THE MOON AND THE STAR.
Though the moon was not full in the month just passed
Fet the "STAR" was quite crowded throughout it;
Both orbs have their charms which forever will last,
And none in their senses will though it. The days were so scarce in the month we have passed

That the troon was unable to fill it;

Yet from the first day quite up to the last
Perry's "STAR" got so crowded until it Was full to overflowing with gentlemen seeking low prices and fashionable goods. We have bought nearly all our stock since the decline, and can, therefore, sell lower than those houses which have such large stocks to dispose of, bought when goods were at a higher figure, for they will very reluctantly reduce their prices to the present standard. For the purpose of closing out our stock of overcoats, we have marked them so far below the actual cost, that they would be a desirable nvestment for all who expect to purchase next win ter. Also, a lot of Vests, Very Cheap.

EVENING BULLETIN. TUESDAY. MARCH 6, 1866.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. The Democrats assembled at Harris burg yesterday got through their work promptly. There was not a great deal of speech-making, the orators evidently feeling that they stood on delicate ground. There was apparently some difficulty, however, in making up a platform, for the committee was not ready to report at the time expected-When the resolutions appeared they were quite mild, somewhat ungrammatical, and singularly incongruous. They say that the representatives of the States lately in rebellion "should be forthwith admitted." Inasmuch as the President has not yet proclaimed the rebellion at an end, they place the party in opposition to him, while in a subsequent sentence they declare him entitled to confidence and support. The second resolution reads: "That the faith of the republic is pledged to the payment of the national debt, and Congress shall pass all laws, necessary for that purpose." This is good doctrine; but when a convention, many members of which were rank copperheads, declares that Congress "shall" do anything, or shall not, we see a little inconsistency and a good deal of presumption. The resolution accepting the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery is a graceful abandonment of an old and * fundamental doctrine of the party. But while the emancipated are entitled to all their rights of person and property, the Pennsylvania "Democrats" are unwilling to grant to the negroes the right to vote. There is a resolution of thanks to the brave men of the army and navy "for their services in defence of the Constitution and the Union." But let it be borne in mind that the men who thus resolved, and the party they represent, did all they could to deprive the soldiers and sailors of the right of suffrage. In this connection, we may inquire whether the black soldiers and sailors, whom the Democracy still refuse to let vote, are Democracy still refuse to 100, included in the resolution of thanks.

Hiester Clymer, of Berks courthis Mr. Hiester Clymer, of Berks county, was nominated for Governor. This is a very fitting selection. Mr. Clymer was always a consistent supporter of the Peace and pro-slavery Democracy. He opposed Abraham Lincoln and his administration at every step they took. He was an active man in the opposition to the voting of soldiers and sailors. He was one of the bitterest opponents of Andrew Johnson, until he became President; and he would oppose him still, but for the hope that he will one day accept the leadership of the so-called Democracy and re-organize the party at the South. so that with Northern copperhead aid it may once more secure power and patronage and the control of the country, as in the days of Tyler, Polk, Pierce and Buchanan. Mr. Clymer fitly represents his party, and the Union men of the State, the true friends of the nation, will remember his record, when the time comes for voting for Governor. A TREASURY JOB.

A statement has been going the rounds. concerning the terrible waste charged upon the Treasury Department in destroying the cancelled currency and securities, instead of turning them to practical account. Secretary McCulloch ap- | delphia, they have no more relish for pointed a board to investigate this ebel oratory in front of the Hall of In-alarming leak in the National Treasury, and the report of this sagacious board is published. The board report that the plan of burning the old notes is not safe. They do not assert that a single threecent note has ever escaped the fiery ordeal, but they say there might be a hole in the screen of the furnace chimney, through which a three or even a five-cent note, or at least a fragment of one, might escape into the outer air. They regard this danger as so important that they regret that they were not able to get into the chimney, while the furnace was in operation, in order to watch the interstices of the screen. Should their propositions be carred out, we fancy that Mr. McCulloch will have cause to regret that they failed in this particular.

