American Pianists and Pianos.

But a few years have elapsed since we imported all our first class pianos from Europe, and our domestic manufactures of that instrument were ancered at by Europeans. American planists were held in much the ame reputs as the instruments of their native land, and even American upper-lendom exhibited a preference for foreign artists over these who were proud to call themselves Americans. Thus Herz, Leopoid De Meyer, Alfred Jaell, Thalberg, etc., resped trich harvests of dollars from playing on planos brought by them from Europe, but so inconcelvably rapid has seen the progress made in American plano-forts manufacturing, and so numerous the improvements made on European models, that the manufacturers of the old world have been left behind in the race for distinction, and the very same artists whose names we have mentioned, and many others of equal eminence, openly declare their preference for playing in public on American planos, as far superior instruments to those made in Europe, of which scarcely a single specimen is imported in a year, whilst, on the contrary. American planos now form a large and in (r-asing stable of export from our shores, Soo too with American planists. Wherever they have performed in Europe they have at once challenged admiration, and achieven the most brilliata success; and were Mills, Mason, Goldbeck Hoffman, etc., to visit Europe now, they could not fail in vieing with any European artist, and surpassing a large majority of them. Whodes not remember the boy planist, Willied Pape, who exhibited such extraordinary sencess and distriction as a planist? Five years have converted the vouth into a young man, and the American boy unknown to European fame into the Court Planist of the royal family of England at Marlborough House, by command of the Princes and Princes of Wales. In an interesting letter of his, over date of London, Feb. 4th, the sease: American Pisnists and Pinnos command of the Prince and Princes of Wales. In an interesting letter of his, over date of London, Feb. 4th, he says:

Massas, Steinway & Sons: "I am much pleased to see the rapid sdvances you are making, and the numerous critificates you haveso deservedly obtained. Should my humble cpinion be of any weight you may ado that I give my four hundreth planoforte recital at Cheltenham on the 10th of this month, since my arrival here; that during my four annual visits to Paris, I have used the grand planoes of all the first Enropean manufacturers, but have found no instrument equal to to the one I purchased of you. In fact, I consider one of your finest square planos is quite equal to any of the grand planos manufactured here.

"Truly yours WILLLE PAPE,"
"Planist to H. R.," H. the Princess of Wales."

Such testimony as the foregoing, added to that of mapy of the most eminent of the European artists, speaks volumes in favor of American art manufactures, which now enjoy an equal pre-eminence with those of a strictly utilitarian character, as the reaping and sewing machines, printing presses, etc. It is also truly gratifying to our national pride, and must, of course, be especially so to the now world-famed firm who were the recipitents of the above letter.—Wilkes' Spirit.

FALL OF A REMARKABLE TREE.—During a violent gale which occurred in the Dun-keld district in Scotland last month, a large number of trees, some of them of unusual size, were uprooted. In the garden of Dun-crub, belonging to Lord Rolla, a fir tree, worthy of note, was blown down. It was eighty feet in height, and the circumference at the root was eighteen feet. This tree was planted in 1706 to commemorate the union between England and Scotland. A NOVEL RETURN.-A Sheffield (England) paper says the following is a verbatim copy of the form in which a laboring man living at Thorpele Fallows, filled up the government schedule requiring the number of live stock in his possession on the 5th

ADDITIONAL DETAILS ABOUT THE MURDERER.

What He Said in Prison.

ANOTHER ARREST LAST NIGHT

Funeral of the Victims.

The excitement in regard to the arrest of Antoine Ganter (or Antoine Probst, as he wrote his name yesterday afternoon), the murderer of the Deering family, still continues throughout the city. During yesterday afternoon the BULLETIN office was completely besieged, and the papers were sold as fast as they could be printed, so great was the anxiety to learn the details of the capture and read the statement of the prisoner. A large crowd continued around Fifth and Chestnut streets until dark, and every time a prison van came around there was a rush of the eager throng. At six o'clock, when the regular van stopped at the Central Station, it was at once surrounded, and Fifth street from Chestnut to Library, was almost completely blocked up. The anxious individuals were all doomed to disappointment, as the prisoner doomed to disappointment, as the present had been conveyed quietly to Moyamensing Prison several hours before. To the details published in the BULLETIN of yesterday, here is very little to add, as no further developments were made.

Probst, as the prisoner now calls himself, was taken to a photograph saloon opposite the Central Station, yesterday, and several excellent negatives were taken. A large posse of policemen was necessary to protect the murderer from violence by the crowd. The picture of Probst will be hung up in the Rogue's Gallery to-day.

Some of the Movements of the Murderer.

