THE DAILY EVENING BULLETIN; PHILADELPHIA, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1866. 3 they took upon themselves the responsi-bility and odium of tax laws, that our flag might be kept flying in the field. They did this relying upon the justice of their cause and went before the people and triumphed. The enactments of that great party are un-impeachable. In 1862, the capital was dis-graced by slavery, but they determined that henceforth it should be free, and with un-wavering fidelity to principle they placed upon the statute book that law which never can be and never shall be repealed, that in I will tell you in a very few words. The Pennsylvania Legislature.

[CLOSE OF YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.]

SENATE.-The following bills were passed: Incorporating the Germantown Club. A supplement to an act incorporating the Attleborough Railroad Company. Incorporating the Central Company Operative Association. Extending the provisions of the act authorizing a bridge over the Susquehanna, at York Furnace.

A supplement to an act incorporating the Pennsylvania Transportation and Insurance Company. Incorporating the People's Accident In-surance Company. Incorporating the American House Hotel

Company. Relative to a public park in Reading. Relative to the storage of petroleum in Reading. Extending act of 1862 relative to professional thieves in Reading. A number of bills incorporating gold and silver mining companies were passed finally.

Adjourned to 3 P. M.

Afternoon Session.—A despatch from the Governor and Treasurer announcing the passage of the bill reimbursing to Pennsyl-vania money advanced, was received amid applause. Mr. Landon offered a resolution inviting

Gen. B. F. Butler to speak to morrow even-ing at the Capitol, which passed by a party An amendment to include Senator Cowan was lost. The joint committee to procure paintings of the Battle of Gettysburg reported and re-commended the adoption of the section in the General Appropriation bill, already passed, authorizing three paintings. The committee returned thanks to Gens, Meade and Hancock, Governor Curtin and Joseph Harrison, Esq., for council and advice. The following bills passed:

One incorporating the American Steam Wood and Coal Company. One incorporating German Fire Insurance Company, of Philadelphia. One incorporating the Weccacoe Legion.

One incorporating the Germantown Cottage Company. Senator Louis W. Hall (Blair) was unanimously nominated to-day in Republican caucus for Speaker of the Senate. Of course, this is equivalent to election. HOUSE.—Mr. Markley offered a supple-ment to the act incorporating the Pennsylvenia Steel Company. Passed. Mr. Kerns, from a committee appointed to provide an historical painting of the Battle of Gettysburg, made a report, stating that it had been found impossible to decide upon the scene to be painted. The committee propose to visit the battle-field in June or July, in company with General Meade, and ask to be continued until they have con-tracted with some artist for these paintings. The House agreed to the report of the committee.

The following act, introduced by Mr. Crosland and called up by Mr. Adair, was passed:

"That if any incorporate company of this commonwealth, chartered for the develop-ment of her coal and mineral resources the procurement of petroleum within her the procurement of perroleum within her boundaries, or the working into commer-cial value of such products, shall, upon payment of the enrollment tax required by law, furnish the Governor with satisfactory evidence that they are actually and actively engaged in preparations for such development, such company shall be exempt from the bonus tax of one half of one per cent now imposed by law; and in all cases where any chartered company of this common wealth have entered upon lands under the franchise of such charter, and with machinery and workmen are actually engaged in the development of the same, and shall satisfy the Governor in like manner that no income or revenue has been derived there-

Serenade to Speaker Colfax.

Speaker Colfax was serenaded last night at his residence, by citizens of Indiana, who had already been paying a like compliment to Senator Lane, of that State.

