XXXIX COFGRESS -FIRST SESSION.

[CLOSE OF TESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.] SENATE .- Mr. Fessenden (Me.) called up

she bill known as the Loan bill, reporte from the Finance Committee, as it passe the House. The bill was read anew. Mr. Fessenden said the Committee of Fi nance had come to the conclusion, after careful examination, that the bill was well enough as it stood, and therefore they had suggested no amendment.

Mr. Sherman regretted very much that he was not able to concur in the opinion of the Finance Committee. He did not see the necessity of conferring such power upon the Secretary of the Treasury as this bill proposes. It conferred greater power than was ever conferred upon a Secretary of the Treasury. There was an impression in the public mind that the financial condition of the country was less favorable than it really was. The statement of the public debt recently published did not show an unfavorable condition. There was no portion of the public debt due until August, 1867. The Secretary of the Treasury would not be required to fund any of the public debt until August 20, 1867. The first obligations to mature were the first issue of 7-30 notes. Three hundred millions of these would mature in August, 1867. The tendency of the bill, Mr. Sherman said, was to put it into the power of the Secretary of the Treasury to contract the currency, and thus put an unnecessary strain upon the commercial world. No man ought to have this power. It ought to be left for the law alone to do so.

Every citizen had a right to know how much currency was in circulation at any time, but under this bill it would be impossible for any one but the Secretary of the Treasury to know this.

Mr. Fessenden said the only objection he had to the bill was its weakness and not its strength; that it gave too little instead of too much power to the Secretary. The only consequence he attached to the bill was that it recognized the principle that as soon as the good of the country would admit we should get back to specie payment. The effect of rejecting the bill would be to say to the country that the intention was to expand instead of to contract. He did not believe that the Secretary of the Treasury would use the power given him under this bill to the detriment of the business interests, of the country, because to do so would be to reduce the income of the Government. Mr. Chandler said that when we had a million of men in the field, and were spending seven or eight hundred millions a years, it was necessary to confer extraor-dinary powers on the Secretary of the Treasury, but now that the war was over there was no necessity for conferring that power any longer. He would like a little further time to examine the bill, but it struck him as evil, and very evil. It con-ferred power which no man ought to accept; there was no limit to the amount of speculation that could originate under the

Mr. Fessenden said only to exchange one kind of bond for another, that was all the power.
Mr. Chandler said there was power con ferred to issue forty year bonds in lieu of five year bonds. A man who was not honest, possessing power under the bill, could make more money under it than any man in this country had.

Mr. Anthony (R. I.) said that an argument drawn from present returns of internal revenue was not safe to rely upon for the future. In several articles of man for the future. In several articles of manufac-ture the receipts would fall off materially during the coming year.

Mr. Sherman replied to the argument of Mr. Fessenden. There was no necessity for passing the bill to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to meet present or accruing indebtedness. The Seven-thirties would undoubtedly be paid in five-twenties, which would postpone the payment of the principle for five years more, or for twenty, at the option of the government. He could see no object in passing the bill except to declare a policy, as Mr. Fessenden had said. Mr. Fessenden had said that the nad said. Mr. ressenden had said that the Secretary would not contract the currency, but that was his avowed policy declared in his reports. He did not think it wise to give the Secretary so much power. He (Mr. Sherman) had a hopeful view of the future, and believed that the future debt would take ever of itself. He expected to would take care of itself. He expected to go back to a specie basis, but he expected to do so without any material reduction of the currency. The entire amount of cur-rency now in circulation was $704,000,000, and he did not believe this was superabundart. No power on earth could keep gold from going down. If the Secretary of the Treasury would just keep out of the stock market, and meet indebteduess when due; the people of the United States would take care of the public debt.

Mr. Chandler (Mich.) moved to so amend the bill as to restrict the sale of bonds to this country, by striking out the word "either" and the words "or elsewhere" in the following sentence: "And also to dispose of any description of bonds authorized by said act either in the United States or elsewhere to such an amount," &c. Mr. Fessenden said there was no necessity for this amendment. The words proposed to be stricken out were in all the bills on this subject. They did not provide for a foreign loan, but simply that the Secretary of the Treasury might have the power to go to Europe to sell bonds when there was a combination against him in

Mr. Guthrie (Ky.) spoke in favor of the bill, believing it to be a wise measure, and conferring no more power on the Secretary of the Treasury than he ought to have in order to enable him to perform his duty faithfully. If he had been in the place of the Secretary of the Treasury he would have done just as the Secretary had done. The bill proposed to give no power that a faithful officer ought not to have. If the debt was to be paid, Mr. McCulloch must have latitude and discretion. He had known the Secretary of the Treasury for years as a banker, had met him in bank conventions, and had always known him as an honest,

Mr. Howe (Wis.) agreed with Mr. Fessenden as to the necessity for returning to a specie basis as soon as possible, but if it was the intention of this bill to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to sell a bond for less than its face, he was opposed to allowing the Secretary of the Treasury to peddle bonds in foreign markets. He did not believe there was any necessity for it.

