DEATH OF A MURDERER,

Christian Berger Found Dead in His Cell.

The Gallows Anticipated.

The Cause of Death Unknown,

HISTORY OF THE CASE. This morning Christian Berger, the mur-derer of Miss Mary L. Watts, at Germantown, in January last, was found dead in his cell in Moyamensing Prison. The exeoution of the prisoner was to have taken place on the 27th of the coming month (April), and preparations for the solemn event were already in progress. Since his conviction the condemned man has fre conviction the condenned maner and quently acted in a strangely flippant and inconsistent manner. When visited by inconsistent manner. When visited by clergymen he seemed deeply impressed with the awful solemnity of his situation, and he would enter into the spirit of religious exercises with much apparent earnestness and sincerity. But their backs were no sooner turned than he would bandy obscene jests with the prisoners who would come within hearing of his cell window, and tell coarse vulgar stories to those who would listen to Within a few days he seemed to have undergone a change for the better; he seemed more serious and thoughtful and to have a more complete realization of the terrible situation in which he was placed. Strangely, his appetite increased as the time fixed for his execution grew nearer, and within a few days he asked for and obtained a double daily allowance of meat. Yesterday morning he complained of being unwell, and Dr. Clapp, the resident physician at the prison, administered a dose of castor oil. Last evening Dr. Clapp opened the door of the cell and saw the condemned sitting upon a chair. He spoke to him and at first received no answer, but upon again repeating "Berger!" the prisoner turned around and said, "Oh! is that you, Doctor? I didn't know you at first."

The Doctor then asked him how he felt, and he replied that he felt much better since he had taken the oil. The Doctor then closed the call door and left him, and that was the last seen of the deceased alive.

This morning, about half-past eight o'clock, the cell door was opened and the keeper upon entering the apartment found Berger lying upon the bed in his ordinary clothing. He was quite dead although the body was still warm. Dr. Clapp was at once summoned, but the deceased was be yond his aid. The doctor is under the belief that death resulted from natural causes The deceased has had none but official visitors since Monday last.

Word was immediately sent to Sheriff Howell, and that official proceeded to the prison without delay. He directed that the most searching scrutiny should be made into the circumstances, and Coroner Taylor will carefully investigate every circumstance calculated to throw light upon the nnexpected event. The Coroner will order a post mortem examination of the body, to be be made before he proceeds with the examination of witnesses, and if the gallows has been cheated of its victim through human content has feet will be made with the examination of which we will be made with the examination of which we will be made with the examination of with the examina man agency, the fact will be made manifest, This is the second death that has occurred in the prison under somewhat similar circumstances. David Gregory, convicted of the murder of Stephen Viera, died from sick-ness, just at the time fixed for an execution from which he had been respited.

HISTORY OF BERGER'S CRIME. The crime for which Berger was con-demned to suffer was committed on Satura day morning the sixth of January, 1866. The victim was an old lady named Miss Mary L. Watts, who lived on Queen street, Germantown. The object of the murderer was plunder. The murder was discovered was plunder. The murder was discovered shortly after seven o'clock in the morning. No weapon could be found, and the only matter to work upon were the tracks in the snow, which indicated that the fiend had fied across the fields into Green street, and there all traces were lost. No person witnessed the flight of the criminal. Therefore the Berger and he was taken into custody by Sergeant Dickinson, Berger had resided in Germantown about a year. He was never known to be engaged in any employment, and how the man managed to support him-self and family was a mystery to his neigh-bors. For some days previous to the murder he had been seen several times, about half-past six o'clock in the morning, lurking about the corner of Germantown avenue and Queen streets, apparently waiting for a car. On one or two occasions he got into a car, and on another, in reply to a question, he said he was waiting for a conductor with whom he was acquainted as he had no money. On the day of the murder it was ascertained that he had "made a raise" somewhere, and that led to his arrest. His house was searched but no weapon could be found, and there was nothing to show that he had been implicated in the affair. Detective Taggart had several interviews with Berger after his arrest and the vague and conflicting stories which he told soon satisfied the officers that they had the right man. On one of his boots blood was found. This he said was caused by kicking a piece of meat or liver in a grocery store. The

This he said was caused by kicking a piece of meat or liver in a grocery store. The proprietor of the store stated, however, that he had seen nothing of any such man, and he could not find any meat or liver about his place, as represented by Berger.

