The Late Henry Winter Davis—Mr. Cresswell's Oration.

At the meeting held at Washington yesterday, to honor the memory of Henry Winter Davis, Hon. J. A. J. Cresswell commenced his address by a glowing tribute to the soldier, sage states are not next to the soldier. the soldier, sage, statesman and patriot. George Washington, awarded by the common consent of mankind the incomparable title of the Father of his Country; and referred to the late ceremonies in honor of him who, as saviour of his country, will be counted the compeer of Washington.

After other introductory remarks, he gave a brief biography of his deceased colleague, Henry Winter Davis was born on the 16th of August, 1817. His father, Rev. Henry Lyon Davis, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was president of St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., and rector of St. Ann' parish, and was removed from the presidency of St. John's by a board of Democratic trustees because of his Federal policranc trustees because of his rederal poli-tics; and years afterwards, he gave his son his only lesson in politics at the end of a letter, addressed to him when at Kenyon College, in this laconic sentence: "My son, beware of the follies of Jacksonianism."
The mother of the deceased was Jane Brown Winter, a woman of elegant accomplish-ments and of great sweetness of disposition and purity of life. She had only two children, Henry Winter, and Jane, who married Rev. Edward Style.

The education of Henry Winter began very early, at home, under the care of his aunt, Elizabeth Brown Winter, who entertained the most rigid and exacting opinions in regard to the training of children, but who was withal a noble woman. He once playfully said, "I could read before I was four years old, though much against my will." When his father was removed from St. John's, he went to Wilmington, Dela-ware, but some time elapsed before he be came settled there. Meanwhile Henry Winter remained with his aunt, in Alexan dria, Virginia. He afterwards went to Wil mington, and was there instructed under his father's supervision. In 1827 his father re turned to Maryland, and settled in Anne Arundel county.

After reaching Anne Arundel, Henry Winter became so much devoted to out-door life that he gave small promise of scholarly proficiency Whilst here he saw much of slaves and slavery, and what he saw impressed him profoundly, and laid the foundation for those opinions which he so heroically and constantly defended in all his after life. Referring to this period he said, long afterwards, "My familiar association with the slaves while a boy gave me great insight into their feelings and views. They snoke with freedom before a boy state. They spoke with freedom before a boy what they would have repressed before a man. They were far from indifferent to their condition; they felt wronged and sighed for freedom. They were attached to my father and loved me, yet they habitually spoke of the day when God would deliver them." He subsequently went to Alexandria and was sent to school at Howard, near the Theological Seminary, and from Howard he went to Kenyon College, in Ohio, in the

His college life was laborious and success ful. The regular studies were prosecuted with diligence, and from them he derived great profit, not merely in knowledge, but in what is of vastly more account, the habit and power of mental labor. Speaking of his feelings at the end of his college life, he sadly said: "My father's death had embittered the last days of the year 1836, and left me without a counsellor. I knew something of books, nothing of men, and I went forth like Adam among the wild beasts of the unknown wilderness of the world. My father had dedicated me to the ministry, but the day had gone when such dedications determined the lives of young men. Theology as a grave topic of historic and metaphysical investigation I delighted to pursue, but for the ministry I had no calling. I would have been idle if I could, for I had no ambition, but I had no fortune, and I could not beg or starve."

His father left an estate consisting only of some slaves, which were equally apportioned between himself and sister. Frequent applications were made to purchase his slaves, but he never could be induced to sell them, although the proceeds would have enabled him to pursue his studies with ease and comfort. He refused a very advantageous offer to settle in Mississippi; remained in Alexandria, and in 1839 went to the University of Virginia, where he en-tered actively on his course of intellectual training. After a thorough course at the university he entered upon the practice of law in Alexandria, Va., and on the 30th of October, 1845, was married to Miss Constance T. Gardiner, who died two years afterwards.

In 1850 he came to Baltimore, and immediately a high position, professional, social and political, was awarded him. He became a prominent member of the Whig party, and was everywhere known as the brilliant orator and successful controvertist of the Scott campaign of 1852. Mr. Davis led off in the American movement. He was elected successively to the Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Congresses by the American party from the Fourth District of Maryland. He supported with great ability and zeal Mr. Fillmore for the Presidency in 1856, and in 1860 accepted John Bell as the candidate of his party, though he clearly divined ane plainly announced that the great battle was really between Abraham Lincoln as the representative of the national sentiment on the one hand, and secession and disunion in all their shades and phases on the other. To his seat in the Thirty-eighth Congress he was elected by the unconditional Union party.

