The New Bulletin Building. The NEW BULLETIN BUILDING is now so nearly completed that the proprietors of the paper expect to take possession of it within a few days. In the summer of 1865 the owners of the BULLETIN purchased the fine Pictou stone building, No. 607 Chestnut street, above Sixth, with a view to locating the establishment permanently at that place. The structure, which was one of the finest private architectural ornaments on the fashionable thoroughfare, had a front of twenty-five feet upon Chestnut street, and it extended back to Jayne street, a distance of one hundred and fifty feet. Notwithstanding the fact that the property was a most desirable one, and that the improvements were of the most elegant and substantial description, it was not adapted, in its original condition, to the purposes for which we designed it, and there was much perplexity as to how the building should be remodeled so as to fit it for the publication office of a daily newspaper. These perplexities reached a sudden and unexpected solution on the night of the first of January last, for at that time the building took fire and it was so nearly utterly destroyed that we experienced none of the old difficulty in rebuilding it in a way to suit ourselves. Our taste of adversity, although involving a considerable immediate pecuniary loss, had its compensation in the fact that we had almost a clear field in which to construct what we desired to make a model newspaper office. We think we have achieved a decided success.

The building as at present constructed is practically two distinct structures which may be kept entirely separate, or be thrown into one, for business purposes. Immediately in the centre of the property a stairway is run up in an area of twenty feet in width and extending entirely across the lot. This stairway divides the two sections of the building, the rear doors and windows of both sections opening upon it and its landings. The area of the stairway is roofed with glass, and by means of this skylight a perfect flood of light is thrown, through the interior of the property, successfully solving the problem of lighting the centre of very deep buildings, and securing complete ventilation as well as light for the entire double structure. The passage from Chestnut street to the stairway is through a hall six feet in width. The hall and the walls of the stairway will be colored in imitation of light granite, and this will be lined in imitation of blocks of stone, giving the whole a massive and elegant appearance.

The entire front building, with the exception of the second-story, will be occupied to subscribe can do so through him, or at by the Evening Bulletin. The pressroom is in the basement, and no pains or expense have been spared to fit it for th important part it has to play in the operations of the establishment. A Harrison boiler is stowed snugly away under the granite side-walk on Chestnut street, and a new and powerful steam engine will supply the motive power for the concern. In the rear of the press there will be ample space for the accommodation of carriers, folders, packers, &c., and for the storage of paper. The publication office will be in an elegant apartment upon the first floor. It has a depth of sixty feet to the stairway already described, and it is as complete in all its appointments as it was possible to make it. Passing through to the stairway and mounting the steps, we first come to a fine spacious room on the second floor, with a wide landing which connects it with a similar apartment in the northern section of the building. This elegant apartment, with the whole of the northern half of the building, will be to rent. In the third story of the front building we Mr. Ruggles. find the editorial rooms. They are divided off, by glass partitions, into apartments for the principal editor, assistant editors and reporters. In addition to the apartments devoted to the occupancy of the persons named, there is a large room which will be fitted up with racks and cases for the reception of files, bound volumes of newspapers, books of reference, &c. Ascending to the fourth and upper story of the front building, we find what we believe to be the finest composing room in the country. It has ample space, while the front and rear windows would furnish quite as much light as is usually found in composing rooms; but in order that there should be no scarcity of this important desideratum, a large skylight has been placed in the centre of the ceiling, and nothing but night or a total eclipse of the sun can cause any failure of the supply of light in this apartment. All the branches of the establishment are connected together by means of dumb-waiters, speaking tubes, &c., and every known facility for the prompt despatch of the business of the establishment has been secured. The apartments in the Northern section of the building are scarcely less desirable than those which front upon Chestnut street. There is a handsome front upon Jayne street; while the wide hall, which opens dimice." rectly upon Chestnut street, affords a convenient and elegant means of access to all parts of the property. Every apartment in both sections of the building is supplied with a water-closet and a stationary wash-basin; while gas pipes ramify the entire structure in order to secure a full supply of artificial light. The Chestnut street front of the property, which shared the fate of the rest of the building, inasmuch as it was mostly destroyed at the time of the fire, has been restored to nearly its original condition. The style of its architecture has been somewhat changed; but the changes have been made with a view to increased elegance and an enlarged practical utility. The building as it stands possesses many advantages over the structure which it succeeded. It is far less exposed to the danger of conflagration; it is much more convenient in its internal arrangements; it is, we believe, faultless in stored.

respect to light and ventilation, and last, but not least, as regards its adaptation to the purposes of the publication office of a newspaper, we believe that it has no equal in Philadelphia and no superior in any part of the world. We expect to publish our issue of Monday, May 7th, in the NEW BULLETIN BUILDING.