But this excellent and economical board have a plan. They have discovered that the risk of escaping fire may be avoided and at the same time a large revenue obtained for the Department. They have ascertained that burning will not destroy paper but that drowning will. "Boil the troublesome material!" say the board. Mr. S. M. Clark, of the Treasury Department, who has spent untold thousands of the public funds, in producing what professed to be waterproof paper, wishes to put up machinery in the Treasury for boiling bank-notes and making envelopes out of them. The apparatus, which the board seem to think is an invention of Mr. Clark's, is nothing but the ordinary rotary steam boiler in use in most paper-mills and he proposes to turn the Treasury Department into a paper-mill for the purpose of disposing of 100,000 pounds of paper. The calculation of the board is worthy of Wilkins Micawber. 100,000 pounds of paper are to produce 100,000 pounds of pulp, which is worth ten thousand dollars, which is to be ground out into envelopes, which are to supply the whole need of the Treasury Department, after the fashion of the House that Jack Built. This whole plan looks to us like an extensive job. By the time Mr. Clark gets his rotary boilers and his paper mill started in the Department, he will have spent more money than the whole currency of the country, reduced to pulp, would be worth. He will have created numerous new offices and salaries, and will subject our valuable Secretary to the chance of being blown out of the window, some fine morning, by an explosion of his boilers. He will also discover that he cannot get quite pound for pound out of the paper on which he proposes to operate. When he gets rid of the grease and dirt and the heavy mineral green tint, he will find his 100,000 pounds dwindled away to, at most, 60 or 70,000 pounds, an amount much less than is consumed by many paper mills in a single week. All this elaborate scheme is to avoid the contingency of the escape of a singed three-cent note from the chimney, which this board, most unfortunately, could not get into, and to obtain a supply of material which would last a good-sized paper mill less than a week. We hope Mr. McCulloch will not seriously consider this absurd proposition, which can only be the source of incalculable trouble, expense and risk.

THE FENIAN LEADERS. The Fenian cause is evidently in the hands of foolish and injudicious men. We do not allude to their intestine broils. which have resulted in a dual organization, with conflicting policies and different plans of action, nor yet to the lack of wisdom displayed in trumpeting to the world most of their plans in advance of any attempt at executing them. We refer more particularly to the Fenian movement in its relations to the American people. It may safely be assumed that Fenianism would never have been allowed to assume the importance it has gained in this country, were it not for the infamous conduct of England towards the United States during the recent struggle. The government of Great Britain set an example of toleration to active aiders and abettors of treason and rebellion against a friendly power, and our own government and people consequently look upon the active measures now in progress upon our own shores against England with more indifference than they would were it not for the unfriendly conduct of England.

The dullest of the Fenian leaders recognize the fact that their cause would be utterly hopeless were it not for the sympathy that they believe the American people feel for the movement. How they endeavor to propitiate the American people and secure this vitally important sympathy may be inferred from their recent conduct and utterances. On Sunday last, at a mass meeting in New York, a resolution was adopted throwing obloquy and reproach upon the honored name of Charles Francis Adams, the American minister near the Court of St. James, and insulting Mr. E. G. Eastman, the American Consul at Queenstown, Ireland: These attacks upon high officials of the United States are in sufficiently bad taste; but the Fenian leaders have made a still more fatal error in their choice of friends. The infamous John Mitchel, whose name must ever be detested among loyal Americans, is their acknowledged agent at Paris; and a Captain McCafferty, who was recently an officer in the rebel service, is announced among the orators who are to address a mass meeting of Fenians in front of Independence Hall to-night. We go for large charity towards repentant rebels, as well as towards other sinners; but if we understand the temper of the people of Philadependence than they have for formal resolves made by adopted citizens, or aliens, upon American soil, reproaching and insulting distinguished American statesman and prominent American officials. We repeat that the Fenian movement is in bad hands.

THE FENIANS REPULSED. The Fenians have met their first decided defeat, and the British lion may breathe freely at this token that the tide of success has turned in favor of that venerable beast. A party of Fenians wearing the greenest green, marched yesterday into the Democratic Convention at Harrisburg and proclaimed the O'Vaux for Governor of Pennsylvania. The gubernatorial oyster lay basking in full view of the ambitious leader of the Fenian wing of the fierce Democracy, and the bivalvular prize was too tempting for the O'Vaux to withstand the bait. Richard slipped his finger into the smiling trap, when, lo! it closed upon his unwary digits and he found that he had caught a Tartar. We regret this result deeply. We should so like to have the O'Vaux for a candidate. Clymer is commonplace, and will fall an easy victim, but the O'Vaux, dressed in Fenian green and canvassing the State, would have been something like a candidate. His success in stumping is so well assured that some unaccountable madness alone can have induced the Democracy to offer us a mere ordinary Clymer, when they might have given us the original O'Vaux.