His sickness was of about a week's duration. Until the morning of the day preceding his death, his friends never doubted his recovery. In the evenling his wife spoke to him of a visit, for one day, which he had projected to his old friend, Mrs. S. F. Du-pont, when he replied in the last words he eyer uttered—"It shows the folly of making plans even for a day." He continued to fail rapidly until two o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday, the 30th of December when Henry Winter Davis, in the forty ninth year of his age, appeared before his God. His death confirmed the opinion of Sir Thomas Browne, who declared, "Mar shalling all the horrors of death, and contemplating the extremities thereof, I find not anything therein able to daunt the courage of a man, much less a well-resolved Christian."

Mr. Davis left a widow, Mrs. Nancy Davis a daughter of John B. Morris, Esq., of Baltimore, and two little girls, who were the idols of his heart. He was married a second time on the 26th of January, 1857. The orator ably reviewed the career of the deceased as a scholar, lawyer and statesman, enlarging upon his firm and decided attitude for the maintenance of the Union from the very inception of the rebellion But his crowning glory was his leadership of the emancipation movement in Mary-land, "My Maryland." He was the plat form-maker, and he announced it in a few lines: "A hearty support of the entire policy of the National Administration, in-cluding immediate emancipation by constitutional means."

Let free Maryland never forget the debt

of eternal gratitude she owes to Henry

His most striking characteristics were his devotion to principle and his indomitable courage. There never was a moment when he could be trathfully charged with trimming or insincerity. His views were always clearly avowed and fearlessly maintained. He hated slavery, and he did not attempt to conceal it. He remembered the lessons of his youth, and his heart rebelled against the injustice of the system. His entirethy the injustice of the system. His antipathy was deeply grounded in his convictions and he could not be persuaded, nor fright ened, nor driven, from expressing it. He was not a great captain nor a mighty ruler;

he was only one of the people, but, nevertheless, a hero.
At the close of the oration, Mr. Stevens, or Pennsylvania, moved that a vote of thanks be tendered to the orator, with a request for a copy of the oration for printing, which was unanimously carried. The benediction was given, and the concourse dispersed.

The Peesident and the New Jersey Leg-TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 22.—Resolutions favoring negro suffrage and condemning President Johnson's policy were introduced to-day in the Senate by Mr. Scovel, Republican, and lost. They are as follows:

Whereas, It has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the great political law of America is, that every hange of government shall be conducted under the supervising authority of some existing legislative body, extending the protection of positive law to the polls, defining the general rights of voters, and protecting them in the exercise of the elective franchise

Whereas, It is a great fundamental principle of the American Government that legislation shall guide every political change, and that somewhere within the United States there is always permanent organized legal authority which guides the footstope of those who saek to material and the state of the who saek to material and the same of the same footsteps of those who seek to restore governments which are disorganized or broken

lown; therefore

Resolved, That Congress, guided by the higest pre-existing political authority ought to, under the fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution, guarantee the States lately in rebellion a republican form

Resolved, That a policy which utterly ignores the rights, civil and political, of five millions of freedmen, some of whom have shed their blood for the salvation of the Republic, does not possess, and cannot possess, any elements of vitality or of justice. Resolved, That for New Jersey, and in the name of the country, we tender at once our sympathy and respect for the bold and de-termined men in Congress who have been and are to-day faithful to the principles that made us a party, and carried us trium-phantly through four years of civil war. Resolved, That the great cause which proclaims equality before the law as one of its fundamental principles is strong enough to survive the destruction of any partisan, and that in the conflict for the rights of mankind we will adhere to and maintain the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. Scovel, in offering these resolutions, said that infidelity to duty was a bad investment wherever made. Andrew Johnson made the worst investment of his life when he vetoed the Freedmen's Bureau bill. He abandoned justice and trampled on every principle that elevated him to power.

A lively and exciting discussion occurred on the resolutions. The Fenian Congress. PITTSBURGH, Feb. 22.—The delegates were all present at the opening of the Fenian Congress this morning. The Committee on Nominations reported the names of S. W. Durme (Ill.), Ed. L. Carley (N. Y.), James Donnelly (Mass.), J. H. Carleton (N. J.), A. L. Morrison (Mo.), John Darley (D. C.), all of whom were elected to fill vacancies. General Sweeney handed in a report, with plans, &c., which was read, and the Con-gress adjourned until the 23d inst.