The following are the names of the master mechanics to whose skill and faithful performance of their engagements we are indebted for the fine improvement of which we expect soon to enjoy the advantages: Contractor and builder, John Crump. Ornamental stone work, William Gray. Brick work, Joseph Gilbert. Plasterer, William Ballenger. Stair builder, John Yeager. Painting and glazing, Carlile & Joy, Roofing, Brodie & Cummings. Builders' iron work, Royer, Brothers. Ornamental iron work, Robert Wood & Co. Plumber work, John C. Hunter & Co. Boiler, Joseph Harrison, Jr. Steam engine, Morgan & Orr. Brick setting for boiler and engine, Gamon & Harris. Gas fixtures, Miskey, Merrill & Thackera. Office fixtures, George Plowman.

Plumber work for engine and boiler, McCollin & Rhoads. Painting of lower office, J. S. Beam. Sign painting, John Rogers. The entire work was done in accordance with plans furnished by Mr. John Fraser, architect, and under the superintendence of that gentleman. The proprietors of the BULLETIN are also under obligations to Messrs. Elwood Hoffman and Amos Smedley, the attentive lieutenants of Mr. Crump. the contractor, for their watchful care during the time the building has been in progress.

THE ALBION ENGRAVINGS .- Mr. A. Winch, 505 Chestnut street, has made arrangements with the publisher of the New York Albion to supply to subscribers here, upon the receipt of a subscription of six dollars for one year, a choice of any of those splendid steel engravings, taken from paintings by Wandesforde, Landseer, Herring, Stewart, &c. Of the Albion it is unnecessary to speak, as every one at all conversant with the periodicals of the day will not require to be told that its pages are filled with the choice productions of the English press. The establishment has lately passed into new hands, who are determined that nothing shall be spared to add to the already brilliant reputation of the journal. The agent of the advertising department will be Greble, Esq., seven feet by three and a half, and embracing the names of EIGHTEEN young men from Old Pine street Congregation, who fell in the late conflict, will be set up at four o'clock to-morrow afternoon, in the vestibule of the Old Church, corner of Fourth and Pine streets. The'Mayor and several other distinguished gentlemen are expected to take part in the services: to which the public are invited. SALE OF "RUGGLES GEMS."-Mr. Ruggles, the excellent artist, whose little cabinet pictures are so popular, is about to sail for Europe, and he has commissioned Mr. B. Scott, Jr., to sell, at his Art Gallery, No 1020 Chestnut street, a number of his beantiful gems. The sale will take place tomorrow evening, and in the meantime the pictures are on exhibition. Among them are the best we have ever seen painted by

The dying light of day breaking through the foliage of the forest trees; the meflow effect of the sky, and the winding of the glittering river in the far distance, are all worthy of admiration; and yet, had a more careful treatment of the foreground been adopted (Lot. however, to interfere a more careful reatment of the foreground been adopted (not, however, to interfere with the general effect), we have no hesita-tion in saying that an immense improve-ment would have rewarded the artist's ad-

The qualities that distinguish the works of this artist are most admirable: Firmness of touch, exceeding richness in the fleah tints, accuracy of drawing-all these are to be found in the portrait group that hangs above Whittridge's contribu-tion. We are indeed pleased to be able to conscientionally compliment the creater of conscientiously compliment the creator of such meritorious productions. Mr. Milne Ramsey is especially represented in No. 653 and No. 701, "Still Life," They are the best specimens of Mr. Ramsey's ability that we have yet seen, the latter being remarkably good. As an example of grape painting it is (to speak emphatically,) hard o beat. The Echo (Home, Sweet Home), is a large picture by A. F. Bellows of New York. There are many traits of great beauty in this conception, the painter having evidently entered thoroughly into the spirit and feel-ing of the subject. The quiet calmass of the lake, the graceful foliage of the trees in the middle distance, and the everlasting glory of the far-off mountains crowned with agent of the advertising department will be a nimbus of mellow sunlight, combine to here for a short season, and those wishing make a most attractive picture. The pleasure we derive from its contemplation renders us averse to fault-finding, and yet, we cannot refrain from criticising a certain wooliness and indecision of touch that mar the general effect. No. 740, in the same gallery, is by Henri-etta Bonner. The charming simplicity of the subject, together with its admirable technical qualities, render it very popular. No. 755, by T. J. Fenimore, is one of the best landscapes that we have seen by him. The atmospheric effect is not out to a supOFTY BULLETIN.

