Congress. Ordered to be printed. Adjourned until Monday. House.—Mr. Morrill gave notice that the bill to amend the Internal Revenue act, which was made the special order for Thursday next, would not be called up till Monday week. Tha House then resumed the considera-Tha House then resumed the considera-Monday week. The House then resumed the considera-tion of the Northern Pacific Railroad bill, and the clerk read the substitute offered by Mr. Stevens, as modified by him. The modifications consist of the following: Strike out section 3, and insert as an addition to section 2, as follows: "And upon failure of the part of the company for the period of ninety days to pay the interest on said stock as the same may mature and become due, the Treasurer of the United States may have power to sell so much o the said lands as reserved as aforesaid, at public auction or private sale, as will reimburse the government for the payment of said interest, provided that said lands shall not be sold for less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre," and also to add to the "Provided further, That at least three-fourths of the Board of Directors shall al-ways be citizens of the United States; and not be called upon to pay the interest on the cost of construction of more than forty miles of said road for the first year, nor for more than one hundred miles additional for the second year, nor for more than two hundred miles additional for the third year, nor for more than two hundred miles additional for the tourth year, and after that time on no more than three hundred additional miles per year till such road is completed." Mr. Bingham addressed the House in sup-port of the bill. He said that the substitute port of the bill. He said that the substitute just read removed and silenced every objec-tion urged by gentlemen who had spoken against the adoption of the measure. The bill should receive the vote of every member of the House. Mr. Rogers (N. J.) next made an argument in support of the bill. He declared that there was no fraud or taint of fraud upon the bill, and there should be no impu-tation on the character of gentlemen who were here urging its passage. Mr. Driggs (Mich.) next addressed the House in support of the bill. He regarded the matter as a national work of great im-portance, and one which members from all ections of the country should sustain. Mr. Grinnell (Ohio) followed on the same The immense grant of land, be said, owned by the company, was not worth more than so much moonshine or clear sky; not worth a penny an acre without access to it by railroad. No man was rich enough to own and pay taxes on it without access to it. Although the Central Pacific Railroad passed his door, he was willing to have the Northern Railroad also constructed, and as many other railroads to the Pacific as could be built. Mr. Wright (N. J.) addressed the House in opposition to the measure, which he de-nominated as a sort of gift enterprise, where much was promised and very little per-formed. He thought it was extremely danformed. The inought it was extremely using gerous for the government to become god-father to all these railroad enterprises. He contended that Congress had no right to give away the national domain, and likened the attempt to the occasion when the devil brought the Saviour to the top of an exceed-ing high mountain, from which he showed him much property, and offered him a very large tract of public land; but our Saviour knew that the devil did not own it, and said to him, "Get thee behind me, Satan." He did not expect so much conscientiousness, however, from this railroad company, which would take all the land offered, although Congress had no right to give it away. He thought that the soldiers were far better en-titled to the bounty of Congress than this railroad company, and he suggested that he had some idea of inviting the Camden and

One of the directors, a large shipping merchant in Boston, had informed him that he was preparing a line of vessels to send to the north of Europe, to take from Germany from Norway, and from Scotland, this very eason, a large number of emigrants to plant along the line of the railroad, and if this bill fulled, it would be the destruction not only of the railroad enterprise, but that of ship ping enterprise. Mr. Banks (Mass.), in reference to the question of Mr. Stevens, as to the character of the gentlemen comprising the Board of Directors, said they were certainly most excellent men; among the best representa-uves of the people of the East, and especially of the city of Boston. There were no more honorable men in the country; none more interested in the welfare of the government and of the people. Mr. Spaulding moved that the bill and pending amendments be laid on the table. Questions of order having been raised as whether Mr. Price could thus be cut out of his right to close the debate, the motion to lay on the table being undebatable, the Speaker decided that although it was the understanding of the House that the pre-vious question was to be seconded, and that the gentleman from Iowa was to close the debate; and although a motion to lay on the table was very rare under such circum-stances, yet the gentleman from Ohio (Mr.) Spaulding,) had the right to make that motion. Mr. Price asked whether he had not the right to the floor for an hour?

The Speaker replied that if the gentleman from Ohio insisted on this motion, that cut off all debate.

Mr. Spaulding did insist on his motion, and called for the yeas and nays on it. The question was taken on the motion to lay on the table, intense interest being man-ifested, as it became evident that the motion was to succeed, and it resulted yeas 76, nay 56. So the bill and amendments were laid
