EVENING BULLETIN.

TUESDAY, APRIL 10, 1866.

AN ANNIVERSARY. The EVENING BULLETIN enters, today on the twentieth year of its existence. This is one of the April anniversaries that is especially interesting to its owners. We have the satisfaction of assuring its readers that the paper was never so prosperous as it is now. Not asking for government patronage, we have relied upon the support of our liberal and enlightened citizens, and our confidence has not been misplaced. In a very short time we shall remove to the new building, No. 607 Chestnut street. where we expect to have facilities for making a much better paper.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

The votes required, in the House of Representatives, to pass the Civil Rights bill over the executive veto, were obtained yesterday, and it is now a law. President Johnson has a right to his opinion, and he may be sincere in the views he has expressed concerning the bill. But we have quite as much respect for a decision made by more than twothirds of each branch of Congress as we have for a decision of his, or of any other one man. Snmming up the individual opinions of the law-making power of the country, on the Civil Rights bill, we have the following:

For the bill Against the bill. Senate, . 33 . 122 House, Executive,

. 155 Total. There can be nothing dangerous in a measure thus sustained. On the other hand there must be a great deal that is meritorious, just and right in it. One hundred and fifty-five sworn and trustworthy members of the Government are not likely to be mistaken as to the expediency, the justice and the constitutionality of the Civil Rights bill; and while conceding to the President and the minority in Congress the right to express their opinions, we consider it a happy fact that the Constitution provides that the wishes of a majority of the people can, on extraordinary occasions, be carried out by Congress, against the individual wishes of the executive. There has now been a fair trial of strength between the President and Congress. It was not a struggle between the President and the so-called Radicals, for there are not one hundred and fifty-five Radicals in Congress. The Civil Rights bill is not a Radical measure. It confers no right of suffrage upon the negroes. It gives them throughout the country exactly such rights as they have possessed in Pennsylvania since 1838, and less than they possessed before that cona, Boyer, Dawson, Dennison, Glossyear; for it was the amended con- brenner, Randall, Strouse. Absent, that all people throughout the country shall be guaranteed such rights as all people in Pennsylvania possess. If there are defects in the law, they will be discovered on trial, and they can be removed. If it is, as the President alleges, unconstitutional, the Supreme Court will declare it so, and it will cease to be a law.

The President, from all accounts, is disposed to submit gracefully to the reversal of his decision by Congress; more gracefully, a good deal, than his suddenly converted admirers and advocates, the ex-rebels of the South and the copperheads of the North. He must see that when only one Republican in the House sides with him, the opposition cannot be regarded as factious. He cannot but have respect for the opinions of the party that elected him, expressed with such remarkable unanimity through their representatives. He had his day of triumph, in the veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill, and he made the most of it. Accounts are now squared between him and Congress, and we trust he will see that it is the part of expediency, as well as of duty, not to make himself the enemy of the legislative branch of the Government. It is to be regretted that the necessity of overruling his decision should have existed. and it is to be hoped that he will meet Congress half way, and that their action may be harmonized, so that legislation may be effected that will ensure the peace, security, prosperity, and dignity of the whole nation.

AUSTRIA AND PRUSSIA. There are the first mutterings of a war between Austria and Prussia. Each power is moving troops rapidly to its frontier, and we may hear by the very next arrival of the breaking out of hostilities. The cause of the trouble is the seizure of Schleswig-Holstein by Prussia. Austria helped to wrest the Duchies from Denmark, with the expectation that they should either be independent German states or that she should derive some political or other advantage from them. But Prussia, guided by the wiliest of living German statesmen, Herr von Bismark, has managed to appropriate them, and Austria considers herself wronged and the balance of power likely to be endangered if the grasping, ambitious disposition of Prussia is not checked.

It is possible that the intervention of France or some other power may prevent a war between Austria and Prussia, and as the peace of all Europe may depend upon it, the other powers will exert themselves in that direction. Italy would probably be soon involved in the war; for she wants Venetia, and the Venetians want to be under Victor Emmanuel. They would try to take advantage of a war between Austria and Prussia, and rise and declare for the King of Italy. Turkey and Russia would be disturbed also would have some difficulty in keeping out of the trouble. In former times such a condition of European affairs as now exists would have caused much excitement in this country. But the stupendous events that have occurred on our own soil since 1860 have made us tolerably indifferent concerning the politics of the old world. Few people have given much consideration to the Austro-Prussian controversy, and of these few, scarcely any have taken sides with either power. They are, however, rather pleased to find that the powers that despoiled Denmark are brought into trouble between themselves in consequence of the act.

THE ANNIVERSARY MONTH.

The month of April is remarkable for the number of important events connected with our national history that have occurred in it. The war of the | Swayne's rebellion began in April when the rebels in Charleston harbor fired upon the Star of the West, and it ended in April, when Grant destroyed Lee's army at Petersburg. It was in April that Richmond, the citadel of the rebellion, fell into our hands, and it was in April that the crowning tragedy, the sum of all the wickedness of the rebellion, was enacted in the murder of our President. We now have to add another marked step in our history to our April Calendar. The passage of the Civil Rights Bill by an overpowering majority of Congress, over the veto of the President, is an event worthy to be ranked with the events we have already named. Not that it should be regarded as a victory over Andrew Johnson, but because it is the first real step taken by Congress towards perfecting the noble work begun by Abraham Lincoln for the cause of humanity. It will go down to posterity, a bright jewel in the crown of the brave men of Congress who would rather be with the Right, than with the President; and few of our April anniversaries will fill more important pages in the history yet to be written of the United States, than that which marks the obliteration of the last national trace of the barbarous institution of Slavery.

THE PENNSYLVANIA VOTE. It is well to have on permanent record the position taken by our representatives in Congress, on the passage of the Civil Rights Bill. An examination of the vote shows that thirteen Pennsylvania members voted for and eight against the bill, and that three members were absent. The following is the detail of the vote:-Ayes, Baker, Broomall, Kelley, Lawrence, Mercur, Miller, Moorhead, Myers, O'Neill, Scofield, Stevens, Thayer, Wilson. Noes, Anstitution of 1838 that deprived colored Culver, Johnson, Williams. Williams men of the right to vote in this State. Who supports the bill, paired with Mr.

The Civil Rights bill simply provides | Bingham. Of the other two absentees, Culver is Republican, and Johnson Opposition.

> THE CHOLERA. A steamship crowded with 1,200 emigrant passengers, and a crew, servants, &c., numbering at least one hundred, sailed on the 28th of March from Liverpool for New York. On the sixth day out, the cholera appeared, and soon there were over one hundred and sixty cases, and over fifty deaths. The steamer put into the port of Halifax. This overcrowding of emigrant vessels, at a period when cholera is known to be in the atmosphere, is sure to develop the disease and carry it to this country. Our Government should take some steps to prevent it. A visitation of the cholera may be inevitable, but it may be postponed and greatly mitigated by wise precautionary measures. The authorities in all our large cities, especially the seaports, should move more energetically than ever in the work of purification.
