The Evidence Closed. Conclusion of Yesterday's Proceedings.

The Court reassembled at three o'clock. Mrs. Dolan was cross-examined—Left Mr. Deering's house to go to Jersey on the fourth of April, he left me on the boat for Burlington; on the Saturday my daughter left she was dressed in a cloak, spotted dress, part silk, and black velvet bonnet; the reason I thought the dirty shirt was Probst's was because he took one of Mr. Deering's shirts and left that in its place; he had Mr. Deering's shirt on when I first saw him after his arrest. [The work clothes of Probst were here shown witness, and she identified them as having seen him wearing them about Mr. Deering's place; these ciothes were found on the premises after the murders; witness identified, also, as belonging to her daughter, some of the jewelry which was found in his carpet bag; she likewise identified both tee pistols as having belonged to Mr.

Deering.]
Willie Deering sworn—I am ten years old; with my father down the neck; [sketch or plan shown;] lived in this one [pointing]; left home Easter Monday and went to my grandfather's, over the Schuylkill; I left my father and mother at home when I left, and the children, John, Thomas, Annie and Emily, and Cornelius Carey; that man over in the dock lived there; my father had a watch; [watch shown] that is it; he wore it in his vest pocket; fastened to it was a gold chain, a thin one; it was not as thick as Miss Dolan's chain; [axe shown;] I know this axe; it is mine; I used it for chopping kindling wood; had dogs—three; I have not been down home since this happened; father had pistols—a big revolver, [pistol identified; small pistol also shown and identified]; the big pistol he beat in under the bed. the big pistol he kept is under the bed; [the prisoner's clothes were shown the witness and were all identified by him as Probat's;] the prisoner slept in the room right before Vou going up stairs toward the stables

Cross-examined—My father had not this chain to which the watch is now attached when I was taken to my grandfather's in West Philadelphia; know the large pistol by the letters on the butt, a "P" and "F," also by the ramred, which comes undone; [the boy showed how it came undone.] The testimony for the commonwealth here closed.

Mr. Wolbert, for the prisoner, said they had no testimony to offer for the defence, and so far as the prisoner's case was concerned it also closed. Mr. Mann said that Mr. Dwight would open for the commonwealth. Mr. Wolbert, on behalf of himself and Mr. O'Neill, his colleague, asked the Court, that after Mr. Dwight concluded, the Court would adjourn until morning, as neither nor his colleague were prepared to go on this afternoon. If the Court would grant the request he pledged himself the speeches of counsel for the prisoner should not occupy longer than an hour and a half.

Judge Allison granted the application.
T. B. Dwight, Esq., then summed up the commonwealth, contending that from a consideration of the evidence, it was clear that the prisoner had murdered not only Cornelius Carey, to which he had confessed, but Christopher Deering, his wife and family, and Miss Dolan, and that the murders were committed deliberately and after careful premeditation. Mr. Dwicht's theory of the content of the cornelius premeditation. Mr. Dwight's theory of the order in which the victims were despatched was that the prisoner first murdered Mrs. Deering, having enticed her to the barn under some pretext; that he then disposed of the children, one by one, in the same manner, and finally, the family at the house being out of the way, he proceeded to the victorial terms of the same manner. ing out of the way, he proceeded to the vicinity of the haystack where Cornelius Carey was at work, where, with the small axe, which the prisoner doubtless carried with which the prisoner doubtless carried with him concealed behind his back, he killed Carey and hid his body under the hay rick. Mr. Dwight argued that then the prisoner waited, how long it is impossible to tell, concealed about the barn, until the return of Mr. Deering with Miss Dolan; that Miss Dolan got out of the carriage and went into the house and up stairs, where she threw off her bonnet, shawl, and furs, and while so in the house it was that Probst, from his place of hiding inside the door of the barn, killed of hiding inside the door of the barn, killed Mr. Deering; that Miss Dolan, thinking it strange to see no one in the house, came down into the yard and to the barn and there fell, the last victim of the murderer.

Mr. Dwight having concluded, the Court adjourned until this morning. Singular Story About the Burdell Mur-

Ger.

[From the Newburyport (Mass.) Herald, April 26th.]

Recently, Charles H. Golden, as he calls himself, a young man not exceeding thirty years of age, committed larceny in Gloucester, Mass., and fled that place. The party who suffered from his depredations obtained the necessary legal mapers in Gloucester. the necessary legal papers in Gloucester, and pursued him. He came to this city, and while he was anxiously looking about the police station to find some officer to serve the coulty never for the county never for the co

the police station to find some officer to serve his papers, the guilty party, Gordon, appeared in sight. Determined not lose his game, though not an officer, he madethe arrest himself, conducted Golden to the lock-up, put him into a cell, fastene the door, and then hunted up an officer to to receive the key. It was afterwards discovered that Golden was guilty of greater crimes here, having committed burglary and being also guilty of larceny in stripping the clothes lines of parties unknown. He was therefore retained here and committed to jail where he now is. to jail where he now is.

