WASHINGTON, March 17th, House.—The proceedings of the House were confined to general debate in Committee of the Whole on the President's Annual Messuage. Mr. Hill (Ind.) addressed the House on the question of reconstruction. He deemed it of no practical importance to discuss the point whether the States that went into secession and war were or were not out of the Haion. The government of these States Union. The governments of those States were certainly impaired and were not during the war in relations with the general government. Those relations had to be restored now. The President's power in the matter could only be the war power, and that could not be held to extend to the restoration of civil and political rights. It therefore devolved upon the legislative de-partment of the government to restore the partment of the government to restore the impaired or deranged functions of the rebel States, and the duty of considering and devising the best means of doing so had been intrusted by Congress to a joint committee of both houses. He had still some hope that that committee would recommend, and that Congress would adopt, such, a system as would reestablish the relations of the speeded States with the general government. secoded States with the general government in a way that would harmonize the whole country, and maintain the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. Dumont (Ind.) next addressed the House, reviewing, in a humorous and sarcastic style, the reconstruction policy of the President He prayed God to bless the President for what he had done, and to stiffen his backbone against backing down. The President had been faithful in the past, and he trusted that he would not be faith-less in the future. As to the President's policy, he deemed it unwise, ruinous and disastrous, and protested that he entertained no feeling of revenge against the South, and would exact nothing with a view of its hu-miliation. Before the Southern States could get into Congress, by his consent, they would come up to all reasonable requirements, and send Representatives who were loyal, and who could take the iron-clad oath

Mr. Anderson (Mo.) was the next speaker, and he also took ground against the President's reconstruction policy. In regard to the status of the freedmen, he declared that he never would yield to the dociring that they were not entitled to the best protection of the government. He believed they were now citizens of the United States. The Constitution was to be inter-States: The Constitution was to be interpreted to-day from the stand-point of freedom, and not of slavery. He did not believe that a Freedmen's Bureau bill was broad enough to build a political platform upon, nor did he think that the Democratic party could make a successful race on the Presi-dent's veto. Both platforms were on too narrow a gauge for the American people to stand upon. The great, the living, the vital stand upon. The great, the living, the vital question of the hour, was the extension of suffrage to the negro in the Southern States, with a view to the negro's own protection and to the maintenance of the loyal supremacy of the Union. He declared himself in favor of restricted negro suffrage in the Southern States. The Speaker presented a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a statement of the amount now in the United States Treasury, including all sums in the hands of assistant treasurers, national banks, and all other depositories, in answer to a resolution of the House of the 5th instant. Laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

The available balance in the Treasury on the 10th instant was as follows: Coin, $57,799.921; currency, $65,623,954. Total, $123,423,875, of which sum twenty-one million was on deposit in national banks. Ad-

The 22d of February at Rome. ROME, Feb. 23, 1866.—Please say to your readers that while amidst the treasures and enjoyments of this great city, and so far away from our homes, we Americans do not forget to celebrate this eyer to be remembered anniversary. At twelve o'clock, in the Galleria Dantesca, Stamperia Camerale, two hundred and five loyal ladies and gentlemen assembled at a déjeuner to give extiemen assembled at a dejenner to give expression to their feelings of reverence to the dead, as well as to unite in hearty joyful thanks that freedom has been effectually established, and that the good old flag, in peace and all its beauty, now floats over our beloved land. The hall is spacious and beautiful. The repast was elegant and sumptuous, while a profusion of fresh and choicest flowers perfumed sion of fresh and choicest flowers perfumed sion of fresh and choicest howers perfumed the atmosphere deliciously. Ex-President King, of Columbia College, presided, with a grace and dignity befitting the occasion, and gave additional life to the party by his appropriate and felicitous introductory remarks. In responding to the toast of "President Johnson" our United States Minister King, made an eloquent speech, warming every loyal heart present. Mr. William W. Story, the artist, long resident here, next portrayed the beautiful character of Pope Pius IX., showing him to be a man of real piety, doing much in works of charity, a friend to America, and a thorough enemy to slavery. Rev. Charles T. Brooks, of Rhode Island, recited a beautiful poem of his own composition. General Bartlett was most happy in a Bartlett was most happy in a short but most spirited reply to the "Army and Navy." Several other persons made appropriate and most acceptable speeches, but the most soul-stirring and eloquent was from the Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Philadelphia, who, like the old Roman orators, by his warm patriotism, choice language, original thought and rushing eloquence, completely chained every hearer. The party was a very happy one. Every one seemed proud of our country—proud of being an American—and proud that freedom has been established throughout our land. At son retired contented and happy. Stone Circles in Arabia. A "Narrative of a Year's Journey through Central and Eastern Arabia" from the pen of William Gifford Palgrave, has been recently published by

