BUSINESS NOTICES.

THE SENSIBLE MERCHANT. "I want a clerk, you want a place,

But tell me, to begin,
Have you a horse of first-class pace,
A diamond ring and pin,
And lots of clothes? For, if you've not,
These things must from my 'till be get.' "I need no horse," the youth replied,
"No diamond rings at all;

And little outlay will provide Good clothes from Tower Hall." Our stock of Clothing is the largest and most o this city, surpassed by none in material, style and and sold at prices guaranteed lower than the lowest.

CHEAP COAL. The act incorporating the Manufacturers' and Consumers' Anthracite Railroad Company, which passed the House on Thursday, and was introduced into the Senate by Mr. Connell with a few well timed and practical remarks, bids fair to become a law. It is upon itsthird reading, and will be taken up on Tuesday next. Many years have elapsed since any railroad measure has been brought before the Legislature of Pennsylvania which, when consummated, will inure more to the advantage of Philadelphia, to the counties contiguous, and, indeed, to the coal region to be reached by its iron arms. As a competitor with the Ph and Reading and the Schuylkill Navigation Company, which two companies now form really one line of transportatation, so far as concert of action in rates is concerned, the results must necessarily be reduced prices for transportation, and, therefore, cheap coal; for while the Philadelphia and Reading Company has been charging on coal four cents per ton per mile, on descending grades, the rates of the Manufacturers' and Consumers' Company are fixed by the act of its incorporation at a maximum of two and onehalf cents per ton per mile. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company carries the gas coal from Westmoreland county to Philadelphia, over the heavy grades of the Allegheny mountains, at two cents per ton per mile, and surely, if "soft coal for the East" can be carried at this sum and under such circumstances for a distance of 340 miles, why cannot hard coal for the same point be carried over the descending grades of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad for 90 miles equally as cheap. The nett profits of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad for 1864 and 1865 amounted to $9,000.000. a sum more than sufficient to build and equip a good single track from Philadelphia to the Schuylkill coal fields: while the income returns of the coal operators show enormous gains, which a wholesome competition of routes to a market would have diminished to a fair and legitimate profitupon the capital invested. and to that extent benefitted not only every private family, but every manufacturer and consumer, whose profits are to a great extent determined by the price he pays for his coal. Philadelphia has more capital invested in her industrial enterprises, with a larger number of operatives, than any city in the Union, and the iron threads of a single railroad are too slender a security upon which to rest the moving power of this prosperity. And it must not be forgotten that the threads of that single line are chiefly owned and entirely managed by British capital, always inimical to our great American system of home protection, and which, in a recent article, we asserted might be as destructive of our manufacturing prosperity by controlling our railroad policy and rates, as by controlling the law making power of Congress. Will our Legislature and manufacturers make a note of this?

Suppose the city of Pittsburgh, with its vast and unequalled deposits of coal. dependent upon a single line of railroad to furnish the fuel to her people, and to her furnaces and factories, and that road owned and managed by interests rival or hostile to her own. Her situation would be rather precarious. Nature. however, has given her the Youghiogheny, Monongahela and Ohio riversgreat water highways, improved by the hand of man-while no less than five lines of railway add to these their capacity, and help to pour into her lap, at all seasons of the year, the life of her power and wealth. While we cannot hope for all these advantages to Philadelphia, we may at least look forward to a new line to the Schuylkill coal fields, and coal at cheaper prices than those heretofore prevailed. Let the bill pass.

THE FRIGHT IN CANADA. St. Patrick's Day has come and gone, and Canada has not suffered from an invasion or an insurrection. But such a terribly scared people and government were hardly ever known, as the people and government of Canada. They have, so say the telegraphic reports, got over their fright, and some of them must be a little disappointed that they have had no disturbances. They have been recruiting, drilling and arming by thousands, and all against a phantom foe. The Fenians have fooled them most completely, by making them believe that they were going to move on the Canadian lines on St. Patrick's day-They scared all the British provinces so that they are hurrying to adopt the confederation scheme, and that which diplomacy, argument and politics could not accomplish, bids fair to be effected suddenly as a measure of common defence against an imaginary army. This will make one of the most laughable pages in the political history of Her Mājesty's American possessions. The smartest, as well as the most prudent thing the Fenians have done, was this refraining from a movement on St. Patrick's Day. It has "sold" the authorities badly, and made them a laughing stock. But at the same time it has shown that the leaders of the Fenians havesenseenough not to advertise all their movements, with their dates and other circumstances, beforehand. The fright through which the provinces have passed shows that they are weak and vulnerable, and that they are conscious of it. When we remember how the Canadian journals first laughed at our rebellion, jeered us about nobody being hurt at Fort Sumter, and then when the war became formidable, rejoiced at every one of our discomfitures, and exulted over the disruption of the republic as being complete and irretrievable, we cannot feel a particle of sympathy for them in their present trouble, and as our turn has come, we can afford to laugh at them.
