Hon. John Miner Botts on the Situation Hon. John Minor Botts has written a let ter, in which he says that he has been in duced to enter the political field because he "saw the incontestible evidence of disloy-alty" displayed by the press and Legisla-ture of his State, daily exhibited and hourly increasing.

"When I saw Union men everywhere and under all circumstances overslaughed and turned out of office for those who had served in the rebellion; when I saw the people being rapidly educated to look upon treason as a virtue and a passport to office, and loyalty a crime to be punished; when I saw. out of all the papers published in the State only two or three, and those of a limited circulation, remonstrating or protesting against this injustice to those who alone could fill any office in this State according the provisions of the Constitution, which I at first pronounced a second edition of the "Lecompton Swindle," but which has since been recognized by all, and under which the present Legislature professes to have met, and is now acting; when I saw that the late rebel Legislature was virtually and substantially declared a lawful Government; when, on motion of a very active participant in the rebellion, in a bill that referred to the late State Government, the words de facto were struck out on the ground that many thought it a Government de jure, thereby virtually legalizing the rebellion; when I heard in Washington of overwhelming testimony that had been given by the most respectable gentlemen from this State, and from almost every other Southern State, of the rapid increase of disaffee tion and disloyalty among the people, and when officers in command of Southern departments, of the highest respectability and of the highest grade and distinction, testify ing to this disloyalty, and on oath declaring their knowledge of a wide-spread conspiracy on foot among the leaders not to embark in rebellion again, for of that they had quite enough, but to involve the country in a foreign war, in order that the discontented and aspiring politicians might have a chance to cut their way to fortune and wipe out the bitter mortification with which they are devoured, but which for a time was smothered, all of which you will learn when this testimony is laid before the public: it was not in my nature to be quiet until the net was woven and the knot tied by which we were again to be plunged into a sea of calamities as we were in 1861, when it might be too late to resist it. Seeing all this, I hesitated long. I reflected 'naturally on what my duty required me to do,' and I felt that I should be no better than a traitor to my country and so my party—I mean the Union element of the South and of the country, for I belong to no party—if I did not endeavor to nip it in the bud.

"So I 'pitched in,' enlisted once again against the most mischievous, the most reckless, the most untiring and persevering, and the most wicked party, as I religiously believe, that the Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, ever permitted to exist upon earth. I speak now of the leaders of that party as a political organization, many of seem to think the sun would cease to rise and shine if their infallible councils were withheld from the nation. Of what materials are our people made, that they do not look more clearly to their own in-Have they not suffered enough through the agency of this same Democratic party, that they must cling to it and worship it as if it had delivered them from misery and ruin, instead of having brought it upon them? He then charged upon the Democratic party that they annexed Texas which was the remote cause of the late war; that-they involved us in war with Mexico; that they repealed the Missouri Compromise, which was the immediate cause of the rebellion; that they then inaugurated secession and war in 1861.

"I am not silly enough to apprehend another rebellion, but I do fear the ascendancy of this party to power, and I do fear power did he impose an oath upon voters. that power if the country should by any misfortune become involved in foreign war, which I have every reason to believe is anxiously prayed for by many who have recently taken the oath of strict fidelity to the United States, as contained in the am-

"Now suppose by any misfortune or any indiscretion on the part of the civil or military authorities, either in Washington or on the Rio Grande, we should be involved in difficulty with the French Emperor, and these extremely loyal gentlemen were to invite the French authorities to land a considerable force at some Southern point, say Charleston, Savannah, Pensacola or Mobile, and Gen.Grant were to attempt to resist them with the army of the United States, who believes they could reach the point of landing in the present temper and spirit displayed? They might reach the point, perhaps, but would their supplies and materials of war be allowed to reach them? Would not the bridges be destroyed and the rails torn up, &c? I believe if the men did not do it, the women would, for they are being educated to this feeling every day.

"Now, if this feeling does exist, why is it that every Union man is sacrificed and every one who was in the rebel service taken care of? Why is it that if young ladies, who modestly and instinctively shrink from the appearance of their names in the public prints, and who attend a social party given by United States officers, find their attendance on the occasion referred to, in the next day's paper in such terms as to bring odium upon them among their former