When arrested, about fifty dollars were found on the person of Berger, and he had previously redeemed a couple of silver coins which he had left at a grocery store. This money he said he had received from a man whe had owed it to him about a year. man who had owed it to him about a year, and when he left homeon Saturday morning about half-past six o'clock he told his wife that he was going to town to see a man who owed him fifty dollars. No confirmation of this story could be obtained by the officers, and Berger finally acknowledged that it was

The next explanation in regard to the money was that he had committed a highway robbery about a year previous. He said that he had got about fifty dollars, and that he had hidden the money in the stone work of the Germantown railroad bridge, over Shoemekar's large and that the me over Shoemaker's lane, and that the ma sons had built up over it. On Saturday morning he went down to the bridge, found some of the stones loosened, and then got his money. This matter was soon settled by an examination of the bridge. There were neither loose stones nor a convenient place where money could be hidden. Other stories were told by the prisoner, and after they had been investigated, he would acknowledge that they were lies.

After several interviews, Berger admitted that he had been to the house on the morning of the murder, that he had been admitted by Miss Watts, that he had struck the old lady, and that he had made those tracks across the lot in the rear of the premises. While up stairs, ransacking, he says, he heard a knock on the door and looked out. He saw that it was a boy and came down. He saw that it was a boy, and came down stairs and locked the door. Then he left by the back door. He said he was desperate, and remarked that if he had cut the throat of Miss Watts, he didn't remember anything about it. His grocer had threatened to stop his supplies if not paid, and the nurse in attendance upon his wife, who had just been confined about two weeks before, was about to leave because she had not re-

Finally the bloody razor was found in a field, where Berger said he had thrown it, and the links in the chain of evidence against him was complete. He had watched the him were complete. He had watched the house of Miss Watts until an old lady who lived with her had gone out in the morning, he then entered the place, out the throat of his helpless victim, robbed her of her little treasure, and escaped over the fields by the back way. He returned to Germantown after an absence of a few hours, and chatted unconcernedly with several tradesmen about the murder, while paying them little bills with the money that he had stolen from the house of the poor old lady whose tragic fate was causing so profound a sensation. When arrested in the evening, he was taking a quiet

On the trial of Berger the confessions made by him were excluded by the rules of evidence, but the chain of circumstantial evidence was so complete that the jury had no difficulty in finding a verdict of murder of the first degree. He was convicted on the 2d of February, sentenced soon after to be hanged, and on the 20th of March his death warrant, fixing Friday, the 27th of April, for his execution, was read to him by Sheriff Howell. His only reply to the reading of the awful document was: "My only hope now is in Jesus."

We have already described the conduct of the condemned between the time of the reading of the death warrant and his unex-

WHO BERGER WAS. WHO BERGER WAS.

Berger was of German descent and was about 21 years of age. His father is engaged at the Reading Railroad coal wharves at Port Richmond, and had offered him employment, but he declined it. About lifteen months ago he married a very respectable young lady of Frankford, and his motheringlay desired that he should live with her n-law desired that he should live with her so that he would be under no expenses for so that he would be tilder no expenses lot household purposes. At the time of his marriage he received a present of $500 from his father. This sum and a weekly stipend which his wife made by tailoring, were all spent by him, and since her marriage, all the wife received was two pairs of shoes. The deceased was a coarse, vulgar looking man with a cruel expression of countenance, and a sensual smirk about his eye and lips that denoted his real character. He has gone to his final account with a terri-ble crime upon his soul, and the gallows has never been cheated of a vtctim who more richly deserved the doom meted out to him by the outraged law.

SERIOUS AFFAIR IN THE TWENTY-FOURTH WARD-A MAN STABBED AND POLICEMEN BEATEN.—John P. Welsh was seriously stabled yesterday, in a house on Budd street, Forty-second street, below Lancaster avenue. The house is owned by Edward Devlin, and is occupied by a man named Smith. Mr. Smith asked Welsh to help him remove a bureau through the second story window. Devlin came along and remonstrated with Welsh about the manner of removal. A difficulty ensued, and Devlin is alleged to have drawn a knife and in-flicted three stabs upon Welsh, in the nose arm and groin. The latter wound is be-lieved to be dangerous. Welsh bled freely, and was conveyed to his home on Budd street.

Officer Shaffer then went into the house to arrest Devlin, when he was set upon by par-ties and was pretty roughly handled. Clubs, batchets and other missiles were used. Prominent among the assailants was Mrs. Devlin, who seized the officer by the back

Devin, who seized the officer by the back of the neck and thus prevented him from fully righting his assailants. During the wrangle the officer lost his badge.

Officer Geddes then went to the assistance of Shaffer and the attack was renewed. Devlin still had in his hand the knife with which he had used on Shaffer. One man ran at Geddes with a hatchet, but was knocked senseless by a blow from the policeman's billy. After a severe fight the officers succeeded in securing Devlin and his wife. Devlin had then thrown away his knife. The prisoners were arraigned before Alderman Allen this morning and were committed to prison.

