Feelings in Battle.

People often wonder how one feels in batle. All men are not affected alike. Som are cool, determined and courageous; some lose all judgment, and will, single-nanded, rush upon hundreds; others are entirely unmanned, tremble like aspens, seem dead to every emotion of honor or feeling of shame, and will slink into coverts or run from the field. Lord Forth, in the Crimean war, is an instance. If skirmishers engage prior to a general battle, and a desultory fire is kept up for a while, one becomes used to it, and, as the battle warms, it frequently becomes exciting, and men that tremble at the first few shots now rush on like heroes. I remember well my feeling during the first battle in which I was engaged. The night before we received orders to prepare to attack the enemy early on the

All was now hurry, bustle and anxiety. Guns were cleaned, ammunition inspected, straps adjusted, canteens filled, knapsacks lightened, letters written. We had several men in our company who had always boasted of their bravery and prowess—men who had been "spoiling for a fight," as they said. These were now as still as mice; they didn't peep. One of them, who had taken a master's degree in all kinds of profanity now borrowed a Bible, sat down and read it for some time, and intimated to his mess mates the propriety of praying before going to sleep that night. It is not your blustering, profane bravado that is the brave man on the field of battle—it is your patient, retiring men.

I confess a feeling of dread and anxiety stole over me. Battle was certain, the en emy was strongly posted, and we had desperate work before us. I wanted to go into battle, yet I dreaded it like death. I slept but little that night. The morning came, and our columns moved quietly and sternly forward through a wood. The first intima-tion we had of the enemy was the skirmishing between his outposts and our vanguard the former falling back as the latter advanced. We passed out of the wood and rapidly deployed into line of battle, a general sloping hill hiding the enemy from our A part of our force had been sen round to make a flank and rear attack on the enemy, and while so doing it was of the utmost importance that we should hold his in the front. We marched steadily up the hill till the whole line of the enemy burst upon our view; there we halted, and for some minutes not a gun was fired on either side.

There stood the two armies, each waiting for the other to begin the work of death The faces of our men looked pale and de-termined; some of them looked like statues, others nervous and uneasy. It was the time to test their courage. A line of cannon was bearing directly upon us. Death to many of us was certain. Who will it be? thought I. A singular feeling came over me, a confused image of a mother and siste appeared flittering and floating before my agination like dissolving shadows, while the tremendous reality in front oppressed me with dreadful forebodings.

A few moments passed, like those that intervene between drawing the cap over the criminal's face and letting fall the trap. when a puff of smoke shot out from one o the cannon, followed by a crash, and a shell went screaming over us. Our men ducked their heads like geese. Fire was now opened on us along the enemy's entire line. opened on us along the enemy's entire line. Their first shots were aimed too high. They gradually lowered them. Every discharge brought their balls fearfully nearer. We were impatient to return the fire, but dare not till the command was given. Our Colonel passed along in front of the line and urged us to stand firm till the proper time, and the day would be ours. It is a task to hold men exposed to an enemy's fire without allowing them to return it. They will soon run one way or the other.

The enemy's shot began to howl around us, plough through our ranks and tear up the earth about our feet. A six-pound ball cut off the bayonet of my messmate on my left.

cut off the bayonet of my messmate on my left; a moment more and one struck him in left; a moment more and one struck him in the breast, severing him almost in twain. The hot blood from his heart spirted full in my face. Great God, how I felt! A faint, sickening sensation came over me. He smiled faintly, spoke my name, gasped and expired. He was frightfully mangled. I was maddened to desperation. All thoughts of fear vanished; I could have fought thousands. The command of "Fire!" ran along was maddened to desperation. All thoughts of fear vanished; I could have fought thousands. The command of "Fire!" ran along the line, and a tremendous crash of musketry answered the command.

We now loaded and fired for dear life. Dense volumes of sulphurous smoke hung like a pall over us and shut out the enemy from our sight. The battle grew warm and bloody. The rattle of musketry, the screaming of shells, the thunder of artillery, the whistling of bullets, the shouts of command commingled with curses, prayers and groans of the wounded and dying filled the air. Our men, black with smoke and powder, looked like fiends incarnate, as they plied their work of death. At length a breeze rolled away the smoke that shrouded us, and disclosed our other columns bearing down upon the enemy's flank.

Now was the decisive moment. "Charge bayonets!" rang out, and with loud shouts we rushed forward to the assault. A storm of grape and canister was hurled against us as we neared the batteries. Like maddened tigers our men leaped forward with us as we neared the batteries. Like maddened tigers our men leaped forward with the cold steel. The struggle over the guns was desperate. It was a butchery, savage in the extreme. The enemy soon broke and fled, leaving us masters of the field. Since that time I have not felt the least dread or hesitation on entering a battle. After the first few shots I fire away as coolly as when hunting squirrels. us as we neared the batteries. Like madcoolly as when hunting squirrels.