Ganter or Probst was fully identified yesterday afternoon, by Mr. Eckfeldt, as the man who left the black bag at his lager beer saloon, No. 445 New Market street. It appears that Probst did not remain at Eckfeldt's over Sunday night, but stayed at a lager beer saloon on Front street near Brown. On Monday he again visited Eckfeldt's control of the saloon of the sa Brown. On Monday he again visited Eckthe afternoon of Monday he was considersbly intoxicated. He left on Tuesday, and did not make his appearance until Thursday morning, when he came in and played several games of cards with a German who several games of cards with a German who was seated in the bar-room at the time. During the day he read a newspaper containing an account of the murder, but said nothing about it. In the afternoon a number of Germans engaged in conversation about the massacre. One of them remarked that it would be a shame for a Dutchman to erforming such a shocking deed.

bring disgrace upon his countrymen by The periorising such a shocking deed. The prisoner took no part in the conversation.

A number of police officers were in Eckfeldt's tavern during Thursday, inquiring if there had been any suspicious looking tersons about there during the day. Probst teard the conversation; he sat with his hat pulled over his eyes, as if asleep. During the afternoon he left, saying that he was going down Front street. This was the going down Front street. This was the ast heard of of him until it was known that he had been arrested.

Discharged. The man arrested in the Eleventh Ward yesterday, on suspicion of having been the accomplice mentioned by Probst, was confronted with him in prison, but he denied all knowledge of him. The man was thereupon discharged.

Probst in Prison---More Statements. The assassin reached the prison about moon yesterday, and was at once placed in the cell, on the second corridor, convict side, recently occupied by Berger, the murderer of Miss Watt. He showed no signs of emotion, spoke freely to such of the officers of the prison as asked him questions, and, when dinner was served to him, he ate

To one of the Inspectors of the Prison, who conversed with him in the German language, he told the story of the murders much as he had narrated it to the Mayor, but entered more into detail, describing how they were done. To this gentleman he said that he was from Baden, where his father and mother and brother and sisters reside. It was during this conversation that he, for the first time, showed anything like sensibility, and it was when he was asked what his parents would think when they heard of the commission of the dread-ful crime by him. A tear was then observed stealing down his cheek. One of the officers of the Prison put the question to him—How was it, if you killed the boy, as you say, and your companion killed all the rest, that the boy was killed in precisely the same man-ner as the others were? He paused for a moment, and then answered—He told me how to do it! Such an answer, probably the best he could give, is calculated to increase the doubt of his having had an accomplice. The last time Probst was visited yesterday afternoon, he had a Bible in his hand, and appeared to be reading it. While Chief Franklin was at the Prison on business, he had a further conversation with the prisoner, and asked him more par-ticularly as to the manner of the killing of Mr. Deering and his niece, and as it differs somewhat from that given before the Mayor, we add it to the above: Q. What were you doing when the other man killed Deering?

A. I was holding the horse; the man knocked Deering down with the axe as soon as he got from the carriage, and his niece started to run, when he caught up with her, man killed Deering? and striking her alongside of the head with the axe knocked her down. He then cut the throats of both.

Q. How did the woman's bonnet get in A. I took it off her head and carried it in. The bonnet was examined, and old-fash-ioned one, which came well over the face, and no marks of blood could be found upon it or any indication that it had been on the

More of the Stolen Property. Late last evening the detectives discovered watchmaker in the Eleventh Ward, to whom Probst had offered a gold watch for sale on Wednesday. It will be noticed that Probst, in his statement to the Mayor and the officers, asserted that his accomplice took the watch, and yet the watchmaker identifies the prisoner by the absence of his

The Deering Family. The following additional particulars were obtained yesterday in reference to the Deering family. Christopher came to this coun-

THE FIRST WARD ASSASSINATION. try seventeen years ago, from Dublin, Ireland. Soon after his arrival he engaged in the service of Commodore Engle, and remained in it for several years. After leaving the employment of the Commodore he went to Maryland, and was there for a time. Upon his return he went into the milk busings of the control ness, and from that took to droving. In 1855 he married Julia Duffy, his first cousin, who was a few years older than himself. Miss Dolan, his cousin, had been but about six menths in the country. Her mother paid a visit to Ireland last year and brought her over. Her age as fixed by mombers of paid a visit to treiand last year and broughther over. Her age, as fixed by members of the family, was twenty-nine years. On the day she reached this city, the last seen of her alive, she had just left the home of her uncle in Burlington, and the compound interest notes she had with her were to purchase Government bonds with. Mrs. Deering has a brother living in New York, who reached this city on Thursday.

Another Arrest.