The Annual Exhibition of 1866. We resume our notes of some of the works on exhibition at the Academy: No. 640, Morning on the Conemaugh, W. H. Wilcox. We have closely observed this picture in our various visits to the Academy in the endeavor to seize some points of merit that would give evidence of the artist's usual ability. Candidly, our search has been in vain. The work can neither be traised as good, nor blamed as decidedly bad. It is tantalizingly medicore. We have had proofs of this artist's ability in former exhibitions. Why has he failed this time? I det us add that we should be delighted to have an opportunity of giving Mr. Wilcox the most favorable critique that we are ca-pable of writing. A fine effective picture, by Whittridge, occupies a distinguished position in the ex-bibitios. The dying light of day breaking through the foliage of the forest trees; the meflow effect of the sky, and the winding of the glittering river in the far distance are all worthy of admiration; and yet, had a more careful treatment of the foreground than a admiration; and yet, had a more careful treatment of the foreground the an admiration; the foreground the partice fore the forest trees; the meflow effect of the sky, and the winding of the glittering river in the far distance are all worthy of admiration; and yet, had a more careful treatment of the foreground the neglow floct of the sky, and the winding of the glittering river in the far distance are all worthy of admiration; and yet, had a more careful treatment of the foreground the an admiration; the far distance the produced the foreground the partice fore the forest trees; the meflow effect of the sky, and the winding the and a dative decore. a more careful treatment of the foreground been adopted (Lot, however, to interfere with the general effect), we have no hesita-tion in saying that an immense improve-ment would have rewarded the artist's ad-ditional labor. "Disappointed" is the subject of a fair contribution by Carl Hoff. The principal from the porch of her cottage, upon the has of course proved faithless. The paint-ing of the girl is less successfully treated than the accessories. THE POPULAR VERDICT .--- The voice of the people is said to have a very profound significance in all important cases, and it is generally supposed to be perfectly correct in its conclusions. CONFISCATION proceedings in the United States District Court at Jacksonville, Florida, have been stopped by an order from President Johnson. All the property of the rebels now in the possession of the government authorities will be immediately re-

The atmospheric effect is not quite as successful as we could wish, being a little too cold in general tone. Apart from this, it is cold in general tone. Apart from this, it is undoubtedly a creditable work of art. Mr. Gerlach, who is a yoang German, lately from Dusseldorf, contributed two works to this collection. The committee, not content with taking the pictures in, thought it proper, in consideration of his being a stranger among us, to serve the art-ist in the same way, and most effectually have they succeeded, both his productions being hung so high that their merits are totally lost in the dim distance of the posi-tions they respectively occupy. Mr. Ger-lach intends taking up his abode perma-nently in our city and deserved a better fate than the one he received. The landscapes we speak of are numbered 756 and 558 in the catalogue. We cannot omit the mention of Miss Mary

Smith's pleasing little chicken pictures. They are so generally popular that the art public will be pleased to learn that two of her best realizations have good places in the northeast gallery. Some quiet lovely little renderings of nature, by Nanthus Smith, attract deserved attention. We admire the spirit in which they are executed, and expect great things from this prominent young artist. The Snow Scenes, by V. de V. Bonfield, are exceedingly true to nature. They are among the pictures we have specially marked in our catalogue, in order that upon each visit we may not forget to pay our re-spects to the contributions of an artist whose talent equals his modesty. The Thracian Archer (whose accuracy of eye was so great that when contemplating eye was so great that when contemplating the assassination of a king, he fearlessly in-scribed upon his arrow, "The right eye of Philip!") could not in his palmiest days have excelled the justness of our aim in sending the friendly shafts of criticism against many little negligences that have rendered the Academy of Fine Arts useless to that class for whose aid and protection it was specially founded, namely Pannagiwas specially founded, namely, Pennsylvania artists.

Vania artists. New Jersey Matters. A LULL.—A lull seems to have taken place in reference to the proposed charges in the Go-vernment incumbents in Canden, the matter having gone about as far as it can until Congress ratifies the polatiments of the new nominees. The great aim and object seems to have been the removal of Mr. Forter, elerk under Mr. Sharpe, Internal Revenue Collector. by James M. Scovel, in consequence of a personal dislike, the redoubtable James, the Less, has entertained for some time. As Mr. Sharpe refuses to remove him and the probability is that the Senate will not confirm a successor to Mr. Sharpe, as well as the Postimaster here, it is very evident some time will elapse before Mr. Scovel can carry out to the letter the terms of his bargain and sale with the Copperheads at Washirgton. A number of prominent genitemen, be-longing to the Union Party, have gone to Washington, where the entire animus of Scovel will be explained, and his duplicity unveiled. BOTS BEWARE.—For a long time past a and his duplicity unveiled. BOTS BEWARE.—For a long time past a gang of rudeand disorderly boys have been in the habit of visiting Camden on Sonday for the purpose of playing ball. They commit all kinds of depredations, knocking palings off fences, &c., and using the most prefane language. They bring bottles of liquor with them, and are often intoxicated. The police are de-termined to put a stop to this violation of the Sabbath, and have, in several instances, enforced the ordinance against it. On Sunday aftersoon, about thirty arrests were made, and theold city juil last night was pretty well filled with these offenders. This morning the good advice, which it is to be hoped will be of future service to them.
