[For the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.] CARL GAERTNER

We hear from reliable sources that Mr. Carl Gaertner, the composer and classical .musician, has been requested to give a Concert before leaving for a visit to Germany. It seems, therefore, an appropriate time to mention some truths regarding this gentleman, that Philadelphians may feel a pride in testifying their appreciation of his labors. Having been a regular attendant of Mr. Gaertner's concerts in this city, I have, by referring to my programmes, facts for every statement I shall make regarding them.

The first performances of Mr. Gaertner in this country were in Boston, and the press of the time supplies us with accounts of the warm reception he met with there. His intimate association with the great masters of Germany was well known, and musicians at once recognized, from his school, his high standing as an artist. He conducted a classi cal Trio Club for several seasons there, introduced Parlor Concerts, upon the plan of the European Court Concerts, and finally became deeply interested in the work of furthering the interests of musical art in the New World.

In 1858 he came to Philadelphia, and since that time he has been a faithful, earnest laborer in the field of art in our city. Working as he has done for a principle, regardless of personal interest, it has ever been his fortune to have others reap plentiful harvests where he has sown in weariness and toil. Yet this has always seemed a matter of indifference to him, for he has been working not for himself but for the art he reveres, and seeing its interests truly advancing, he has cared for nothing more. He has inspired others with a portion of his own enthusiasm; he has made musicians, In fact I could point out the names of many who are now widely known, who owe all their higher cultivation to him. He has taught them, too, to know the dignity of their profession, and to elevate their own positions accordingly. Those who have had the privilege of studying under his direction take pleasure in speaking of the earnestness with which he strives to awaken in his pupils an appreciation of the great-ness of art.

In February, 1859, he commenced at the Academy of Music a series of four subscription classical concerts. These were among the first concerts of purely classical mus the first concerts of purely classical music ever given in public in Philadelphia; but they gave such delight that others, seeing the undertaking was possible, fell to work the next winter on the ground he had prepared. In the first of these concerts, Mr. Gaertner played a difficult violin solo with perfection as to entrance his suditors. such perfection as to entrance his auditors. There was a universal rush to the music stores after this piece, but one after one the violinists returned it; under their hands it did not sound the same as when he played it. This incident is related by one of the principal music dealers of that time. In the winter of 1860, he gave a second series of six concerts at Chickering's rooms, 807 Chesnut street; and in 1861 inaugurated the first classical matinees ever given here.

The first Concert of 1862 was given in March, at the Foyer of the Academy; but the great undertaking of this year was a Festival Concert, given at the Academy of Music, in May, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers. This enterprise was entered upon not only with the spirit of a entered upon not only with the spirit of a true artist, but also with that of a patriot. From the beginning of our national struggle Mr. Gaertner proved himself an enthusiast in the Union cause, giving up pupils who sympathized with the rebellion, and making many enemies by rebuking with his wonted truthfulness those who in word ordeed were false to their country. Concerts for the benefit of the soldiers were then not as much en vogue as they afterwards became, and I regret to say that in a pecuniary point of view this magnificent Festival was totally unsuccessful. At this Concert, we had an opportunity, for the first time, of becoming acquainted with one of Mr. Gaertner's Orchestral compositions. This was a Union Overture, composed for the occasion, ending with a grandly spirited patriotic Hymn. One of our papers, in referring to this composition, says: "In this Overture, Mr. Gaert-ner proves, that, besides the name of conductor, he can lay claims to a higher one that of true, earnest, composer, and thoroughly-cultivated musician, whose profession is to him an art of the most exalted nature, one whose glory sheds its influence over all feeling and sympathetic souls."