31 o'clock the party separted, and judging by the bright faces around me, and words of warm approval greeting my ear from every quarter, it was evident that each per-

Macmillan & Co., of London.
Mr. Palgrave was educated at Oxford for the ministry of the Church of England, but his High Church convictions prevented him from taking orders. He joined the Jesuits, and while connected with them traversed Central Arabia, a country of which very little was known. Returning to England he abandoned the Church of Rome, and avowed himself a Protestant. He is a remarkable man, an accomplished scholar, a brilliant writer, and one of the foremost rising young men of England. Mr. Palgrave found in Arabia one of the remarkable circles of unknown stones, of which a familiar and extraordinary example is furnished by Stone henge, and whicy have been a wonder to the archæologist and a puzzle to all. These circles are found not only in England, but in the west of France, and seen in Northern Africa. The cromlechs, which seem to be allied to them, hove been discovered in the country beyond Jordan. There is not a scrap of historical testimony as to what age, by what race, or for what object they were erected. Antiquarians lean to the supposition that they were set up by worshipers of the heavenly bodies. In the very heart of Arabia, Mr. Palgrave saw before him a monument of this kind. This is his account of it. "Hardly had we descended the narrow path, where it winds from ledge to

THE DAILY EVENING BULLETIN: PHILADELPHIA, MONDAY, MARCH 19 1866. pefore us several huge stones like enormous bowlders, placed endways perpendicularly on the soil, while some of them yet upheld similar masses laid transversely over their summit. They were arranged in a curve, once forming part, it would appear, of a large circle; and many other like fragments lay rolled on the ground at a moderate distance; the number of those still upright was, to speak by memory, eight or nine. Two, at about ten or twelve feet apart one from the other, and resembling huge gate posts, yet bore their horizontal lintel, a long block laid across them; a fe w were deprived of their upper traverse, the rest supported each its head piece, in defiance of time and the more destructive efforts of man. So nicely balanced did one of these cross-bars appear, that, in hope it might prove a rocking stone, I guided my camel right under it, and then stretching up my riding stick at arm's length, could just manage to to touch and push it, but it did not stir. Meanwhile the respective heights of camel, rider and stick taken together. would place the stone in question full ifteen feet from the ground. These blocks seem, by their quality, to have been heaved from the neighboring lime-cliff, and roughly shaped, but present no further trace of art, no groove or cavity of sacrificial import, much less anything intended for figure or ornament. The people of the country attribute their erection to Da-rim and by his own hands the sealing rim, and by his own hands, too, seeing that he was a giant; perhaps also for some magical ceremony, since he was a magician. Pointing towards Rass, our companions affirmed that a second and similar stone-circle, also of gigantic di-mensions, existed there; and lastly, they mentioned a third towards the south west, on the confines of Hejaz. That the object of these strange constructions was in some measure religious, seems to me hardly doubtful; and if the learned conjectures that would discover a plane-tary symbolism in Stonehenge and Carnac have any real foundation, this Arabian monument, erected in a land where the heavenly bodies are known to have been once venerated, may make a like claim; in fact there is little difference between the stone wonder of Kasseem and that of Somersetshire, except that the one is in Arabia, the other, though the more perfect, in England." They who are at home in Arabian mythology tell us that Darim, to whom the Arabians refer their Stonehenge, probably lived not more than eight or nine centuries ago, and is commemorated as the restorer of the planetary, or Sabean worship. But these ruins are, probably, much more ancient, whatever may have been their relation to the worship restored by Darim.—Christ. Intelligencer.

