Our purchases for this season having been delayed, waiting the expected decline in goods, we have now on hand the largest and best assorted stock of Clothing in Philadelphia, purchased for each exclusively, at the very lowest rates of the season, which enables us to realize a fair profit and sell at prices less than the cest of came goods in most other establishments. We can supply Clothiers doing a fine city trade with goods adapted to their sales at prices so much lower than the sost of their present stocks, that, by making an average of the whole, they will be enabled to dispose of their goods at prices covering the average cost, and ever paying a profit. ASTONISHMENT. Persia, that land of flowers and dreams, Has had a storm of snow, it seems, Which strange event 'neath lurid skies, Excited general surprise. Astonishment was quite as great In our old Quaker Keystone State When "PERRY'S STAR" first beamed out bright, Illuminating all with light! Nor does astonishment grow less. The reason's plain enough to find:

Goods were laid in when PRICE DECLINED. N. B.—We PERFORM all that is promised in our advertisements; therefore, those who buy at the Star do not get disappointed. OUR PRICES ARE THE LOWEST MY THE CITY FOR CLOTHING OF EQUAL QUALITY, O which all can satisfy themselves by an examination of our stock, which contains Gentlemen's Clothing of every style and all varieties of piece goods. ## EVENING BULLETIN. TUESDAY, APRIL 17, 1866.

McDOUGALL. If James A. McDougall, of California, should be expelled from the Senate of the United States, it would probably be denounced by the copperheads as "another outrage of the Radicals." If Senator Saulsbury were treated in the same way, the same comment would probably be made. For these two common drunkards are ardent supporters of President Johnson's policy, and to expel them would be considered a kindred offence to the ousting of Mr. Stockton.

Yesterday McDougall, being in his usual beastly state of intoxication, indulged in a tirade of vile, profane, obscene and generally disgusting abuse of his colleague, Senator Conness, which exceeded anything ever be fore heard in either house of Congress. A low groggery or brothel could hardly ever have echoed fouler language. The Senate bore it with a patience that is almost incomprehensible; but if it should not resent and condemn the outrage upon its own dignity and the decency of the country at large, by the prompt expulsion of the offender, then we shall be disappointed. It is intolerable that the nation should be disgraced by the continued presence of this brawling sot in the Senatechamber. It is mortifying that he should be supposed to represent, in any way, a great, prosperous, intelligent State like Cali-

OUR NORTHERN FRONTIER. Lieutenant-General Grant aarived in Philadelphia yesterday. Major-General Meade and his staff lest Philadelphia last evening for Eastport, Maine. The coincidence is noteworthy, and it is a not unnatural inference that the Commander of the Department of the Atlantic goes, by order of the Commander-in-Chief, to preserve order and enforce the neutrality laws on our border, where the Fenians are organizing for the invasion of the British provinces. The Government, for the first time, is disposed to regard the Fenian movement as likely to endanger our friendly relations with Great Britain. Naval vessels have arrived in Eastport harbor, off which lies the island of Campo-bello, and others are ordered thither. The sudden departure of Major-General Meade and his staff, in the same direction, indicates that the state of affairs on the frontier is regarded as quite critical.

THE DEERING MURDER. In our local columns will be found a full report of the testimony taken by the Coroner's inquest last evening, in the case of this dread tragedy. The detectives, with most commendable skill and industry, have worked up an array of evidence against the accused which leaves no room for doubt as to his guilt, and even discarding in toto his own partial confession, there is vastly more clear and undeniable testimony than would be needed to consign him to the gallows. The sum and substance of the evidence elicited yesterday may be briefly summed up. We pass over the circumstance of the finding of the bodies of the murdered family as too familiar to every reader to need repetition, and we can only judge of the condition of the homestead, on the Saturday morning of the terrible tragedy, by the state in which it was found when the deed of blood was brought to light on the following