In May of 1863, Mr. Gaeriner gave at the Foyer a septette by Beethoven, and played upon his rich-toned Stadivarius, the Mendelssohn Concerto, op. 64, well known as a master-work of the violin, with a pureness of conception and execution to which the only applicable word is "Porcetian Headers". only applicable word is "Perfection. He also played a touchingly-expressive violin solo, of his own composition, "The Soldier's Farewell." In April, 1864, he gave a quintette concert at the Musical Fund Hall, in which he because over the applicate of More which he brought out the quintette of Mendelsoon in A, op. 18, and that of Beetho-wen in E major, op. 29. But the great work was carried out during during the winter of 1864 and 1865. This was the unexampled 3864 and 1865. This was the unexampled enterprise of the twenty-five weekly matiness of classical music, given at the Assembly Buildings, by the "Classical Quintette Club," consisting of Messrs. Carl Gaertner, E. Jarvis, M. H. Cross, C. Plagemann and C. Schmitz, an organization instituted and directed by Mr. Gaertner. During this season he presented to his auditors 4 trios, 4 quartettes and 2 quintettes, by Beethoven; 1 trio, 5 quartettes and 7 quintettes, by Mozart; 2 trios, 1 quartette and 2 quintettes, by Mendelssohn; 5 quartettes, by Hadyn; 1 by Weber and 1 by Gade; 1 quintette, by Spohr; 3 by Onslow; 1 by Veit, besides several duos for violin and piano, amongst others the Schumann sonata, op, 121, and the Beerhoven Kreutzer Sonata sonata, op. 121, and the Beerhoven Krentzer sonata, op. 121, and the Beerhoven Krentzer sonata, which latter is played correctly by but few violinists in the world, as Mr. Gaertner plays it, certainly by very few. He gave besides many violin solos; of which I would mention the "Song Scene," by Spohr, and the concertos in E major and A major, by Rode, as having never hear Spohr, and the concertos in E major and A major, by Rode, as having never been played by any one else. There were also many admirable piano solos played by our talented planist, Mr. Charles Jarvis.

At the close of this season Mr. Gaertner are a grand National Concert, at the Academy of Music, to commemorate the victories of our armies and the coming peace, including a tribute to Mr. Lincoln. The concert opened with the Union Overture, given in 1862; then came a Mendelssohn Concerto finely rendered by Mr. Jarvis, with orchestral accompaniament led by Mr. Gaertner; then Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, under the same conductorship, led as it has never before been led in our city. The chief feature of the evening, however, was a musical drama, composed for the occasion, and which cannot the city. The chief feature of the evening, however, was a musical drama, composed for the occasion, and which cannot be better described than by quoting the words of the programme, and stating that the promise there given was fulfilled with astonishing fire and accuracy. Withis composition is inthere given was fulfilled with astonishing fire and accuracy; "This composition is intended to give a musical picture of the last eventful days in our national history, and was inspired by those feelings that so deeply impress every true patriot. It opens with a Symphonius Introduction, followed by the Soldier's Dream promising victory. Sympnomus introduction, ionowed by the Soldier's Dream, promising victory. A fervent p eyer rises from his lips to heaven for success. Then the Morning Callsounds forth and calls the soldiers to review. The forth and caus the soldiers to review. The different regiments are taking their positions, playing their regimental marches. A camp song follows, and the battle commences. The thunder, roar and confusion finally subside, and the joyful strains vividly portray the accomplianment of the victory portray the accomplishment of the victory which crowns the efforts of our brave army. Amid the shouts of victory suddenly comes the terrible shock which was caused by the murder of our lamented President, Mr.

Lincoln, and the deep sorrow of the nation for him. The finale represents the final triumph of right and liberty against all enemies, and the nation's greatness."

