wheat, twenty-five cents a bushel. Section three admits the following articles free of duty:-Burr millstones, cotton and linen rags, firewood, grindstones, rough or inen rags, nrewood, grindstones, rough or unfinished, gypsum, plaster, unground. Section four repeals all laws or parts of laws allowing fishing hounties; provided that the vessel be licensed to engage in the fisheries, may take on board imported salt in bond, to be used in curing fish, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and on proof that said sait shall have been used for curing fish, the duties on the same shall be re-

Section five provides that goods arriving at New York, Boston, Portland, or any other part of the United States, which may be specially designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, and destined for places in the adjacent British provinces, may be entered at the Custom House and conveyed in transit through the territory of the United States, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe for the protection of the revenue

Section six provides that goods, wares and merchandise, where the duty has been paid, or the products or manufacture of the United States, may, with the consent of the proper authorities of the Provinces, be transproper authorities of the Provinces, be talk-ported from one port or place in the United States to another port or place therein, over the said Provinces, by such routes and under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; provided the goods so transported shall, on their arrival in the United States from the Provinces, be treated in regard to liability or exemption from duty or tax, as if the transportation had taken place entirely within the limits of the Section seven provides that British subjects shall have the right freely to navigate Lake Michigan with their vessels, boats and crafts, and to use the Sault St. Mary Canal on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the United States. Section eight provides that British subjects shall have, in common with the citizens of the United States, liberty to take fish of every kind, except shell fish on the eastern sea coasts and shores of the United States, north of the thirty-sixth parallel of north latitude, and on the shores of the except islands thereto adjacent, and of the several islands thereto adjacent, and in the bays, harbors and creeks of the sea coast on the shores of the United States, and of the islands, without being restricted from any distance from the shore, and with permission to land on the coasts of the United States and the islands, for the purpose of dragging their nets and enring their fish. Provided, in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, with the rishermen of the United States in the peaceable use of the parts of the coast in their occupancy for the same purpose.

Section nine provides that the President of the United States may terminate or suspend the provisions of this act or any sec-tion, as to the whole or in part of the British North American Colonies, by giving public notice of such termination or suspension whenever, in his opinion, it may appear just and proper, or whenever the following privileges, or any of them, shall not be accorded and secured to citizens and inhabitants of the United States. First, The rights to navigate the river St. Law-rence and the canals in Canada, and of the means of communication between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic ocean, with their vessels, boats and crafts, as fully and freely assubjects of Her Britannic Majesty, subject only to the same tables, and other assess ments as now or may be hereafter exacted from her Majesty's subjects. Second, The right ts cut lumber or timber of any kind river to the sea, to ship the same to the United States from the provinces of New Brunswick, without any export or ether duty. Third, Freedom from exposure to illicit trade and smuggling, which the establishment or maintenance of any free port or ports in the British North American colonies near our boundaries tends to interfere with. Fourth, The right and liberty of the inhabitants of the United ing the growth, production or manufacture of the British possessions in North America, imported from her Britannic Majesty's pos-States, in common with the subjects of His British Majesty, to take fish of every kind, except shell fish, on the sea coasts and shores, and in the bays, harbors and creeks of the British North American Colonies, without being rectified to any distance without being restricted to any distance from the shore, with permission to land on these colonies, and the islands thereof, and also upon the Magdalena Island, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish, provided that in so doing they shall not interfere with the rights of private property of British fishermen in peaceable use of any part of the said coast in their occupancy for the same purpose, nor with the salmon and shad fisheries in rivers or mouth of rivers. Fifth. The right of citizens or inhabitants of the United States to transport free of duty goods, wares or merchandise, or articles frem one part or place in the United States from the content of the c to another part or place therein, over the territory of the British North American Colonies, subject to no higher or other charges or terms than are now or shall be hereafter exacted of Her Majesty's subjects The Growth of Navies.

The Army and Navy Journal gives interesting statistics upon this subject. England, by the necessities of her India trade, got a long start of America in large vessels. As long ago as 1816, she had vessels of 2,000 tons burden, while in 1834, the largest mer-chant vessel that had ever been in Boston harbor was the ship Henry Clay, of only 500 tons burden. The marine record of the port of Boston shows that at the commencement of the eighteenth' century the largest ocean vessels rarely exceeded a hundred tons. Sixty years ago, vessels of 450 tons were regarded as of such unwieldy dimensions that they would be likely to prove the sions that they would be fixely to prove an expecuniary ruin of their owners. As late as 1836, one of the newspapers referred to an immense steam frigate to be built at London, called the Gorgon, 1,100 tons burden, and carrying twelve guns. And in the same year another paper, writing upon the proba-ble speedy establishment of lines of steamships between the ports of Liverpool and New York, said, "They must, however, be very large ships, we should say from 800 to 1,000 tons." In 1855, the Marlborough, screw ship, 131 guns, 4,000 tons, was added to the Royal Navy. It was settingted that 6.068 loads of timber were reestimated that 6.068 loads of timber were required to build her, and the services of 334 shipwrights one year. Not more than forty oak trees can grow upon an acre, so as to attain their full size, or to yield each two loads of timber. To build the Marlborough, therefore, the produce of seventy-six acres of oak forest of the growth of a hundred years was necessary. Her entire spread of sail considerably exceeded an acre and a half. It is estimated that in building the merchant ship Great Republic, a vessel of the same burden as the Marlborough, 2,380 tons of oak were used in her frame, posts and knees; 1,500,000 feet of hard pine in keelson, ceiling, deck frames, decks and planking, and about 300 tons of iron and 56 tons of copper in her fastenings. About 55,000 days' labor were required in her construction. A line-of-battle ship requires about 1,400 blocks of all kinds in her fitting. The first screw vessel ever built was the well-known steamer Princeton, built at Philadelphia, under the superintendence of Commodore Stockton, in 1843. Her engines were designed and supplied by Captain Ericsson, the inventer of the monitor sys-tem of iron-clads. Though, in experiment, in advance of her time, the Princeton outdid all the expectations formed of her, and in some respects has never been excelled. She was in the Gulf throughout the Mexican war, and on her return was broken up, her hull having become defective on account of being built of green timber. The first screw man-of-war in the British Navy was the Rattler, launched in 1845. The Admiralty was so doubtful of the screw principle, that her engines were so constructed that they could be converted into sidewheel engines could be converted into another engine if required, and the space that would be occupied by the paddle-boxes was kept clear of guns. The Admiralty, with equal doubt and hesitation, are coming gradually to the adoption of that other great invention of Captain Ericsson—the monitor.

From Boston. Boston, Feb. 27.—The Supreme Court, Judge Putnam on the bench, have been occupied for two days with the case of F. O. J. Smith, recently convicted of subornative for the control of the c tion of perjury, on his application for a new trial. The defendant's counsel occupied all of vesterday and a portion of to-day in preenting the case. District Attorney Sanger, for the Commonwealth, replied this after

The case will be resumed to-morrow morning, when it is expected that the de-tendant in person will address the Court. The case excites much interest here. Edward S. Erving, cashier at the Boston Post Office for nearly thirty-six years, and a much esteemed citizen, died yesterday, aged seventy-one years.

THE Cleveland Herald reports that on Friday night the earth in the vicinity of East Cleveland, Ohio, cracked open with a loud, dull report, like an earthquake. The fissure was two or three inches wide, and extended into the ground several feet. It damaged several houses, and alarmed the people generally.