A suspicious looking German was arrested last evening by three citizens and some policemen while going along the Lime Kiln turnpike, in the Twenty-second Ward. The man had with him a valise, containing a coat, a lot of men's and women's under garments, an old fashioned black dress, a pair of pants and several smaller articles, Some of the clothes had evidently been recently washed, and looked as if they had been blood-stained. One handkerchief was marked "W. M. V." and some of the other articles were marked "Boyd." The man told very contradictory stories. He said that he was on his way to York, Pa., and at the time of his capture he was going in the opposite direction. He then said that he was from Collegeville, which is in the Twenty-third Ward, but he was going towards that place. He was asked last evening whether he knew anything about the grant was the control of thing about the murderer, and replied in the negative. This morning he related many of the details of the tragedy. At first he said that he could not read or write, but when put into the cars this morning to be brought to the city he asked for a newspaper. One was given to him, and he immediately turned to the account of the arrest of Probst. The under-clothing he says belongs to his wife, but he does not know where she is, as she ran away from him. The coat he declares he brought from Germany four years ago, but it is evidently a Philadelphia made garment. The man was brought to the Central Station this morning, and there was immediately another exciting scene. A crowd gathered around the door, and there were anxious inquiries in regard to the prisoner. There is nothing about this prisoner which resembles the individual Probst charge with having been his accomplice. He is about six feet high, slimly built, is crosseyed, and has no boil on his neck, whereas the man described by Probst is short and stout, is not cross-eyed and has a boil on his neck.

It is evident that this individual had no connection with the murders, but there is no doubt that he obtained dishonestly the goods found in his possession, and the probabilities are that he has committed a robbery somewhere. He is detained for a further investigation.

The speculations in regard to a second man having been engaged in the bloody deed, are various, but a general impression that Probst alone committed the murders, is rapidly gaining ground. The excitement about the Central Station continues, although the crowd gathered there is not so large as it was yesterday.

Every man who goes into the building in company with a policeman, is closely scanned, and enquiries are at once made as to whether he is the second man. An individual was taken in this morning for the larceny of a pair of shoes, and a rumor that the other murderer had been captured, was at once set afloat.

Arrests Abroad.

A very full description of Probst, the murderer, having been telegraphed throughout the country, the officers in various cities and towns have been on the alert, and in several places Germans answering somewhat to the description have been taken into custody, and the authorities here telegraphed to. Nearly a dozen despatches of that kind have already been received.

Still at Work.

The detectives and police are still at work and are making strenuous efforts to find the supposed accomplice of Probst. This morning Detectives G. H. Smith and Tryon found a man on New Third street, upon whom suspicion rested, but he accounted for himself satisfactorily.

Thus far no new developments of importance have been made.

The Funeral of the Victims. By the time this issue of our paper has passed into the hands of most of our readers the bodies of the victims will have been consigned to earth in St. Mary's Cemetery, on Passyunk road. The preparations for the funeral were all made at the establishment of Mr. Simon Gartland, Thirteenth street, above Chestnut street, at an early hour this morning, and the remains were viewed by many curious spectators between 9 A. M. and noon. The remains were placed in the main apartments of Mr. Gartland's establishment, on the right of the entrance. The bodies were shrouded in white, and all that art could do to soften the ghastly appearance of the fatal wounds had been done. The coffins were of neat walnut, and on the lids were the inscriptions, which, as we took them from the undertaker's books. were as follows: Christopher Deering,

Julia Deering, - - Elizabeth Dolan, -45 5 25 6 8 John Deering, -Thomas Deering. Anna Deering, Emily Deering,

The neighborhood was through with persons anxious to see the realis, from an early hour this morning and the ut-most efforts of the police had beemployed ich pressed to keep order in the throng ich pressed towards the entrance of the indertaker's

A considerable number of tickets had been issued and partice prossessing these condensated was in ties possessing these cards could pass in with comparative ease, though not without an occasional collision with the police in charge of the multitude who were not prowided with the necessary pasteboard.

As the time for the departure of the funeral drew near the crowd increased, and the pressure to gain admittance to the apartment where they lay was intensified. Com-paratively good order was, however, maintained up to the hour when our reporter left

Burning of an Extensive Glass Factory [From the Boston Herald of Yesterday.]

Yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, a large tank connected with the New England Glass Works, situated on North and Water streets, East Cambridge, and covering an area of over four acres, (being the largest establishment of the kind in the United States) which was filled with some five hundred gallons of kerosene oil and is used to feed the gallons of kerosene oil and is used to feed the "glory-hose," so called, connected with the furnaces, exploded or took fire from some cause unknown, and communicated to the large brick buildings, 135 feet in length, which compose the furnaces, in the northeast section of the yard, and containing four large furnaces and forty pots, holding 2,000 pounds each; also a three story brick building, which contained moulds, glass, and a large number of pots, which were manufactured of German clay, all of which were nearly destroyed. The roof of the furnace buildings fell in with a crash, greatly damaging the furnaces and destroying two of them. The tall chimney which is seen at a great distance was uninjured.

