It was remarked by a distinguished scholar, in speaking of the Bible, that "there is such fullness in that book, that oftentimes it says much "by saying nothing, and not only its expres-sions, but its silences are teaching, like a dial in which the shadow, as well as the light, informs us." Beautiful and truthful representation ! We are learning—ever learning—not only in the roaring city, but also in the noiseless forest; not only in the excitements of the day, but also in the calm midnight hour; not only in the "quiet night" of the beautiful light, but in the thick darkness that brings worlds to our view, which, but for its gathered curtains, would never have been visible at all; not only in the raging of the storm, but also in the hush which precedes it, and not only in the brilliant saloon, with its cheerful crowding throng, but also in the chamber of death, where the corpse of a loved one is lving with a fixedness that seemed to mock the agony that has been occasioned by its removal. Even so are we ever learning from the pages of inspiration, not only when we gaze upon the high hills on which revelation has poured the effulgence of its beams, but also when we stand and look upon the valleys, and chasms, and blanks, which have been left, and can find no other vehicle for cur feelings than the words to which an Apostle himself was driven, "Oh, the depth ! The Bible's silence in regard to endorsing the absurd notions of science, which pre-vailed in ancient times is most significant. In Greek and Latin philosophy, the heavens were a solid vault over the earth. The sages of Egypt held that the world was formed by the motion of air and the upward course of flame: Plato, that it was an intelligent being: Empedocles, held that there were two suns; Leucippus, that the stars were kin-dled by their motions, and that they nour--Observer. ished the sun with their fires. All eastern nations believed that the heavenly bodies exercised a powerful influence over human affairs, often of a disastrous kind. In the Hindoo philosophy, the globe is represented as flat and triangular composed of seven stories, the whole mass being sustained upon the heads of elephants, who, when they shake themselves, cause earthquakes. Mohammed taught that the mountains were created to taught that the mountains were created to prevent the earth from moving, and to hold it as by anchors and chains. The "Fathers of the Church" themselves teach dootrine scarcely less absurd. "The rotundity of the earth is a theory," says Lactantius, "which no one is ignorant enough to believe." How instructive, that, while every ancient system of religion may be overthrown by its false physics, not one of the forty writers of the Bible, most of whom lived in the vicinity of one or other of the nations who held "these one or other of the nations who held these views, has written a single line that favors them. I like the assumption or silent recognition of God's existence at the beginning of his record. How wise was this, in comparison with what a metaphysical proof would have been, of a truth which none but a "fool" can deny, and he only "in his heart," as what he wishes, says Lord Bacon, rather than what he believes! I like to read that the Predigal though he determined, when than what he believes ' I like to read that the Predigal, though he determined, when he was in a far country, to say to his father. "Make me as one of thy hired servants," yet did not mention his refusal to expect a child's portion and place when embraced by his welcoming parent. Why? Because from this apparently fortuitous omission, "we may learn wherein the true growth in faith and in humility consists how he that cimens have been disentombed. Such, for example, is an Egyptian harp found in Thebes, with its strings yet perfect enough to vibrate again after a silence of 3,000 years. The most recent investigations prove that the parent of all musical science was Assyria. From the Assyrians, the Hebrews and the Egyptians, and indeed all Eastern nations, derived their knowledge of music. The unveiled monuments show that in the time of Sennacherib music was a highly cultured art, and must have existed through generations. This polished nation used a harp of twenty-one strings, which accompanied minstrel songs or was borne in the dance. The lyre of tortoise shell, the double pipe, the trumpet drum, and bell were common. Even of the bagpipe representations have been discovered, though none of stringed instruments, like the violin, played with abow.

In delineations of social or worshiping assemblies, musical instruments very like our modern ones have a prominent place. The Hebrew music at the time of the Exodus was purely Egyptian; but it was much modified subse-quently by association with the Asiatic nations. In the Temple of Jerusalem, according to the Talmud, stood a powerful organ, consisting of a windchest with ten holes containing ten pipes, each pipe capable of emitting ten lifterent sounds by means of finger holes, so that a hundred sounds could be produced by it. It was provided with two pairs of bellows, and ten keys, so that it could be played with the fingers. According to the Rabbins, it could be heard a great distance from the Temple.

The Great Panic in Sacramento. Sacramento city was kept in a state of alarm all the night of Sunday, January 21. Some small leaks had been discovered in the levee near Smith's Gardens, made by gophers (animals about thesize of large rats, which are very troublesome to farmers) and also by squirrels and rabbits. A party of men were engaged in repairing the mischief, who found it necessary to send to the centre of the town for gunny sacks, at 11 P. M. As the river was very high and there was danger of the levee giving way, it was given out at dark that should such an event take place the alarm would be given by ringing place the alarm would be given by ringing-the fire bells. The arrival of the messenger was the signal for a most unparalleled panic. The bells rang and lanterns were soon seen flying about the streets, and ax cited mon and women were shouting and screaming: "Turn out," "Save your-eelves," "The levee is broken," "The water is coming in." All hands, house-keepers and merchants, flew to packing up their goods and removing them to the second stories as rapidly as possible. In second stories as rapidly as possible. In about an hour, no water making its appear-ance, the alarm subsided, but the bells soon rang again and sounded at intervals until morning. The river did not get into the city, and fell in a day or two so that the danger was past. The American river is on the post of the factor. the north of the city; and its current at one point is almost squarely against the north-ern levee. The Sacramento river, on the west, gives but little trouble. At times of high water the people of that city are in dread lest some bad characters should cut the levee honing to characters should cut "we may learn wherein the true growth in faith and in humility consists, how he that has grown in these can endure to be fully and freely blest, to accept all even when he most strongly feels that he has forfeited all, that only pride and the surviving workings of self righteousness and evil stand in the way of reclaiming every blessing which the
