BAD HABITS. Mr. Batty should study hereafter when Is the right time to enter a lion's den; Not when the lioness in her lair Has just given birth to a son and heir, And the lions are eagerly watching the "pup," To get a good chance to eat it up; For there's always a time in the course of the day, When the fasting lion must even prey; so, don't enter a cage when the lions are wild, Disputing who shall devour their child A very bad habit for lions indeed, From which they ought straightway to secede; But not a worse habit, and not more mean, Than in our good city is daily been, Almost as bad as the habit to curse But it need not be; if the coat fits bad, Go the "STAR" and get better clad; If loose habits have thrown you in despair: Go to the "STAR" and discard them there; When for FASHION'S attire you stand in need You'll find PERRY & Co. your friends indeed: It has long been thus, and will long be so.
To Six Hundred and Nine is the place to go,

Bad habits soon cured and your dress made right. EVENING BULLETIN. FRIDAY. MARCH 9, 1866.

A PLOT SPOILED.

The clear and manifestly just decision of Justice Strong, of the Supreme Court, in the case of the injunction asked for against the encroachments of the Lombard and South Streets Railway Company, will commend itself to every lover of right and every opponent of arbitrary city railway rule. The original charter of the company required that it should conform itself to the city railway ordinances and all other ordinances of the city of Philadelphia. These ordinances ment for the purpose of laying rails his last remark. It was precisely bewithout the consent of the city having first been obtained. One of the grounds relied upon by the company in the suit was that the Legislature cannot delegate to the city of Philadelphia the right of assenting to or departing from the exercise of the franchise conferred by the General Assembly upon the defendants. The judge set this plea at rest by declaring that if it possessed any force it would render the entire charter null and void and deprive the company of the right to construct a road at all under its authority. a
In April 1863 the company procured

an act of the Legislature empowering it to construct additional tracks along several of the highways of the city, and among others along Delaware avenue, without first obtaining the consent of City Councils. The judge did not pause to express his disgust at such scandalous special legislation as this; but such disgust may be inferred. On this point he scame in with a decision of the sledgehammer description, which proved as complete a settler as Portia introduced in another well known case at the moment of Shylock's imagined triumph, as reported in the" Merchant of Venice" IV and I. The judge (we mean Justice Strong) conceded the right, or rather the power, of the Legislature to authorize a monopoly to take possession of a street whether the city authorities were willing or not; but he also reminded the monopolists that while taking their pound of street fiesh they were to take no drop of avenue blood. In other words he declared that the acceptance by the State of a legacy of $300,000 left it by Stephen Girard, under certain conditions in respect to Delaware avenue. restricted the commonwealth forever from any right to interfere with that portion of the public highways, unless compensation was first made to the city and to the owners of property on the avenue, and although the question was not involved in the present issue, the Judge entertained grave doubts whether even with such compensation the State had any right so to encroach upon the

We congratulate the citizens of Philadelphia that a pure, a wise and an upright judge has been found to protect them by planting himself between a corrupt legislative "ring" and a grasping corporation that claims the right to do as it pleases and to rule the streets and the city authorities with rails of iron.

LIGHT IN DARK PLACES. In Congress, on Wednesday, last, a rather amusing episode occurred during the debate on the bill which is designed to take the place of the Reciprocity Treaty with the British Provinces. The subject of coal was under discussion in connection with the bill, and a Mr.

"white slave," who is ground down to comparison with that of a sleek and in the good old slave times.

Well, during the debate on the Reciprocity Treaty, or rather upon the substitute for it, Mr. Hogan strongly denounced the system of Protection, and rising to a point of enthusiasm during the argument, he asked, "What protection was given to the poor men who dug coal? These men had been compelled to rise en masse to secure fair wages for their labor."

