JOIN WITH THE CROWD. The geople are moving from near and afar,
The frumpet has sounded the praise of the "Star;"
It's the leader of fashion, the theme of our song, the starting along. Then join with the crowd that is marching along They are coming from hill-top, from valley and plain They have bought there before and will buy there again;

Then join with the crowd and help swell the throng
Which to that bright orb is now marching along. Which to that bright oro is now marching along.

All have heard of its cheapness, its fashion and style;
And though once 'twas o'erflowed like the banks of the Nile,
Yet with splendor renewed, herceforth it will shine.

Etill the leader of fashion, SIX HUNDRED AND NINE.

EVENING BULLETIN.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1866. THE FRENCH IN MEXICO. When the speech of the French Emperor to the Legislative Body was received in this country, we warned our readers not to place much confidence in the very vague intimation that the French troops should be withdrawn from Mexico. There was good reason for this distrust, as later events have proved. In the French Senate, the other day, Marshal Forey made a speech in which he described the situation of fairs in Mexico, with which he is well acquainted, having been in command there, and having constant communication with high officers still there. From his account, Mexico is in anything but a tranquil condition, and it will be ruinous to withdraw the French troops.

Indeed, he declares that new reinforcements must be sent out.

According to Marshal Forey, there is no national spirit in Mexico. If the troops should be withdrawn, there would be anarchy. The French resi dents left there, and those of the Mexican people who were friendly to them would become the prey of brigands. Indeed there is no safety now for any o them when out of sight of the French eagles. He does not say it, but, his language is such as to show that he believes, that should the troops be withdrawn, the throne of Maximilian would fall. He declares that France cannot abandon the great work she has undertaken, when it is not half done. He asked "what must now be done to complete the moral work which France has undertaken? His deliberate opinion was that more troops must be sent to Mexico; and, as this statement called forth murmurs among the senators, he added that if not more troops, at least these that were there should remain, and more sacrifices in money must be made. It was once said that France was rich enough to pay for her own glory; and would it be glorious to leave imperfect the enterprise she has commenced in a distant land? He admitted that money had its importance; but was it right that for a mere sum of money the realization of so great a design, conceived by the Emperor, should be endangered? He did not think so."

There is a good deal more in the speech of the same tenor. It made an impression in the Senate, and at its close there were cries of "Very good." M. Rouher, Minister of State, tried to lessen the effect which his words might produce out of doors by affirming that the opinion of the Government was not affected by anything the late commander-inchief of the French army in Mexico said: that the sentiments expressed in the speech from the throne were still the same; and that the Marshal gave utterance to his own private views, and to those of no one else. But there was a general impression that they are really | Nathans. the views of the Emperor himself. Again we caution our readers not to trust the imperial word. The French troops will not be removed as long as Maximilian objects to their removal, and he is likely to need them as long as he stays in the country. The only thing likely to hasten the time for their removal is the restoration of tranquility and accord in this country, so that we can demand their removal with some moral and physical strength to give force to the demand. For this reason, country as well as for many others, we hope that our Executive and Congress may soon be able to work together harmoniously.

CONGRESSIONAL FUN.

Congress is doing a very sensible thing. There is nothing so beneficial to digestion, physical or political, as a good laugh, and Congress is laughing in a regular, good, side-splitting style. The patriotic gentleman who furnishes the oil for the troubled waters is Mr. Rogers, of New Jersey. John Rogers, who was "burnt at the stake, with nine small children and one at the breast," was a small pattern of a martyr compared with Andrew Rogers, who is now being roasted at the stake with Mr. Johnson's nine amendments and one (Mr. Bingham's) at the breast. There seems to have been an intense enjoyment of Mr. Rogers's performance on Monday, by the Republican side of the House, and the strong efforts that were made to induce him to go on, after the expiration of his time, showed what a hit he had made. But even the well-timed relief which Judge Kelley gave him by the introduction of his little citation from Thiers, was not sufficient to restore the performer's exhausted energies, and he was compelled to postpone the exhibition until yesterday. A night's rest brought him out all fresh again, and it are again!" On this occasion Judge Kelley's place was taken by Mr. Price, of Iowa, and he proved himself as good at "roasting heretics" as martyr's heart could desire. Mr. Price, we take it, is a disciple of Izaak Walton. We judge so from the cooland skilful way in which he sauntered along until he reached the pool where his unsuspecting victim lay hid. Then baiting his line with a choice bit of quotation from the Constitution, he dropped his hook just before the nose of the unwary Rogers and with a rush and a snap he lands his fish "amid thunders of applause." The Congressional reporter thus tells the story:

into the ring, with his cheery "Here we

Mr. Price believed that, though he was not a constitutional lawyer, he knew how much two and two made. He believed that Congress now had the power sought to be conferred by this amendment, under the clause of the Constitution which declares clause of the Constitution which declares that Congress shall have the power to provide for the general welfare.

Mr. Rogers (N. J.) Will the gentleman inform us where he finds that clause?
Mr. Price—Certainly, sir. It has been a part of the joys of my life to impart information to the ignorant. [Laughter.] It is in the eighth section of the first article (reading it). (reading it).

Mr. Rogers—Does the gentleman read from the text of the Constitution? Mr. Price-See the difference between being a common-sense man and a Constitutional lawyer. [Roars of laughter.]

Mr. Rogers (having referred to the Constitution)—It is here. You are right. I supposed it was only in the preamble.

[Laughter.]
Mr. Price—These gentlemen have talked about the Constitution of our fathers, the Constitution as it was, and when you bring them down to the real old Bible, the "Constitution of our fathers," about which they prate so much, they are as ignorant of it as they were before they were [Laughter.]

We feel indebted to Rogers, Andrew Rogers, the Merry Andrew Rogers. We are not quite prepared to say that we would like to vote for him, but anything short of that we think he is fairly entitled to. Messrs. Kelley & Price have done the country good by securing the services of so amusing a performer as Andrew, and if they should conclude to take a short trip with him through the provinces, whenever Congress adjourns, we think they would find it remunerative. By all means let Congress hold on to Rogers. If we must choose between the two Andrew J.'s, then Rogers for choice. The President does not make us laugh, and the Congressman does. Our preference is to retain both President and Congressman, but if this is grasping too much, we shall deplore the loss of the one, but we will comfort ourselves over the possession of the other.

MUSICAL. GERMAN OPERA.—There has rarely been an operatic performance here that was more enjoyed than that of Fra Diavolo, last evening, by the Germans. The artists entered into it with genuine zest. The cast was excellent. Mme. Rotter, as "Zerlina," was entirely at home. Mme. Johannsen made an admirable "Lady Allcash." Habelmann has no equal in this country for such a part as that of "Fra Diavolo." He sang superbly and acted with great spirit. A new tenor, Mr. Armand, who has the advantage of youth, good looks and a very agreeable voice, made the unimportant part of "Lorenzo" quite an interesting feature of the performance. Mr. Weinlich was a fair representative of "Lord Allcash," The two brigands were capitally represented by Steinecke and Hermans, the latter introducing Russell's English song "I'm Afloat!" with good effect. Orchestra and chorus were excellent, and the whole performance gave great delight to the large audience. This evening The Magic Flute of Mozart will be played, with a powerful cast, a new prima donna, Mlle. Naddi, taking the part of the Queen of Night.

Mr. Perelli's Italian Operas.-On Friday evening, at Concert Hall, the amateurs, under Mr. Perelli's direction, will play Donizetti's Maria di Rohan, A debutante, of whose talent we hear high praise, will take the part of "Maria," the others being sustained by Miss Denègre. Mr. Waterman, Mr. Durand and Mr.
