"You see, Judge, early day before yester-day morning I started for this place, and as I wouldn't chisel, I went without eating the whole day. I slept in the woods, and yesterday morning I got up as hungry as a pan-ther; and, as I walked along, thinks I, what am I to do? I never saw game so scarce; there wasn't so much as a squirrel to be found. I'm above cheating any man out of his dinner but I felt that a dinner I must have. Just then a fellow come riding along the road. I talked to him, and tried to borrow, swearing to pay at any place he might name in a week, but the critter told me he paid his way out of his own pocket, and he'd too little to divide.

"How much have you got?" says I.

"Two, fifty," says he.
"Now, thinks I, that is too little to divide. So, while he is looking the other way, I shoots him through the head, and gin him as decent burial as I could under the old log, and took the two dollars and a half. But it won't do; my conscience misgives me. I'm sorry for it, and wish the fellow had his money back, if he could be alive. Between you and me, as it is late for that, I think that I ought to be hung."
The Judge called his little black boy, ordered three papers of tobacco, and we smoked in silence. "Then you really think you ought to be hung?" he said, with compassion, as he whited a cloud of smoke toward the ceiling.

"I do, in fact," answered Rolfe, emitting a similar volume of vapor.

The Judge smoked and considered again.
"Well, we'll try to hang you," he said.
There was an expression of gratitude in Rolfe's eye as he replied:
"Thank you. That will ease my conscience."

The Judge again knocked the ashes from his pipe and spoke:
"Well, come here in half an hour. I'll try to get a jury."
Rolfe and myself, laying our pipes on the table, were about leaving when the Judge asked us to take a drink, which having done, we bade him good morning.

At the expiration of half an hour we re turned, when we found some twelve men drinking and smoking with the magistrate, awaiting us. We were politely requested to sit down.

"Now," said the Judge, addressing himself to Rolfe, "tell these gentlemen what you have already told me."

Whereupon Rolfe repeated the statement he had before made.

"Now, gentlemen," continued the first speaker, "I wish to say, if this gentleman,— Mr. Rolfe your name is, eh? well, there's some fine old brandy, make yourself perfectly at home—whether, gentlemen, you find John Rolfe guilty, or not guilty o murder. In addition to what he said, I will observe for your information, that have sent out and found the body just where ke stated it to be."

The jury smoked, rose up, took a little brandy and water, and then sat down again, and smoked in silence for some time. At last one of them, who appeared to be the foreman, said:

"The case is tolerably clear, and we rather think he's guilty."
"There's more tobacco on the table," said the Judge to Rolfe, "the best you can find anywhere. You have heard what these gentlemen have said. Well,"he continued, a little uneasily, "I don't like to tell you in my own house: but ----' "Let that be no hindrance," said Rolfe, filling and lighting his pipe.

"Well, then," continued the Judge, "come here at ten o'clock to-morrow morning, and I'll heavy you have."

I'll have you hung."
Rolfe looked disconcerted, and appeared mortified at the idea of asking a favor. "You—you have been so kind to me," he said, hesitatingly, "that I hardly like to ask you for anything more."

"Not at all," replied the Judge. "Out with it; you are welcome to it before you

"Well," said Rolfe, "I wish—to-morrow is my ague day, and the shakes come on at would you be so good as to hang me "With the greatest pleasure," answered the good-hearted Judge, shaking Rolfe by the hand. "Nine it shall be."

Accordingly John Rolfe went to the inn, paid his bill, and the next morning was hung as the clock struck nine.

mb20-tf Philadelphia, Pa.

OPAL DENTALLINA.—A superior article for cleaning the Teeth, destroying animalculae which infest them, giving tone to the gums, and leaving a feeling of fragrance and perfect cleanliness in the month. It may be used daily, and will be found to strengthen weak and bleeding gums, while the aroma and detersiveness will recommend it to every one. Being composed with the assistance of the Dentist, Physician and Micro copist, it is confidently offered as a RELL'a BLB substitute for the uncertain washes formerly in vogue. Eminent Dentists, acquainted with the constituents of the DENTALLINA, advocate its use; it contains nothing to prevent its unrestrained employment. Made only by