SUICIDE OF A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN,-It has been seen for the past several weeks, by the neighbors residing in the vicinity of 62 Court street, opposite the market house, that a man by the name of George Steifel was very partial in his attendance upon a young lady in that house named Elizabeth Webb, the daughter we believe, of the proprietor of the aforesaid house. The attentions of Mr. Steifel did not please the father of the girl, and he forbade Mr. Steifel his house, and yet he heard subsequently that his daughter still kept company with house, and yet ne neard subsequently that his daughter still kept company with him. Two or three days ago, a man named Jackson informed Mr. Webb that Steifel was a married man; that his femily lived at sea Vienter and that his family lived at 665 Vine street, and that he, Steifel, was employed at Scheider's grohe, Steifel, was employed at Schelder's gro-cery, on Court street, upon which represen-tation, on Saturday last, Mr. Webb posi-tively forbade his daughter from having any-thing more to do with him. The conse-quence was that Miss Webb proceeded to procure a dose of laudanum swallowing quence was that Miss Webb proceeded to procure a dose of laudanum, swallowing which caused her death. Coroner Carey held an inquest last night at nine o'clock upon her body, the jury returning a verdict that the deceased came to her death by laudanum administered by her own hands, and further, that the attending physician was further, that the attending physician was culpable for the woman's death by not applying the requisite restoratives in such cases.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

THE DEAD OF THE WAR.—The Provest Marshal-General has completed a careful compilation from the muster-rolls, at all the compilation from the muster-rolls, at all the deaths in battle, from wounds and disease, in every regiment and company of every loyal State from the beginning to the close of the war. From it it appears that 280,739 officers and men have lost their lives in the service. Of this number 5,821 commissioned officers and 90,886 enlisted men have been killed in action or died of wounds while killed in action, or died of wounds, white 2,321 commissioned officers and 182,329 enlisted men have died of disease, or, in a few cases, from accident.

THE BRITISH MINISTER AT WASHINGTON AND MR. BANCROFT'S ORATION.—The American correspondent of the Spectator writes: "It seems that in passing judgment upon the taste and propriety of certain passages of Mr. Bancroft's oration in memory of Mr. Lincoln, we were all in the dark upon one important point and was represented. important point and were misinformed upon another. Mr. Bancroft, as I suggested in my last letter, looked upon the occasion as a purely domestic one, and wrote his oraon with a single eye to Congress as his audience—in fact considered himself rather as the mouthpiece, the retained spokesman of the House of Representatives. But when he arrived at Washington, and learned that the diplomatic corps had been specially invited to hear him, he addressed a note to Sir Frederick Bruce, suggesting as kindly as possible that it would probably be more agreeable to him not to be presen at the delivery of the oration. Sir Frederick in reply thanked Mr. Bancroft for his warning, but added that if there was anything to be said against Great Britain or the govern-ment that he had the honor of representing, he wished to hear it. He consequently came, and after the oration went up to Mr. Bancroft and conversed with him for a few minutes, not only with courtesy, but with kindness. This has not been made public, but I state it not upon report but but I state it not upon report. but I state it not upon report, but know-ledge. As to Sir Frederick Bruce's declining to meet Mr. Bancroft at dinner because of his speech, there has no evidence come to light to sustain the positive assertions of the light to sustain the positive assertions of the Washington correspondents that such was the case. Thus, whatever judgment may be passed upon the pertinence of Mr. Bancroft's strictures to the subject of his oration, he must be held guiltless of the charge of distance of the charge of distance of the charge of distance of the charge of the of the c disregarding the feelings of a distinguished guest who was invited to be present and sit silent and helpless while his government was attacked."—London Daily News.

OTTER CAUGHT IN LANCASTER COUNTY.—An American otter, measuring four-feet in length, and weighing twenty pounds, was yesterday caught on the farm of Mr. Wentz, in Drumore township, Lancaster county. The animal was discovered about three miles from the Susquehanna river, by a boy, a son of Mr. Wentz, who, with the assistance of a dog, despatched it. Mr. Wentz brought it to this city this morning and left it at Messrs. Groff & Kreiders, Cross Keys Hotel, where a number of persons interested in natural history called to examine it. It has been purchased by a committee of the Linnæan Society, for the purpose of preparing and stuffing the skin for preservation. The otter is described as a digitigrade carnivorous mammal, with a large, fiattish head, short ears, webbed toes, crooked nails, and tall, slightly flattened horizontally. It is aquatic, feeds on fish, and its fur is valuable. The otter is rarely found in this country.—Lancaster Express.

LONDON CABS.—The London Workingman says: "Cab manufacture in London is an important branch of trade; for on the first day of the present year there were as many as six thousand and seventeen limany as six thousand and seventeen licensed at Somerset House, which would probably give seven hundred or eight hundred new ones a year. London traffic is of a very trying and exhausting nature; so that the Hansom horse usually closes his career in this line in about three years. If a cab is only worked during the day, it wants two horses; but if it is going and day night there must be a relay of three."
