BY ALFRED NEVIN, D. D.

"Father! that book, with whose worn leaves the careless infant played, must be the Bible. Therein thy dim eyes will meet a cheering light and silent words of mercy breathed from Heaven, will be exhaled from the blest page into thy withered

Queen Elizabeth, who spent much of her time in reading the best writings of her own and former ages, has left on record the following evidences that she did not neglect the Book of God. "I walk many times in the pleasant fields of the Holy Scriptures, where I pluck the goodlisome herbs of sentences by pruning, eat them by reading, digest them by musing, and lay them up at length in the high seat of memory by gathering them together, so that, having tasted their sweetness, I may less perceive the bitterness

I ask attention to the name by which the Queen designated the venerable volume. She regarded it as consisting of "pleasant fields." There is important significance in this descriptive phrase. It was certainly possible for God to make his revelation to the race in such a form that (according to the demand of the infidel Strauss), "a man should be able to lay his finger upon a precept or a doctrine for each occurring need, and to find in one place, and under one head, all which relates to one matter." It might have been given to us as a systematic body of divinity, or as a statute-book, wit. a digest and index and accompanying it, so a digest and index and accompanying it, so that in a moment, as it were, all might be seen that it contains, touching any of its credenda and agenda or its articles of faith and its rules of practice.

But suppose this arrangement had been adopted, would it have carried with it any advantage to us? Think for a moment How much more pleasant is it to wander over a broad and beautiful field, with its praceful undulations, its alternate lights over a broad and beautiful field, with its graceful undulations, its alternate lights and shades, and its freshly growing plants with the dew upon their leaves and the mould about their roots, than to walk in the straight, hard, level and narrow pathof a garden, which is entirely the product of constant labor and forced culture! How much less agreeable to traverse such a confined and stiff enclosure, all of which falls under the eye at a single glance, leaving no variety to delight, and no discoving no variety to delight, and no discoveries to be made as the step, advances, than to pass over an expanded territory, on which the systematizing influence of art has not yet been brought to bear, with heights and valleys, forests and streams on the right and left of our path, and close about us, full of concealed wonders and choice treasures!

Now, this is the manner in which the Scriptures have been given to us, and it is impossible not to perceive the wisdom which it indicates. As thus before us, these holy oracles constitute an abiding stimulus to research, and an unfailing source of variety and interest. "It is only,"
says one, "when our energies are roused, and our attention awake, when we are acand our attention awake, when we are acquiring, or correcting, or improving our knowledge, that knowledge makes the requisite impression upon us. God has not made Scripture like a garden, "where the fruits are ripe, and the flowers bloom, and all things are fully exposed to our view. all things are fully exposed to our view. but like a field, where we have the ground, and seed of all precious thing, but where nothing can be brought to view without our industry, nor then, without the dews of heavenly grace,"

"I find in the Bible," says Cecil, "a grand peculiarity, that seems to say to all who at-tempt to systematize it, I am not of your mind I stand alone. The great and the wise shall never exhaust my treasures: by figures and parables I will come down to the feelings and understandings of the ignorant. Leave me as I am, but study me

This is a true view of the Bible. It is so thing new. It cannot be disposed of at one reading. It demands a vigorous exercise of the understanding. No man that has ever lived could be said to have read it through. Many, indeed, have perused its pages from beginning to end, but these have always been the first to admit that it required, and would bear, perusal again and again, and that the more more study it the perusal state of the stat that the more men study it, the more they will be amazed at its wonderful depths, and attracted with its magnificent heapties

The learned Le Clerc tells us, that while he was compiling his Harmony, he was so he was compiling his Harmony, he was so struck with admiration of the excellent discourses of Jesus, and so inflamed with the love of his most holy doctrine, that he had but just begun to be acquainted with what he scarcely ever laid out of his hands from infancy. During the time that Dr. Kennicott was employed on his Polyglot Bible, it was the constant office of his wife, in their deily sirings to read to him these in their daily airings, to read to him those different portions to which his immediate attention was called. When preparing for their ride the day after this great work was completed, upon her asking him what book she would take, "Oh!" exclaimed he, "let us begin the Bible!"

"The fairest productions of human wit," remarks Bishon Horne. "after a few per ramarks Bishop Horne, "after a few perusals, like gathered flowers, wither in our hands, and lose their fragrancy, but these unfading plants of Paradise become, as we are accustomed to them, still more and more autiful, their bloom appears to be doubly heightened, fresh odors are emitted, and new sweets extracted from them. He who hath once tasted their excellencies, will desire to taste them again, and he who tastes them oftenest will relish them best."

"I know not a better rule of reading the Scriptures," says John Newton, "than to read it through from beginning to end, and when we have finished it once, to begin it again. We shall meet with many passages which we can make little improvement of, but not so many in the second reading as in the first, and fewer in the third than in the second."

"The Bible," says an eminent divine "resembles an extensive garden, where there is a vast variety and profusion of fruits and flowers, some of which are more essential, or more splendid than others, but there is not a blade suffered to grow in it, which has not its use and beauty in the system. Salvation for sinners is the grand truth presented everywhere, and in all points of light, but the pure in heart sees a thousand traits of the Divine character, of himself, and of the world in the sees a thousand traits of the problem. and of the world, some striking and bold, others cast, as it were into the shade, and designed to be searched for and examined."

'A man's love of Scripture at the beginning of a religious course," remarked Dr. Arnold, "is such as makes the praises which older Christians give to the Bible seem exaggerated, but, after twenty or thirty years of a religious life, such praise always sounds inadequate. Its glories seem so much more full than they seemed at first."

And this experience of the inexhaustibleness of the Bible, let it be noted, was not confined to the persons just named. Ten thousand witnesses there have been, and there are, that the love of the sacred volume grows with the perusal, the sacred volume grows with the perusal, and that it affords to the student of its pages ever-fresh delight. It is not so with other things. Interest in them is abated by repetition and familiarity. The sweetest song that minstrel ever sang upon earth, soon becomes hackneyed, and we get tired of it. The richest viands, by becoming common, lose their relish. The most beautiful land scape loses its power to inspire by being often surveyed. Most books we read, even those which are most intensely interesting and exciting, will not bear reading more than twice or thrice.

This, however, is not true of the bible. This, however, is not true of the bible.

The more we read it the more we desire to read, and the more we find to read. It still read, and the more we find to read. It still herring, in store and for sale by E. A. SOUDER & CO., Dock Street Whart.

the charm of novelty, like the great orb of day, at which we are wont to gaze with unabated astonishment from infancy to old age. After all our delving, there are yet profounder depths to be sounded, after all our soaring, there are still loftler heights to be scaled. The veteran, whose whitened locks, and wrinkled brow, and bended form, indicate that the time of his departure must be to him the absorbing thems. must be to him the absorbing theme, turns over the pages of this volume with an interest undiminished by accumulating years. The legate of the skies brings forth things The legate of the skies brings forth things new from it, as certainly as he did when commencing its exposition fifty years ago. The public assembly listened to it, when read, from year to year, with eyes fixed, and ear awake, and attention that never tires, and an interest that never clogs. "Select, if you can," says Robert Hall, "any other composition, and let it be rendered equally familiar to the mind, and see whether it will produce this effect."