Wednesday. Of Mr. Deering's movements we have more certain knowledge. We first find him in a light wagon, at a market wagon, at Eighteenth and South streets, where he buys a piece of beef for the Sunday dinner of his family. This is between eight and nine o'clock. He told the butcher that he was in a hurry, as he had to go to Mr. Mitchell's at Sixteenth and Arch streets, and then drive from there to the boat to meet a cousin (Miss Dolan) who was to come down the river from Burlington. At the house of Mr. Mitchell (who was his principal in business), he made a payment of cash, remarking that he was short of money, ten dollars in small Greenbacks were refunded to him. He is presumed to have driven to the boat and then towards his home, for at twenty minutes of ten o'clock we find him chatting with an old lady with whom he was acquainted at the extreme lower part of Second street, and expressing to her his regret that he had missed his cousin. While he and the old lady were chatting, the missing cousin came in sight, on foot, and Mr. Deering, driving over to where she was, he took her up, and together they drove towards his home. He must have reached there before ten o'clock, and his murder must have taken place almost on the moment of his arrival, as his gloves were still on when his body was discovered on Wednesday. The murder of Miss Dolan must have followed hard upon that of Mr. Deering, not more than a few minutes at most elapsing. This was at ten o'clock, and the murderer had the day before him. How did he spend it? We do not believe he remained at the place any longer than was necessary to secure the plunder, which was doubtless the principal object of his horrid crimes; still the first seen of him was in Front street, near Coates, at eight o'clock in the evening of Saturday. He spent the night there in debauchery, and was seen about in various places in the same neighborhood until Thursday. Early in the evening of that day the left a boon companion at Lakefeld's tavern in New Market street, telling him that he was going to Germany the next morning. About an hour after he was accosted and arrested as he was about to cross the Market street bridge to West Philadelphia. During his drunken carouse from Saturday nightuntil Thursday evening almost every cent which he spent can be traced. The sum total was about fourteen or fifteen dollars. Ten dollars he took from the pocket-book of Mr. Deering, together with the pocket-book itself; four more he realized from the sale of the watch of the murdered man. It is in evidence that he had no more money with him and that the satchel with its terrible tell-tale contents, was left as a pledge for a debt incurred in small gambling and drinking. Where then were the two fifty-dollar notes and the twentydollar note which were known to have been in the possession of Miss Dolan? Our theory is that, leaving the house of the Deerings during the day of the murder. he struck for the westward and crossed over into the Twenty-fourth Ward either by the Gray's Ferry bridge or the Penrose Ferry bridge, and setting apart the ten dollars of Mr. Deering and the supposed gold watch for a debauch of a few days, he secreted the one hundred and twenty dollars to pay his expenses to Europe, and then came to the city for "a spree." Every soul of the Deering family was dead and the convenient hay would cover up the dread secret for a time; there would not even be the cry of a little infant to create suspicion, for all were dead, and he would have time for a safe debauch. On Thursday he learned that the crime had been discovered, for he heard the officers of the law inquiring for him, and it was then time for him to look out for his own safety, and telling his old crony that he was going to Germany the day following, he lett nim at tea time and at eight o'clock he was stopped as he was about to cross the Market Street bridge. Take this view of the case, and his strangely careless and aimless wanderings were not without plan and purpose. We believe the one hundred and twenty dollars taken from the murdered girl are now secreted in West Philadelphia, and that this sum was set apart for the final escape to Europe. The story of an accomplice we do not consider worthy of a moment's con-

The Legislature, just before its adjournment, passed unanimously a vote of thanks to Governor Curtin. This, we think, is without a precedent at the end of a second term of office, and as, several times during the war, similar votes were passed, His Excellency must feel highly gratified, especially as on each occasion the honor was wholly unexpected. The Governor's health has been seriously impaired by the excessive fatigues and anxieties he went through during the war. He will leave his office poor in health and in fortune, but with the proud consciousness that he dishis duty faithfully, and that the people, as well as their representatives, are grateful to