Besides these concerts of his own, Mr Gaertner has assisted in those of Messrs. Cross and Jarvis, afterwards of Mr. Jarvis, given at the Foyer since 1862, leading the concerted music, and occasionally charming the audiones with a million of the surface of the s ing the audience with a violin solo. Since 1858 he has had charge of the Saengerbund which he has elevated to the head of al German singing Societies in Philadelphia, and the members of the association are proud of their director, gratefully ascribing to him as the very soul of their society, all their success. Several years ago, he had charge of the Mænnerchor, which, under his direction, made great improvement. In-deed, it is much to be regretted that it lost the advantages it enjoyed while he was leader, for as the oldest German singing society in the country, it ought to have such a conductor as Mr. Gaertner to keep up the position we would wish it to hold. For one year he directed the Handel and Haydn Society, the members of which speak of him in the highest terms; and undoubtedly Haydn's Creation was never before or since given here with such spirit as under his direction. He has worked, too, with unflag-ging zeal in establishing parlor concerts upon their present footing, and has succeeded in inspiring others with such enthusiasm that in some instances they have for-gotten that he was the originator, and come to look upon the work as their own.

As a teacher both of instrumental and As a teacher poin of instrumental and vocal music, Mr. Gaertner ranks very high. He possesses not only profound learning but a rare gift of imparting his knowledge, is thoroughly acquainted with the mechanism of the human voice, and is always so conscientious and thorough that he has won the vegget of all who are not triflers. As a the respect of all who are not triflers. As a conductor he has such magic power that he conductor he has such magic power that he is able to infuse life and energy into the poorest materials. As a composer he stands very high; those of his orchestral works given in this city are full of spirit and power; his violin solos are soul-stirring, tresh and lovely, two or three in espacial fresh and lovely, two or three in especial without accompaniment, are inexpressibly beautiful. His songs compare with the best classical compositions. In December, 1863, he published a book of songs, entitled the "Christmas Gift," which contains works of deep feeling and strongly marked the of deep feeling, and strongly marked charof deep feeling, and strongly marked character. In every respect they are artistic gems, and the day is coming when they will meet with the appreciation their worth merits. As a violinist he is master of all the technicalities of the instrument, enters with heart and soul into his performances, seems, as it were, to identify himself with the work rendered and create an improve the work rendered, and create an impres-

Knowing this, let us, now that we have the opportunity, rise in force to testify our gratitude for his labors; let us prove that none better than Philadelphians can understand what he has done, and what he is. Without doubt he is a leader and guide whom we cannot easily replace; one whose influence we should greatly miss were he to leave us.

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE.—At the stated monthly meeting of the Franklin Institute jast evening, after the usual business, there was read by the Resident Secretary, Prof. Morton, his report on novelties in Science and the Mechanic arts. In this, among other things, attention was called to the use of cork in place of india rubber for springs of freight cars and the like. This material, or freight cars and the like. This material, strange as it may seem, was found to possess an elasticity and endurance superior to any other substance which has been similarly employed. The President, Mr. Wm. Sellers, remarked, in this connection, that such a spring employed in a machine for forging, and subjected for years to very heavy concussion, had in no respect deterior today. ussion, had in no respect deteriorated and had in fact operated in the most admirable

Some curious observations in astronomy were described which led to an animated discussion. Various experiments and practical deductions of great value, in galvanism and chemical manufactures were then related, and at a late hour the meeting adjourned after a session of great interest and value to those present value to those present.

SALE OF PICTURES.—Mr. Scott's sale of A. S. Robinson's collection of pictures at 910 Chestnut street, was well attended last evening. Some of them brought good prices, but of course, a good many were sacrificed. The highest price ($250) was given for a small landscape, No. 56, by Bodington. A copy of Reidel's "Judith" brought $210. E. Moran's "New York Harbor," painted some years ago, brought $142 50; a small copy of Murillo's "Immaculate Conception," $72 50; "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," a copy of a little picture by Meyer, of Bremen, $100; a "Landscape, with Cattle," by H. C. Bispham, $77 50; "The Approaching Storm," by George F. Bensell, $47 50; two small sea-shore views, by Haseltine, $62 50 apiece; "Lake George," by E. D. Counterfeit Currency.—Before U. S. Commissioner Sergeant, yesterday, Jacob Krips and William Harris were arraigned upon the charge of having in their possession the sum of fifty-seven dollars in counterfeit United States fractional currency notes of the twenty-five cent denomination. Officer Wood, who made the arrest, testified that when the accused were taken into custody one of them attempted to throw away a package containing upwards of $50 of the bogus trash. Krips and Harris were held in $2,000 bail each to answer at court.

