EVENING BULLETIN.

THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1866.

prefers them roasted. He cultivates them in all parts of the world and does not care for the expense of preparing hot ashes with his own sensitive fingers. He has induced various people, such as the Danes, the Italians, the Southern Confederacy, and others, to inflict terrible burns upon themselves for his benefit, by promises of a substantial co-operation, or an equal division of the profits, "keeping the word of promise to their ear and breaking it to their hopes." But like all other clever tricks, too frequent repetition has destroyed the magic spell and disclosed the secret of the performance. Commodore Rodgers, as gallanta sailor as carries the "Stars and Stripes" around the world, has given John Bull

"a bit of his mind," on this subject, so characteristically bluff and pointed as to leave no doubt as to his ideas of fair play.

destruction of the defenceless city of Valparaiso, he urged upon the British Admiral the propriety of interfering in its behalf. He pledged himself to dispose Numancia without British aid, and no one who knows either Commodore Rodgers or the Monadnock will doubt his ability to keep his word. He pressed upon Admiral Denman the great preponderance of English interests in Valparaiso, and, with his little fleet, offered to bear the brunt of the responsibility. His official report shows at once the timid vacillation of the British Admiral and the evident contempt with which our American sailors held him. The Commodore says: "The English Admiral said, at first, that he would go with me, for I plainly declared that I would not take a step without him. I said that I had no intention of becoming a catspaw to draw European chestnuts out of the fire, and then have the Powers I served laughing at my singed paws, while they enjoyed the fruits of my temerity."

without firing a shot. The Spaniard has more temerity than wisdom, but he would never have dared to throw a shell across an American or British ship into the town. John Bull would have had no objection to Commodore Rodgers taking that risk, but he lacked the pluck, upon which he is so wont to vaunt himself, to take it himself. This contrast between American boldness and British timidity will be a galling thing for the English people, while it will add to the laurels that the American sailor gathers from every occasion where he has an opportunity to exercise his coolness, his gallantry, and his independent manli-

THE BECONSTRUCTION QUESTION. If it be true that the members of the Cabinet have all, or nearly all, given their adhesion to President Johnson's reconstruction policy, and declared their hostility to the report of the Committee of Fifteen, it is a new illustration of the old adage, "Put not your trust in politicians." Mr. Seward and Mr. Welles have for some time sided with the Presdent; but what has brought Mr. Stanton around? The Johnson men have all along been clamoring for his removal, as a declared enemy of the President's plan. Hisradicalism has been as much complained of as that of Mr. Sumnerand Mr. Stevens, and the rumored sudden conversion to the so-called "conservatism" is a mystery that needs explanation.

The so-called change in the views of Mr. Stanton and the other cabinet ministers, heretofore regarded as radicals, puzzles the Copperheads as well as the Republicans. They do not like to praise the men they have denounced so bitterly. They wanted their places vacated, to be filled by men of their own opinions, and with this change of views, all hope of this vanishes. The question arises, now that the cabinet is represented to be a unit on the question of reconstruction, who is to yield, the President and Cabinet, or Congress? There is no probability of either yielding everything; but there is no reason why each should not yield something. The President has no right to insist on the immediate unconditional restoration of the Southern traitors to every right and privilege that the most loyal people possesss. The majority in Congress need not adhere strictly to the report of the Committee. There must be a compromise of some kind, and thesooner one is determined upon the better. In the meantime, why do not the copperhead organs begin their eulogies of Secretary Stanton? It is evident that they have not yet full faith in the report that he has gone over to the President's views. But if they think he has, we suggest that to Secretary Stanton be assigned the duty of preparing a plan of reconstruction.

THE STATE CAMPAIGN.

In a few weeks the Gubernatorial campaign in this State will open in earnest. From all sections of the interior we have reports of the most capital feeling on the part of our friends, and a determination to sweep the State for Geary with overwhelming majorities. Colonel Frank Jordan, the Chairman of the State Central Executive Committee, is now in Philadelphia, and has established his headquarters at the National Union Club, where he may be seen until Saturday of this week. He is actively engaged in organizing the

THE UNKNOWN DEAD. The Coroners of New York have commenced the publication, in the newspapers of that city, of full descriptions of the persons, dress, &c., of the bodies of the unknown dead that are interred by them. This publication is made in accordance with the provisions of a recent law of the Legislature of that State. The example of our neighbor, in this respect, is worthy of imitation in Philadelphia. Under the administration of our present excellent Coroner, good order and regular system are the rule in the management of the business of the office. Careful records are kept, and persons who may miss friends can tell by examining the books kept at the office whether they have come within the notice of the Coroner. But, we are sorry to say, good order and system have been the exceptions, and incompetency, confusion, and carelessness have been too apt to be the rule in the administration of the office of Coroner, and, in the uncertainty of party politics and elections, we do not know how soon we may have a careless or an incompetent official to hold this important office.

As the laws stand at present the newspaper reporter is the volunteer medium who is depended upon for giving publicity to the descriptions of unknown bodies, and they do not general y so describe them unless there is an unusual degree of interest or mystery about the case. A regular systematic advertising of these descriptions would relieve the news columns of the papers of the day, of matter that should occupy space in the portions of the journals that are appropriated to advertisements; and it would serve the cause of humanity by relieving the suspense of friends, and by clearing up mystery more promptly than would otherwise be done.

In Paris the bodies of the unknown dead are exposed at the Morgue, where every provision is made for their temporary preservation, and every facility is afforded for their prompt recognition. Such an institution is better suited to the banks of the Seine, than it is to the shores of the Delaware, and the desired end could usually be secured quite as well by a correct description, widely circulated through the agency of the news, paper press. We repeat that the example of New York, in this respect, is worthy of imitation.