Now the funniest part of the play came in at this point, where it was necessary that somebody who knew what he was talking about should set Mr. Hogan right. Comically enough, this somebody was the Hon. Myer Strouse, the democratic representative from the Schuylkill district of our own State. Mr. Strouse is no doubt a believer in "white slavery" down-east, where it is almost as far from his own doors and his own understanding as the begrimed "white slavery" of the coal regions of Pennsylvania is distant from the doors and the comprehension of the gentleman from Missouri; but Mr. Strouse could not stand this reflection upon his own immediate constituents, so he rushed to the rescue, and after saying that he represented the most extensive coal fields in Pennsylvania, he thus proceeded:

"His county (Schuylkill) had shipped to tide water, in 1865, between four and five millions of tons of coal. All these stories about miners' strikes were these stories about miners' strikes were gross exaggerations. There was no more liberal class of employers in the world than the coal employers of Pennsylvania. A majority of the works were carried on, not by companies, but by individuals. The wages of workmen at the mines reached five dollars per day. The objection he had to this bill was that it imposed too low a rate of duty on Canadian coal. For his part he would legislate twice for the American people rather than once for a foreign people.

"Mr. Hogan—So would I. Did you ever know a laboring man in the coal fields of Pennsylvania get rich digging coal? "Mr. Strouse—Thousands of men. "Mr. Hogan declared he was glad to "Mr. Griswold stated that there was no class of laborers in the country who have class of laborers in the country who have been paid such exorbitant wages as coal operators. They had earned from five to ten and fifteen dollars per day.

"Mr. Hogan—Good for them. I am glad of it. But I rather take it that that has risen from the enormous profits made by risen from the enormous profits made by the proprietors of coal mines." Mr. Hogan, late as he was in getting his eyes opened to the real state of affairs, forbid the removal of the public pave- hit the nail exactly upon the head in cause the proprietors made large profits that the employes were enabled to earn liberal wages, and it is to this very community of interest by which the workingman shares the prosperity of his employer that the rapid advance in wealth and happiness of the masses of the Northern and Middle States is to be

> Nothing more important than sufficient and enduring protection to the manufacturing interests is needed to make the United States the wealthiest, the most prosperous and powerful nation upon the face of the earth. Mr. Myer Strouse, Democrat as he is, can see the working of the system in respect to coal. and we should suppose that even Mr. Hogan would not require to be gifted with the wisdom of a Solomon to discover that it was not precisely the best way to benefit the "white slaves" of the North (whose condition he so greatly commiserates) to deprive them of protection and thus put them upon a level with the cheap labor of Europe.

COSTLY LUXURIES. The subjects of Queen Victoria have to pay dearly for the blessing of maintaining Her Majesty and her numerous family. Each son and daughter has a handsome allowance, and whenever one of them gets married, a big dowry has to be voted by Parliament. The Prince of Wales has an enormous revenue. His two sisters, who are married to German princes, got large marriage portions and have a yearly pension of a very heavy amount. The Princess Alice, when married to Prince Louis of Hesse, received £30,000 sterling and an annuity of £6,000 sterling a year. The same amounts are to be voted to the Princess Helena, who is soon to be married to another needy German, with a princely title, but no princely estate. An annuity of £15,000 a year, or three times the salary of the President of the United States, is also to be voted to Prince Alfred on his coming of age. When he gets married, he and his wife will have additional sums voted to them, and by the time all the nine sons and daughters of the Queen are wedded, they will cost the public treasury, in addition to their large marriage portions, at least half a million of dollars a year. The Queen's grand-children, as they grow up, will also have to be provided for, so that there is a pretty prospect of an indefinite increase in the amount raised by taxation to support the royal family in luxury.

The English are a patient people, and they accept all these burdens with scarcely a murmur. But some of the more thoughtful, especially those of moderate means, must ask themselves at times what they get for this enormous expenditure. As parts of the Govern-Hogan, of Missouri, came out with great | ment, these princes and princesses are itrength upon this point. Mr. Hogan is utterly useless. The most costly

A paragraph in a London paper the other day, recounting the exploits of his Royal Highness, stated the important fact that he had bagged 26,000 head of game during the past season. No one has ever heard of any more important business performed by the heir to the throne than this enormous slaughter of game. The millions that he has cost the nation have won for him no higher distinction than that of being a good shot, a good rider and a bon vivant generally. But the English people seem to think this is all that is needed, and they congratulate themselves that the Prince of Wales is not wicked and profligate, as was the last Prince of Wales with which they were blessed.