COAL HEAVERS' STRIKE,-Some of the coal heavers employed in unloading cars and loading vessels at the Port Richmond coal wharves, are now on a strike and have coal wharves, are now on a strike and have been for several days. It seems that the price of coal has been reduced, and the Reading Railroad Company determined to reduce the wages of the employes there. The men had been receiving thirty cents per hour and five cents were deducted from this amount. The men generally work ten hours per day so that with the new rate they made $2,2 per day. Many refused to work, but their places were soon supplied by the company. The "strikers" have been standing abou the wharves, trying to induce others to join them, but thus far there has been no riotous demonstration. Lieut. Witeraft, with an ample police force, has been on the ground since the strike combeen on the ground since the SUTKE com-menced, in order to prevent any outbreak. Yesterday John McClain was arrested for threatening to kill an old man who was working on one of the wharves, and thereby frightening him away. McClain was taken before Recorder Eneu and was held in $1,500 bail. The railroad company has decided not to employ any of the disaffected men not to employ any or the disaffected men again, and they are gradually leaving the neighborhood. There has been no trouble so far and none is anticipated. The operations of the company have not been interfered with, and in a day or two things on the wharves will no doubt be the same as usual.

SALE OF ITALIAN STATUARY .- Mr. B. Scott, Jr., will have another art sale on Friday morning, at his store, No.1020 Chestnut street. He will sell a fine collection, imported by Viti Brothers, of Italian marble parlor and garden and statuary, vases, parlor and garden and statuary, vases, monumental figures, &c. There is an exquisite reduced copy of Power's Greek Slave in the collection, which is now on exhibition and attracting many visitors to the store.

Press Club.—The regular meeting of the Press Club, yesterday, Mr. C. Souder in the chair, was enlivened by the reading of a spirited and humorous essay, by Mr. William M. Runkel, editor of the Manayunk liam M. Kunkel, editor of the Manayunk Era. His topic was the career of a reporter-soldier in the army, the essayist having served in the light artillery himself. The discourse was listened to with attention, and a lively conversational debate followed.

THE SURVIVOR OF THE DEARING FAMILY.-Mr. John R. Downing, of the stationary and periodical depot, No. 139 South Eighth street, has published an excel-lent photograph of Willie, the only survivor of the family who were butchered in the First Ward. Mr. Downing's establishment is well supplied with everything in his line, and his terms are remarkably reasonable.

INCITING TO RIOT.—Charles Massey and Philip Coleman have been held to bail by Ald. Hutchinson for inciting to riot. It Seems that the Spring Garden and Western Engine Companies came together at Six-teenth and Coates street on Tuesday night, and there was a sort of a running fight. The defendants are alleged to have been participants in the affair.

Picking Pockets.-Two men, namedd Henry Adams and James McCarty, were arrested last evening in Robinson's picture framestore, on Chestnut street, above Ninth, while in the act of picking the pocket of a gentleman. They were locked up at the Central Station, and will have a hearing this isternoon.

SERENADE. - Mr. L. W. Wallazz was serenaded at his residence in the Fifteenth Ward last evening by his friends. Music, vocal and instrumental, was given by the "Philadelphia Vocalists" and an orchestra ed by Prof. A. Roberts. Major W. P. Delaney is believed to have been the "instigaor" of the pleasant affair.

LECTURE BY COL. FORNEY.-At Concert Hall, this evening, Hon. J. W. Forney will lecture, under the auspices of the Banneker Institute, on the question "Has the War for Human Freedom been Fought in Vain?" There will, doubtless, be a grand audience to listen to the views of our eloquent towns-
