some new system devised for the collection of customs duties in New York, which shall be honest and fair. But there is a vast and overpowering body in the New York mercantile community, which profits by the present system and uses its enormous influence to maintain and perpetuate it. To combatand counteract this, there is need of a general combination among the influential men of all the other parts of the country. New York foreign commerce thrives on its custom house frauds, at the expense of the commerce of all the other cities. It is a notorious fact that, with precisely the same laws, goods can be imported cheaper at New York than they can at Philadelphia, simply because there is honesty in the Philadelphia custom-house, and fraudulent invoices and other cheatery are less likely to escape detection. Boston and Baltimore suffer in a similar way, and in a proportionate degree every other port that has any foreign commerce suffers. We might build up a rich foreign trade, if we could fill our custom-house with thieves, and advertise to the world that the revenue laws would be habitually violated for the benefit of importers. as they notoriously are in New York. It is said that various schemes have been considered by the Government and the committees in Congress for collect-other members of the Government, including many Congressmen, to have ing duties at New York. But it is also said that nothing practicable can be determined upon. This is puerile and false. A strong hand and an honest heart can effect such a reform. All that is needed is the courage to defy and overturn the insolent power which has been tolerated and pampered for partisan purposes, through a long series of administrations. The President cannot always give attention to the details of the administration of the various offices he has to bestow. But the monstrous abuses of the New York customhouse must now be known to him, and be can depute trustworthy men, not New Yorkers, but representatives of the whole tax-paying community, who can investigate the system; and, resisting all attempts at corruption, can devise a new one for collecting duties at our principal sea-port. We trust that Congress will bring the matter before him, and that he will act upon it promptly and energetically.