COURTS. The Fairmount Park Case.

The Fairmount Park Case.

Common Pleas-Judges Allison and Peirce, This morning the Court was engaged with exceptions to the award of damages in Road Cases, &c. About noon the matter of the addition to the Fairmount Park was called, and Mr. Brewster, City Solicitor, filed additional exceptions to the sward of the jury, and then moved for the appointment of an Examiner to take testimony in support of he exceptions.

The property owners we e represented by W. L. Hirst, P. Morris, Chas, E. Lex, M. J. Mitcheson, W. W. Juvenal, Richard Ashurat, Jos. Townsend, Samnel Hood and J. Sergeant Price.

Messrs, Juvenal, Hirst, Mitcheson and Morris addressed the Couat with reference to the appointment of the examiner, suggesting the arrangement of details, as well as an order that would require the examiner to report within a fixed time. The intustice to the property owners, who were kept out of their premises or prevented from improving them, was referred to, by the several counsel.

Judge Allison said the question was one of great importance, not only to the proposed owners, but also to the city of Philadelphia, and it was desirable that it should be decided as soon as possible. The Court of the property of the several awards. When the Court ahould be convinced of the correctness of the several awards. When the Court is aked to impose upon the city a burden of nearly half a million of dollars it must be satisfied by proper testimony, that the award is just. This application for an examiner to take sestimony met the approbation of the Court. The testimony should be taken in such a way as to give the least inconvenience to counsel and the property owner, and, therefore, the city Solicitor should give specific notics of the particular property to be affected by the testimony offered (na particular day as the time for the examiner to report the Court would not fix any.

F. C. Brewster, Esq., Solicitor and E. K. Nichols, Assistant City Solicitor appeared for the city.

lation to the death of the Hon. Solomon Foot, be communicated to the family of the deceased by the clerk.

Resolved, That this House will as a body repair to the Sanate chamber, to attend the funeral of the deceased at the hour of 1 o'clock, P. M., this day, and upon its return to the Hall, that the speaker declare the House adjourned.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Mr. Stevens (Pa.) moved that when the House adjourn to day it adjourn to meet on Monday next. The business of some of the committees had accumulated, and it was desirous that they should have these two days to perfect their business.

Mr. Morrill remarked that the adjournment would not retard the business of the House.

Mr. Abery (10hlo) moved to amend by adjourning till Saturday next.

Atter some cross-firing, the amendment was agreed to, and then Mr. Ashley moved that the proceeding, on Saturday be confined to general debate.

The Mouse then reversed its action in reference to the adjournment by reconsidering the vote on the amendment rejecting it and finally agreeing to Mr. Stevens objected.

The House then took a recess till 10 o'clock, and at that hour went in a body to the Senate chamber, preceded by the Speaker and Clerk, the members wearing crape on their left arm. Subsequent to the ceremonies, the House their left arm. Subsequent to the ceremonies.

Pennsylvania Legislature.

II ARRISBURG, March 29.

FENATE.—The Committee on Vice and Immorality, reported with a negative recommendation, the bill allowing Passenger Railway Cars to run on Sunday, and asked the adoption of a resolution declaring that the laws regarding the first day of the week, commonly called Lord's day, be left unchanged.

After considerable debate, the resolution was amended by Mr. McConnaguty so as to reset that the laws should not be altered so as to allow the running of rars on that day, and the resolution then passed, by a vote of 23 ayes to 7 nays.

Ifourse—A letter was received from Gen. Meade, regretting his inability to be present at the ceremonies incident to the visit of the of the orphans of soldiers to Harrisburg on the 16th of March.

Mr. Thomas made a personal explanation. He had stated in debate, on Wednesday evening, that in 1885, when the news of the victories had been received, the Democratic side of the House had not applanded. The statement of Grepublican members of 1865, and by an extract from the Harrisburg Telegraph of the same year.

Mr. Persbing depiced the charge on behalf of Democrats, so far as the item of the Telegraph was concerned. The same paper had twice asserted that Democratic, members intended to reist the last inauguration of Gov. Curtin by force, and would have done so, but for the presence of the military This charge was utterly false, as was also one in reference to the silence of the Democracy when news of victory was announced.

Mr. Satterthwait then presented a written statement of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the proper of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the proper of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the officer of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the silence of the Democratic members of 1855 denyton the test of the officer of the Democratic members of 1855 Pennsylvania Legislature. announced.

Mr. Satterthwait then presented a written statement of the Democratic members of 1855 denying that their side of the House had remained silent when victories were announced.

The Speaker, in view of the personalities that had been indulged in by sundry members, positively refused to allow any further personal explanations, either by Republicans or Democrats.