He argues that the present Virginia Legislature is unconstitutional, and says "this question is likely to be brought before the ederal Courts by the Northern stockholders of the Alexandria and Orange Railroad; if the effort should be persisted in to dispossess the present officers of the road under lature, and thus relieve me of the necessity of raising the question by withholding the payment of my State taxes, as I have announced as my purpose to do. By the way, I may as well mention here that I have been recently informed by a member of the Board of Public Works, who has been removed from office, that Mr. Alexander Rives and myself had been appointed di-rectors of this road before the change in the Board took place, but, of course, as we were both Union men, we were thought to be very unsuitable persons to serve as directors of a Virginia railroad, and we were both unceremoniously removed by the new Board, even before the appointment had been announced to take place, for two gentlemen whose sympathies were in the oppo-site direction, whilst the third gentleman who was associated with us, a secessionist has been retained." Speaking of the nomination of Judges he says:-"The only original Union man put n nomination by Governor Peirpoint was rejected. He was appointed over two years ago by Gov. Peirpoint as Judge of Circuit, and has presided with dignity and ability, entire satisfaction to the bar and giving entire satisfaction to the bar and those having business in this Court, but his loyalty killed him. The reconstructed Rebels of the Legislature could not consent to allow even one loyal man on the bench of

"Now would it be believed that this Constitution, which is so framed as to exclude all those who participated in the rebellion from holding office under it, has been so abused as to confer the offices on those alone who did thus participate, and if they do this under this constitution, what have we to expect under a new constitution of their own framing, but that every man loyal to the United States during the rebellion, will be perpetually excluded by constitutional

I see a proposition has been already submitted to the Senate for the call of a convention to make a new constitution, which is just what I have expected and have foreshadowed from the beginning. Is this a time and an occasion when Union men should be asked or expected to keep their mouths shut, with the whole power of the United States Government to support them.

"I am not one of those who entertain the opinion that Mr. Johnson has intended, or means now to make any concessions to the copperheads of the North or the coppertails of the South. To the credit of human nature be it said, that our history has furnished not even one instance of such revolt-ing turpitude and depravity as would be exhibited by his tergiversation at such a time, and under such circumstances as now

He favors the reconstruction of State Government by the Union men, and says "Upon its being decided that all legislative action under this Constitution, has been un-authorized, Governor Peirpoint would be rehabilitated and restored to the power with which he was clothed by the Constitution, and he could at once appoint all the present judges and magistrates to hold over until new appointments could be made. But as long as the State is under the control of disloyal men so long will she be excluded from the councils of the nation, and just so long will her representatives be 'left out in the

"Unless we mean to acknowledge our inferiority we must make a fight. Therefore, let us go in with all our strength and nely and shamefully surrender at once. We must stir up the Union element of the State, whether large or small. Richmond is the nucleus for operations. Call a convention of Union men, and as a body make an appeal to the President and to Congress to come to our relief.

"Of course, all cannot come, but call all and let as many come as are not afraid. Call it at such time as may seem most expedient and count me in, and let those who are afraid or cannot come, stand back while we do the fighting for them, ourselves and our country; but those who can come and won't come, can, if they prefer it, stay at home and swell the majority against us. "Respectfully yours,
"John M. Botts."

From our Third Edition of Saturday. XXXIXTH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION. Washington, Feb. 3d. House.—The House set as in Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, on the President's message, general debate being the only thing in order.

There were not a score of members in the Hall while the journal was being read and the audience in the gallery was correspondingly slim.

Among the many reports of a private character made yesterday, was an adverse report made by Mr. Washburn (Mass.), from the Committee of Claims, on forty petitions for damages, arising from the raids made in July, 1864, by the rebels in the vicinity of Fort Stevens, Washington; and an adverse report by Mr. Sloan, from the same Committee on the House bill to provide for ascertaining and adjusting claims against the Government for injury or destruction of property by the armies of the United States, or by the military authorities, during the late rebellion.

Mr. McKee (Ky.) addressed the House in support of an amendment to the Constitu-tion, which he had introduced on the 19th of February, and which had been referred to the Judiciary Committee, providing that no person should be qualified to hold the office of President or Vice President of the United States or of Senator or Representative in the National Congress, or any office held under appointment from the President and requiring the confirma-tion of the State, who had held office civil or military under the late Confederacy, or voluntarily aided the re-at elections? By what authority did be say to the Legislature of a sovereign State: "You must ratify the Constitutional amendments before I accept you as being in proper relations to the Union over which I preside? On what law did he proceed to order a convention to remedel the Constitution of a State which had never lost its power, and then say to that Convention "You must repudiate your war debt and abolish slavery before you esume your place in the Union."

He(Mr.McKee)made no war upon the Pre sident for these acts. They were questions or his newly acquired supporters to reconcile themselves to, but he would scorn the most costly jewels of the earth if put into his hand by one who had plucked them unlaw-fully from the crown in which they had teen set. By martial law the President had exercised these powers. These were mat ters which the representatives of the people in the National Congress had the right to pass upon. It belonged to them to deter-mine when and how the rebel States should resume their proper relations in the Union. Mr. McKee's speech was principally directed to a criticism of the President's policy in this same tone. He advocated adoption of the amendment proposed by him as a proper punishment to rebels,
