognized in the man before me the person whose execution I had conducted. His face showed no traces of his violent end: the only indication of it, now visible, was a light disfigurement of the neck. I scarcely knew what to say or think, for I had seen him hung, and heard him pro-nounced dead, and had delivered his body to his friends for burial, and yet, after a lapse of four months, there he sat, looking at me with a face as white as a sheet. The terror that was exhibited in his countenance convinced me that he was no ghost so I asked him. with as much coolness as I could command:

"Jack Larkins, do you know me "You're the man that hung me," he replied, doggedly, at the same time making away.
"Before you go, Larkins," said, I, "I would like to hear how you cheated the gallows," "You won't peach on any of them folks as helped me; will you?"

asked. "No," I replied;" "I will not get them into any trouble. I simply wish to know how you felt while you were hanging, and how you were resuscitated. He hesitated for some time, but upon a renewal of my assurance that none of his friends should be molested, he told me the following story: When I put the rope around his neck and left him on the gallows, he felt a fainting about the heart, caused by his realizing his fearful situation for the first time; but before he had time to think, the trap was sprung and he fell through the opening. The shock of the fall was rather more startling than painful, and did not produce either insensibility or confusion. His thoughts were remarkably clear, and he seemed to have the power of seeing far above, below, and all around him. Everything assumed a bright, vermilion hue, and a soft, dreamy languor gradually stole over him until he became insensible. There was nothing painful or unpleasant in anything he had undergone. He seemed to be sinking gently into a gentle sleep and all his thoughts were pleasant. The next he remembered was being wrung by the most excruciating torture. The pains were not confined to any particular place, but extended through the whole body. His first thought was that he was in perdition, and was suffering the penalty of his crimes. The pains increased each moment, and at last became so intense that he started to his feet with a scream of anguish, at the same time opening his eyes. Great was his surprise to find himself in his father's house, in the midst of his friends and relatives. He fainted at once, and when he recovered found himself in his own bed. As soon as it was thought safe to do, his friends informed him that upon bringing his body home they had determined to try to resuscitate it, although they feared it would be useless. They worked faithfully, and at last successful.

geeded. "But, sir," said theman in conclusion, coming to life again was much worse

The man promised to leave the State and try to do better. I had but little cobfidence in him. yet I let him go. He kept his word, however, and a short time ago I heard he was a well-to-do farmer in one of the territories.

This, gentlemen, is the manner in which I got my ideas about hanging, and I think you will admit their force.

Does the Spider Eat Its Web? Fired with emulation, I carefully watched a common garden-spider (Empeira diadema), which I found as entertaining as wonderful. I com-menced by destroying the web of a fine fat spider, and the owner appeared excessively astonished as her web collapsed around her. At length she took refuge in an inverted flower-pot, where I found her two hours after. I am inclined to think that during this period she was preparing materials for a new web. I found in every case where a web is found in every case where a web is destroyed, that the spider goes away to some quiet spot, and, drawing his legs constantly on hand and for sale by HENRY WINSOR constantly of the hand with th some quiet spot, and, drawing his legs close round him remained quiet for two or three hours. During this period of repose the spider is stupid and dull—just gives an impatient shuffle when touched, but does not run off as spiders generally do when disturbed. I watched again, then left, and when I returned in half an hour. I found the spider as active as a spider could be in building a new webthe old one, which at my last visit was still hanging, had now vanished. Had the spider eaten it?—"that's the rub." By a lucky chance another spider came along the piece of wood, from the end of which my spider had fastened one of her foundation lines. "They met," an instant the claws of each was shot out with a dexterity that a pugilist might envy; the blows were given in exactly the same manner as a cat strikes her antagonist. The trespassing spider was soon convinced that it would be the height of folly to stop where he was, so fastening a line where he stood, he let himself down to a convolvulus leaf. My friend rushed to where Spider No. 2 had fastened his line, and seizing on it. the other end of which, be it remembered, was in communication with spider No. 2's body, began to wind him off, that is to say, she drew the line towards herself in the same manner that a sailor hauls in a rope, but with a rapidity that was truly wonderful; the front legs were moved so quickly that my eyes could scarcely follow them. Spider No. 2 having a decided objection to his vitals being wound away in this sort of manner; put an end to my friend's little pasby cutting the line. Spider No. 1 had now collected web that amounted to the size of a large pea; when she found the supply cut off she began stowing it away in her own body, forcing it in with her two front claws, and in a few moments not a vestige was left.-Science
