THE FIVE POINTS.
Of that chaste, retired spot, the Five Points of New York, The people and newspapers frequently talk, But we wish now to tell you of five points that are To be seen radiating from PERRY's bright "STAR." As regards Durability, that is the first. For lew ever knew the Star's garments to burst; And regarding the next, which is Fashion, 'you know You are sure to obtain it from Perry & Co. The two points of FINISH and STYLE all can see Carried out by this firm to the highest degree; Twin sisters of Fashion, they step in to aid To embellish the form and increase the "STAR'S"

But the last (not the least) point the "STAR" has to tell Is the grand point of cheapness, else how could it Twenty-Dollar Spring Suits, which have gained such renown

That the street corners echo it all over town. Having BOUGHT SINCE THE DECLINE, the proprie tors, of the "Star" have reduced their prices correspondingly. EVENING BULLETIN.

TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 1866.

CLEVER STOCKTON. New Jersey seems to have entered the ring, in the great popular exhibition at Washington, this season, in an entirely new and original character. Superficial people are in the habit of regarding our sister State as rather slow, backward, and almost dull; but their minds are being rapidly disabused of this error. The dry sands and bracing pine breezes of New Jersey are most favorable to the development of the keenest humor, and we have not been surprised at all, at the and the country at large have derived from the performances of the Jersey branch of the national councils. What Rogers is to the House, Stockton bids fair to be to the Senate, and with such a cast, we may be sure that the remainder of the session will be enlivened with constant sallies of wit and exhibitions of practical drollery.

Last week, as everybody knows, Mr. Stockton "voted himself a farm," in the private and select domain of his Uncle at Washington. The grave and reverend seigniors of the Senate looked on with ludicrous amazement at the unprecedented feat, while the country was tumultuously delighted with the novelty and neatness of the performance. It was like a new joke from the clown, or a new trick by our veteran friend, Signor Blitz. At a single bound, Mr. Stockton had placed himself beside the hitherto unrivalled Rogers, and older and less successful Senators looked on with illdisguised envy at the brilliant achievement. It took a couple of days for the Senate to recover its breath, and yesterday it settled down to a discussion of the status of the self-made Senator.

Mr. Sumner re-opened the question. and brought up a mass of evidence to prove the originality of Mr. Stockton's contrivance. After a lengthy debate, Mr. Stockton got the floor and at once struck an attitude as "the noblest Roman" of us all.". Mr. Stockton explained that he did not vote for himself at all. He voted for New Jersey. New Jersey was what he was after, and so far as he was personally concerned, the whole matter was one of profound indifference. In fact, he would rather not be bothered with it. He gave the Senate the fresh piece of intelligence that "eleven States are out of the Union now, and an attempt is made to put New Jersey out." The enunciation of this startling heresy, by a full-blooded Democrat like Mr. Stockton, seems to have fairly paralyzed his friends, for neither Saulsbury, Davis nor Johnson appear to have made the faintest protest against it. If this is the way Mr. Stockton is going to be a Democratic Senator,—if he means to fly in the face of his whole party, who have been demonstrating for months that the eleven States are not out of the Union, the sooner they send him home the better. But the unkindest cut of all is to say that anybody wants to put New Jersey out. We can assure Mr. Stockton that New Jersey will not be in the least "put out," if he should return to the peaceful shades of private life. "Put New Jersey out?" Why it was only last Fall that New Jersey was "restored to her practical relations to the Union," and we are all too glad to have her back to dream of putting her out again. Mr. Stockton may rest assured, that whatever may happen to the other States recently in rebellion, we shall not 'Put New Jersey out?" Not precisely. But Mr. Stockton reserved his bonnebouche, like the true artist that he is, for the last act. In the course of the debate, the idea was dropped that his vote was superfluous, after all, and that the tievote, which would otherwise have been cast, was sufficient to ensure his seat. It. was also revealed to Mr. Stockton that the unanimous consent of the Chamber was necessary to permit the withdrawal of his vote. Whereupon, he again rises, and in a burst of generous magnanimity, he offers to withdraw his vote! He did not wish to embarrass the question with personal considerations, not he. He would withdraw his vote; he would leave it to the Judiciary Committee; he would-well, in fact, he would-yes, upon the whole, he would withdraw his vote. Clever Stockton! There is but one loftier flight for his ambitious wings. If he could only contrive to get the unanimous consent of the Senate, all but his own wate, and then vote against the withdrawal himself! We believe Rogers would commit suicide, out of pure envy and despair. Try him, Mr. Stockton, just for fun.

CLAY ON THE CANADIANS. A letter written by Clement C. Clay, Jr., from St. Catharine's, C. W. November 4th, 1864, to a rebel friend, has just been made public. It refers chiefly to the rebel raiders and other miscreants who were committing outrages on the lakes and on the border. But it refers incidentally to the pending Presidential election, and says that the Democrats of the Northwest were ripe for revolution if Lincoln should be re-elected. It also says "the sympathies of nine-tenths of the Canadians are with Young (the St. Albans raider), and his men-a majority of all the newspapers justify or excuse his act as merely retaliation, and they desire only the authority of the Confederate States Government for it to resist their extradition." This is only a new confirmation of the fact that the Canadians not only sympathized with the rebels, but that they approved of the predatory bands organized in their own territory, for incursions into the United States, with intent to burn towns, rob banks, destroy railroad trains and murder defenceless citizens. Can the Canadians wonder, after this, that the people of the United States feel no pity for them in their fright about the Fenians? They jeered us in the time of our great trouble, and did all they could to help those who were trying to destroy us as a nation. We can retaliate, without violating the law of nations, by letting the Fenians go on in their work.

CLASSICAL MATINEE.-Mr. Charles H. Jarvis's Fifth Classical Matine will be given at the Foyer of the Academy, to-morrow afternoon, at four o'clock. This tine series of musical entertainments is drawing to a close, and we may therefore look for another crowded audience. The programme for tomorrow is a very choice one, and we recommend the lovers of good music not to lose this opportunity of hearing Mr. Jarvis in his admirable performance of the compositions of the best masters. Mr. Jarvis will be supported by several of the leading artists of the city.

THE AMERICAN ANTI-INCRUSTATOR,-There are daily new proofs of the value of this remarkable invention for freeing steam boilers from incrustation. In another column, to-day, will be found a letter from Messrs. Morgan, Orr & Co., showing the effect of it in a boiler of theirs. Every steamboiler in the country should have one of these simple and ingenious contrivances in-St. MARTIN'S EVE .- We are in receipt of an advance copy of Mrs. Wood's new and fascinating romance, "St. Martin's Eve." It is written in the interesting style of her earliest works, and deserves a fuller notice than we can give to-day. It will be pub lished to-morrow.

This Story is as much out of the ordinary way, as the title of it. With a skillful hand the artist has wo-ven his many hued materials into a curious web, as unlike the common as a brilliant Persian carpet is unlike a dull Kidderminster. The social life of a young proud, ambitious, penniless girl. is the warp, and the Bohemian life of a young journalist, whom she married to everybody's surprise (and his own) is the woof of this tapestry. How they met, and loved, and didn't love; and how the old worldly. manceuvering aunt of Barbara tried to spoil her; and how the old domestic tease of a mother of Frank worried her; and how she tired and chafed in the harness of her new life, and how Frank got jealous and unjust (as men will); and how at last they met in a stronger and better love—is told with so much knowledge of human nature, and in such a vigorous, animated way that the book would greatly attract by this only. But the pic-tures of club-life and of the social life of the half-caste "men of the pen," which are scattered through it, are so admirable, so vivid, that the entire combination makes a very unusually spirited and attractive book.