When in jail he volunteered to Marshal

When in Jail he volunteered to Marshal Westcott to make confession of his crime, saying that he had carried the burden on his soul long enough; and it was nothing more or less than his knowledge of and contains the confession of the contains the contai nection with the Burdell murder in the city of New York in 1857. His story is that he was then living in New York, a dealer in jewelry, and boarding with Frederick J. Rody, No. 64 James street. He became acquainted with Mrs. Cunningham, and from time to time made her presents; of the property of the propert er presents; often visited the house of Dr. Burdell, where he was intimate with Mrs. Cunningham and her two daughters, frequently stopping there day and night; knew——, who appeared as the particular friend of the elder daughter, while he (Golden) was the lover of the younger, Augusta.

He overheard Mrs. Cunningham and — talking of a child, she saying that if Dr. Burdell was out of the way she could obtain the property. She said that she could not trust Dr. Eckel, who was stopping there, with the job, but Charley (meaning himself) was a good hand and in her confidence. A short time after this conversation on the night of the murder—at which time he was engaged to attend the theatre with Miss Augusta—Mrs. Cunningham held a conversation with him, saying that the property was soon to be hers, inquiring if he had the heart of an ox, and if he would have scruples to commit crime if it would bring him $25,000. "You know, Charley," she continued, "that Dr. Burdell is worth one hundred thousand dollars, and you and Augusta shall have twenty thousand dollars of it." She handed him a dirk, and asked him if he would do anything for Augusta's take. Then, his story is, that he threw the knife upon the table, and soon after left for the theatre, Mrs. C. telling,— that "Charley had caved."

knie upon the table, and soon after left for the theatre, Mrs. C. teiling,—that "Charley had caved,"
On their return, at half-past 1, he noticed the smoky smell in the street, met Mrs. Cunningham with a napkin stained with blood, saw—in his room, the bosom of his shirt stained with blood, as he said from the nose bleed, and went to bed feeling that the murder had been committed. the murder had been committed.

Early the next morning, when there were outcries of murder, Mrs. Cunningham advised him to leave as soon as possible, to get out of New York, and if possible go to England. She gave him $900 to pay his expenses, insisting that he should not visit the house again, saying that the property was hers, but asking his return when the excitement was past. He stopped that night at the Astor House; then at 64 James street, and sailed for New Orleans in the ship More. and sailed for New Orleans in the ship Memphis, Captain Davis, as a sailor.

This is the story as he gives it. It is correct in these particulars—that some person answering to the names he gives, did stop in the places stated, at the time named, and that such a person did sail in the ship and with the captain stated, from New York to New Orleans. It would appear singular if his story was without foundation, that it should be correct in all these particulars. But it will be remembered that in the house, after the murder, was found a shirt covered with blood, marked "Charles Ketcheam," and that during the investiga-tion a letter was sont form of investigation a letter was sent from Cincinnati, signed "Bold Writer," the author of which affirmed the guilt of himself and the innocence of murder of the persons arrested. By those who have examined into the matter, it is believed that the shirt belongs to this person, now calling himself Golden, and that between the time of the murder and some three weeks after, when the ship Memphis sailed, he was in Cincinnati, and did write the letter named, and is himself the murderer of Dr. Burdell. Golden is a man of prepossessing appearance, superior education, and specially gifted in the use of the pencil. He says he was employed as an artist on one of the pic-torials during the war. Whether any further aitention will be given to this matter we do not know. He will probably be sentenced to the State Prison at the coming term of the Court, for crimes that he is known to have committed."

Explosive Qualities of Nitro-Glycerine The Boston Advertiser publishes the fol-

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 29, 1865.—In a recent letter you inclosed me a slip which gave some account of the explosive properties of nitro-glycerine. I had observed substantially the same statement last win-ter, and caused some to be prepared for ex-periment in blasting. The first I knew I had a tremendous explosion in my office. There was not enough of it to take the roof off, but the contents of the bottle were scattered over every square foot of wall and scattered over every square not of wan and ceiling.

I made a trial with similar success, except that the explosion took place out of doors. The practical difficulty in the use of the compound seem to be, that it can only be prepared at a very low temperature, and instantly and violently decomposes with any increase of temperature.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. The report of the Department of Agriculture for the month of March, has just been published. Mr. Newton, the commissioner, says the United States Consul at Hamburg has notified the Secretary of State of his refusal to allow the importation of a lot of bides to this country, which he had reason to believe came from places where the rinderpest prevails. The importation of derpest prevails. The importation of queensware or crockery may bring it here, by the infection of the straw used in packing it in the crates. In many ways, therefore, the liability of its introduction here is great, and this department has brought the matter to the consideration of Congress, in order that an act may be passed providing order that an act may be passed providing for a cordon around every case that might arrive, through importation, into the United States. He says, further, he is clearly of the opinion that there is more danger of the trichine disease now than there has been in any previous year. The statement in relationships and the says are the statement in the says are the says are the statement in the says are the say any previous year. The statement in rela-tion to the present condition of the crops are, as usual, this time of the year, very conflicting; but it is believed that whilst the severe cold has killed the tops of the wheat unprotected generally by snow, the roots have not been killed.