Society in Chile.

A writer in Macmillan's Magazine gives the following account of society in Chile-a country which is now attracting an unusual share of attention: •

"Education is making progress in Chile under the fostering care of an enlighted government. The population of the country is about 1,500,000, and the attendance at all schools, public and private, is about 50,000. A much larger number of persons can read, however, Roman Catholic clergy do almost nothing in the way of promoting educa-tional efforts. Indeed, where there is the faintest odor of heresy about the educational exertions of foreigners, a note of warning is instantly and loudly sounded by the church; but as, in the English and German academies in the larger towns, a better education is pro-vided than can be obtained elsewhere, these warnings are not greatly heeded by intelligent parents.

"The better class in Chile are tolerably well educated. In Santiago there isa respectable university, an institute or high school, and a theological seminary-the last being in the hands of the Jesuits or Ultramontanes, and designed to prepare a priesthood for the service of the national church. It is poorly at-tended, and throughout the country the altar is a great measure served by Spanish, French, Italian and Irish priests. The university is chiefly devoted to the study of law and medicine. A high classical or mathematical curriculum is not insisted on, nor, we apprehend, is it obtainable. The rector of the University, Don Andres Bello, is a fine old man, now nearly 90 years of age, a scholar of some eminence, a poet, and once an able diplomatist. Venezuelian by birth he followed his celebrated countryman, Bolivar, and during the wars of independence was resident in Europe as Secretary to the representatives of some of the rebellious provinces, then embryo republics. He has lived to see the honorable labors of his ardent youth largely repaid in the advancing civilization of the majority of the South American States. 'Bello's Commentary on Public Law' is known and appreciated wherever the Spanish language is spoken. His Latin Grammar is also an admira-

"Amongst the women of Chile, education is not so well attended to, nor so widely disseminated, as amongst the In the art of writing the fair sex is particularly deficient, the epistles of a Chilean lady, as compared with the notes of an accomplished English woman, being like the productions of a country servant girl. There is, how-ever, no lack of polish and refinement of manners amongst the better families in the Chilean capital. Music is very generally studied, and many of the young ladies render the operas of Verdi and Bellini with a power and skill rarely found in non-professional circles. "The Chileans are frank, accessible, courteous and hospitable. The unaffected kindness which one meets with. especially at their estates or haciendas makes a lasting and most favorable impression. In the cities there is, perhaps, less outward expression of hospitality.

A foreigner is very rarely invited to dine, and is seldom asked to stay at his friend's house in the city—but in the country it is entirely different. Every country it is entirely different. Every-thing is there placed at the guest's disposal, and his comfort is studied in every possible way-all with the most hearty and sincere good will.

"In the cities the evening is devoted to visiting. Unless one is on terms of very great intimacy, a visit during the day is as unacceptable as it would be unlessed for the control of the control unlooked for. The evening tirtulia, with its pleasant gossip, is an agreeable recreation. The round tea-table is an institution in Chile, and English folks edge down to the bottom, when we saw I on visiting terms at native houses are not reduced to syrups or eau sucre."

OUTRAGES ON FREEDMEN.—Gen. Howard received a communication from Centreville, Queen Anne's county, Md., dated March 13 1866, informing him of outrages committee by gangs of rowdles in that vicinity on colored people. The writer states that re-turned colored soldiers are waylaid and beaten, and the guns which the Governmen permitted them to keep are taken from them. On the 7th inst, the teacher of a colored school was attacked and beaten. He finally succeeded in breaking away from his assailants, and ran, pursued by the rowdies, who shot at him. On last Sunday night, about eleven o'clock, two men on horseback, came to the colored church in which is held the colored school, and burned it to the ground. The teacher of the school is Mr. J. W. Cromwell, brother of Mr. Levi Cromwell, the, proprietor of a well-known restaurant in Philadelphia. We have been furnished with a copy of a private letter in which he gives an account of the outrage.

During late years the public have been misted by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarraparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no currative-properties whatever. Hence, bitter disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound "Sarsaparilla," and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. We think we have reason to believe, it is by far the most effectual purifier of the blood yet discovered by any body.