Mr. Morgan said that all were agreed as to the objects of the bill, but there was a constitution as to the time, it would be expected.

question as to the time it would be expedient to commence the work proposed. seemed to him the present was a favorable time. The national debt was unprecedentedly large, and ought to be reduced. He was in favor of giving the proposed power to the Secretary of the Treasury, and of his exercising it now.

Mr. Cowan (Pa.) said he was also in favor of the bill, and could see no objection to it. It was simply a proposition to exchange short securities for long ones.

Mr. Chandler said the bill proposed to transfer more power to the Secretary of the Treasury than was every reposed in one man under this government. He agreed with Mr. Sherman, that the best thing the Secretary of the Treasury could do was to sit in his office and meet interest as it accrued, and let the national debt take care of itself. He hoped the bill would not pass, for he considered it the most dangerous bill ever presented to Congress. He did not believe any judicious financial man would accept the power contained in the bill if remembered that no free government can be conducted without reposing confidence in those in authority.

Mr. Chandler's motion to recommit was disagreed to, and the question then recurred on Mr. Chandler's motion to amend, as stated above, and it was disagreed to by the following vote—Yeas 6, nays 35. Messrs. Chandler, Howard, Howe, Norton, Sherman and Wade voted in the affirmative.

The bill was then passed—yeas 32, nays 7, as follows:

as follows: YEAS-Messrs, Anthony, Brown, Bucka-LEAS—Messrs, Anthony, Brown, Bucka-lew, Clark, Conness, Cewan, Cragin, Davis, Doolittle, Edmonds, Fessenden, Foster, Grimes, Guthrie, Harris, Johnson, Kirk-wood, Lane (Ind.), McDougall, Morgan, Morrill, Nesmith, Nye, Poland, Pomeroy, Riddle, Sumner, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Willey, Williams and Wilson—32.

NAYS-Messrs. Chandler, Howard, Howe, Norton, Ramsey, Sherman and Wade—7.

As passed by both Houses and submitted to the President, this bill is as follows: An act to amend an act entitled "an act to provide ways and means to support the government, approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled an act to provide ways and means to support the government, approved March 3, 1865, shall be extended and construed to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, to receive any treasury notes or other obligations issued under any act of Congress, whether bearing interest or not, in exchange for any description of bonds authorized by the act to which this is an amendment, and also, to dispose of any description of bonds au-thorized by said act, either in the United States or elsewhere, to such an amount, in such manner and at such sales as he may think advisable, for lawful money of the United States, or for any treasury notes, certificates of indebtedness, or certificates of deposit, or other representatives of value which have been or may be issued under any act of Congress, the proceeds thereof to be used only for retiring Treasury notes, or other obligations issued under any act of Congress, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize any increase of the public debt; Provided, that of United States notes not more than ten millions of dollars may be retired and canceled within six months from the passage of this act, and thereafter not more than four millions of dollars in any one month; And provided, further, that the act to which this is an amendment shall continue in force in all its provisions except modified by this act. Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress at the commencement of the next session the amount of exchanges made or money borrowed under this act, and of whom and on what terms and also the amount and character of indebtedness retired under this act and the act to which this is an mendment, with a detailed statement of the expense of making such loans or exchange.

Mr. Wade (Ohio) rose to a personal explanation. On Friday last, he had said in de-bate that Mr. Voorhees was at one time keeper of the records of the Knights of the Golden Circle. He had since learned such was not the fact, and he desired to retract the statement made by him on Friday.

The Senate at 3.45, adjourned. House.—In the Fourth Edition of yesterday's BULLETIN, we announced the passage of the Civil Rights bill over the President's veto, by a vote of 122 year to 41 nays. The Oil Struck in Lasalle County, Ill. [From the Ottawa Free Trader, March 31.]

There is no mistake about it. A flowing vell of oil has been struck near Unionville. on the Vermilion, about fourteen miles south of this city. Messrs. Bradford, Ewing, Moore & Vankirk have for some time past been working a coal shaft there. Their shaft is about fifty-eight feet deep. About a week ago they commenced boring through the sand rock at the bottom of their shaft to ascertain the depth below them to the second coal vein. They had gone down some 20 feet when, to their surprise, they struck oil. It came up, they think, at the rate of a barrel an hour, but as there was a good deal of water in the bottom of their shaft, it was impossible to gather the oil except as it passed through this water. So they have plugged up the bore, until they can more effectually drain the coal shaft. They are very confident, however, that they have a paying well. The oil is very pure, and in its crude state makes a very good light. As a proof that the discovery is not fallacious, it is found that the water coming up with the oil is deeply impregnated with salt, an invariable characteristic of all genuine