The darr. Chilling which is seen at a great distance was uninjured.

The alarm was promptly given by ringing the Glass-house bell, and the fire companies of Cambridge, with both handengines and steamers, were soon upon the ground, and checked the fire from communicating to the ontside buildings, which are ground, and checked the fire from communicating to the outside buildings, which are threestories in height, over 200 feet in length, ane used for sample rooms, packing glassware, offices, &c., and which contained a very large and valuable stock. Steam Fire Engine Company No. 6, of Boston; Harvard Steam Engine Company and Red Jacket Hose Company, of Charlestown; Liberty Hose and Somerville Engine Company, and other fire companies from the suburban and other fire companies from the suburban towns, were present and rendered great service in saving the outer building from

The Glass Company employs over 500 men and women. Many of them have been connected with the works for over a quarter of a century, and they lost most of their tools by the fire, but will not be out of employment, as Mr. Leighton, the active foreman of the works, immediately set the men to work in clearing up the rubbish, and it was found that two of the furnaces are not badly injured, and the works will go on by Monday. The Company estimate their loss a some $75,000, on which there is an insurance which will clearly cover it, in the Firemen's Merchants' and Manufacturers' Offices of

Facts and Fancies.

Michael Geary, the billiard player, "mashed a reporter's nose flat"—as he prettily described it—for making an unpalatable report of a match game. If that indiscreet reporter had taken his "cue" from Michael, he would not have meddled with his would not have meddled with his

General Grant is to sit for a bust to Franklin Simmons, a young sculptor from Boston who has a studio in Washington. If he makes General Grant look like bu'st per-Simmons, he will not be handsome An exchange announces that Wednesday was the anniversary of the birthday of Hahnemann, "the father of homeopathy, and also of Edward Everett.' Mr. Richard Grant White, in the preface

o his "Poetry of the War," says "some people complacently thought, as they listened to that nonsensical farrago, 'Old John Brown,' that here was proof that 'the great popular heart of this country beatin unison with the impulses of humanity toward uni-versal freedom.' But the truth was that the alternate jig and swing of the air caused it to stick in the uneducated ear as burrs stick to a blackberry girl." He finds proof for his theory in the fact that "the song, already unheard and passing rapidly into oblivion with us, is now just as popular in London as it ever was here." All of which proves Richard to be a donkey. Long after White ceases to be read, Brown will be green in the hearts of the people and his memory preserved inviolate. The Boston Post says: "Secretary Stanton is providing snug little berths for his nephews and so on." We don't believe it. If they belonged to Mr. Seward now, he might accommodate them in his Secretary of State-rooms. Sir Hugh Henry Rose, the new Com-mander-in-Chief of the British army in Ireland, has seen hard service in India, and is the man who blew the Sepoy leaders from the mouths of his cannon. If we remember aright, he was justified for that playful lit-tle act of British humanity, on the ground that it is natural for a rose to blow.

"Admiral" Semmes is named in the Mobile papers for Judge of Probate in that city. If they can only contrive to elect the amiable pirate twice to that office, it will make him just the re-probate judge we should expect him to be. "HE'LL NEVER SET THE TEMSE ON FIRE."—Many years ago, before machinery was introduced into flour mills for the puroose of sifting the flour, it was the custom of the miller to send it home unsifted. The process of sifting was done thus—but principally in Yorkshire: the "temse," or sleve, which was provided with a rim, which pro-jected from the bottom of it, was worked over the mouth of the barrel into which the flour or meal was sifted. An active fellow, who worked hard, not unfrequently set the rim of the temse on fire by force of friction against the rim of the flour barrel; so that, in fact, this department of domestic employment became a standard by which to test a man's will or capacity to work hard; and thus of a lazy fellow, or one deficient in strength, it was said, "he will never set the temse on fire." The long misuse of the word temse for sieve, as well as the superseding of hand labor by machinery in this particular species of work, may possibly have tended to the substitution of sound for sense, in such phrases as "he will never set the Thames on fire," the Mersey on fire, or any other river. I cannot recollect having seen any notice of this phrase in "N and Q," and should be glad to know whether it is familiarly many nersons. P whether it is familiar to many persons. P. finance and musiness-April 14, 1866. There is no falling off in the supply of money, either at the Banks or on the street, with a very limited in quiry either from the mercantile community or from the brokers for speculative purposes. The tendency of the proposed reduction of the rate of interest on the temporary deposits held by the Sub-Tressury on the lat of May to five per cent., and on Clearing House Certificates to four pent., will be to increase the supply of unemployed capital, and cheaped the rates. Government Loans were very firm at 104%@105 for the Coupon Sixes, '81; 103%@104 for the Five-Twenties; 100%@100% for the Seven-Thirties, and 91% for the Ten-Forties.