Mr. Colfax, in acknowledging the compliment. said:

I have no doubt that you, like myself, rejoice with exceeding great joy, and are prouder to-day of being citizens of this great country than ever before. There was a time in this land of ours when slavery was regarded as the cornerstone of American in-stitutions. Thank God that time has passed, and we build henceforth on a foundation of liberty. [Applause.] To-day, under the legislation of the American Congress in the great republic, shaped by the geography of a continent and washed by the water of the two great oceans of the globe, there is no person, rich or poor, high or humble, learned or unlearned, who does not live in security under the protection of equal laws. [Applause.] I am prouder to-day, also, of the great Union organization of which I have been a member, than ever before. Its history is nobly written in the history of our country. Administrations and Congresses and parties may pass away, but the record which the great party has made will shine with brighter glory on our country's pages than any other in the annals of our history. When the great rebellion broke out, and when our ship of state rocked in a fearful storm and was threatened by a terrible mutiny, the Union organization stood unmutiny, the Union organization stood un-finchingly by our noble President, the martyred Lincoln, in his determination to crush the conspiracy and preserve the Gov-ernment intact; and when it was prophesled to us by false tongues, who at the same time shouted "no coercion," that therebellion could not be subjugated, the Unionloving people of the country, forming nto a mighty phalanx, determined that it should be! When your armies needed tein-forcements they took voluntarily upon themselves the odium of conscription hws and draft, because they were necessary for the country. When the ireasury needed to be filed my policy of reconstruction.

test oath was placed there, as the flaming sword at the gate of Eden, to warn such men that, till there were fruits meet for repentance or bonds for future good beavior, there was no place in these precincts havior, there was no place in these precincts for them. [Cheers.] Again, the policy of reconstruction was indicated by Congress in the winter of 1864 and 1865, when it passed nearly unani-mously, and without the yeas and nays, a joint resolution that the Vice President in counting the Presidential votes should not count the electoral votes of any State that had been engaged in the rebollion. That was intended to proclaim that until Con-gress removed their disqualification, by laws restoring them to their right, they should stand back. Congress has, therefore, whould stand back. Congress has, therefore, by these two striking enactments, indicated its policy of reconstruction. But the Constitution has, in still plainer language, declared where the responsibility of reconstruction should rest. It has de-clared that every State shall be guaranteed a republican form of government, and in a a republican form of government, and in a subsequent section it declares that Congress -hall have power to make all laws necessary and proper to carry into execution all the owers vested in it, or in any department of powers vested in it, or in any department or officer of the Government. This was intended to declare that Congress is the only law making power of this land, and by the Con-stitution, to Congress, and to it alone, must we look for legalized reconstruction. The President of the Union, in his procla-tion that the Union, in his procla-

ation last May, appointing Provisional Governors, declared that the States which had been in rebellion, were without civil government. That was a fact as palpable as the stars when they shine in the heavens. My regret is, for I must speak frankly to-night -that Congress was not at that time called together. I believe it would have hastened the work of reconstruction. I believe that Congress, and the President by his approval of their legislation, would have united last summer on a policy of reconstruction, which would have been acceptable to both branches of the Government, and in which the South, seeing this concurrent action, would have acquiesced. The Constitution of the United States de-

The Constitution of the United States de-clares that the President, on extraordinary occasions, may convene Congress, and it has always seemed to me that last April was an extraordinary occasion. The Presi-dent of the United States had been mur-dered by a rebel conspirator, and the Vice President had assumed the Presidential functions. The rebellion had seen its flag trampled in the dust and its armies had surrendered. It seemed to me that if ever there was an extraordinary occasion this there was an extraordinary occasion this was one; but the President, and I recognize his full constitutional authority to decide the question, deemed that it was not expe-dient to call Congress together, and went on himself with the work of reconstruction. on himself with the work of reconstruction. I believe he entered upon and proceeded with that work patriotically, and that he thought, as an experiment, it would be well to test it before Congress reassembled. I am confirmed in this belief by the messages which he sent to the Governors of Florida and Mississippi, stating that their restora-tion would depend on Congress, and I do tion would depend on Congress, and I do not think it resulted in developing loyalty at the South. Congress at last convened on the first Monday in December last. It could not convene earlier, for it had no power to meet convene earlier, for it had no power to meet until its regular session, unless convened by the President. It appointed a committee to examine the condition of the late Con-federate States, and it was only one short month ago that it received official doou-ments from the Executive Department which enabled it to know what transmised which enabled it to know what transpired during the long recess of Congress; and now, at last, it is able to do it intelligently, with some official knowledge of the situation.
