THE DAILY EVENING BULLETIN : PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1866.

XXXIXth Corgress-First Session. CLOSE OF YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.]

SENATE.-Mr. Howard (Mich.) introduced a bill regulating the service of final process in suits of law and orders and decrees in equity of courts of the United States in places out of their jurisdictional limits. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Mr. Dixon (Conn.)gave notice of his intention to offer an amendment to the bills and resolutions reported by the Joint Committee on Reconstruction, and as a substitute therefor, as follows:

Hesolved, &c., That the interests of peace and the interests of the Union require the admission of every State to its share in public legislation whenever it presents itself, not only in an attitude of loyalty and harmony, but in the persons of representatives whose loyalty cannot be questioned under any constitutional or legal test. Upon this Mr. Dixon asked leave to make a few remarks, and prefaced them with a leading article upon reconstruction from the New York Post. He then said, what I have read seemed to me so wise and just that I adopted it as the best expression which I can make of my own views. It is the lead-ing article in the New York Evening Post of May 1st, a journal which certainly is not excelled in ability, patriotism and influence by any newspaper in the country. Coming from such a source, I cannot but hope that these wise, calm and statesmanlike views may have some influence even on this body, as they certainly will have among the in-telligent people of the United States. They express, in my judgment, the resolute con-victions of thinking men, and will, so soon as public opinion can legitimately declare itself, take the form and be clothed with the authority of public law. Mr. Fessenden (Me.)—I wish to make a single remark on the proposition of the Senator from Connecticut. He thinks that these remarks, which he read from the New York Post, are so very wise and so very just that he has some hope that they may not be without their effect, even upon the members of this body, thus intending to in-timate that the last place where wise and just measures would be supposed to have any effect would be upon the members of this body. Six we have not intermediate this body. Sir, we have not given ourselves over to the keeping of the Senator from Connecticut, or those who act with him. We do not pretend to any particular wisdom, or particular sense of justice; but we who are on the committee, and who are more immediately referred to by the remark, feel that at any rate we have tried to do our duty. We have been in session a considerable length of time (not longer than we deemed it absolutely necessary), in order to reach a conclusion, and in reaching that conclusion we have been obliged to take into consideration a great many things; first, what would be wise, and just to do, and in the next, what, if it is wise and just, we can do-what would be acceptable, in the first place, to Congress, and in the next place what would be acceptable to the people. The propositions in that committee led to considerable difference of opinion. The differences of opinion had to be reconciled. We did not suppose that the scheme as pre-sented would be exactly in all particulars what suited, perhaps, a large number; but the question was not one of mere personal opinion, or mere adherence to personal feeling; and the committee, after much deliberation, came to the conclusion that its duty was to agree upon the best scheme upon which they could get to anything like a conclusion. The proposition made by the honorable Senator from Oregon, this morning, would indicate, for instance, that he is a not exactly suited with the results to which the committee came; and really, with all respect to my friend from Oregon, I beg leave to say that when that committee, after great deliberation, has come to a conclusion moment. These States are to be represented in the other House and in this body after having accepted these terms, and still these representatives are to be chosen with-out the votes of the people. I would ask who is to vote? The colored men cannot vote, Take North Carolina and Mississippi who is to vote. vote. Take North Carolina and Mississippi and Georgia, who is to choose representa-tives in those State? I will not say it is a mockery, because my respect for the com-mittee forbids; but I must say that it does to ma that no man can expect that any seen to me that no man can expect that any of there States will ever accept the terms proposed. I agree with the Evening Post on that point. I will say further that I am not sure they should accept it. "Mr. Fessenden—I wish to ask the Senator a question. I have the impression that President Johnson has said over and over President Johnson has said over and over again that the government of the States ought to be exercised by the loyal portion— those who have been loyal to the Union. Mr. Dixon—In the first place, I beg leave to say to the Senator from Maine that it makes no difference in forming my opinions that the President or any other man says so. If the President had said so it would not be of binding authority on me unless my judgment approved it. In the next place, I say that I agree with the sentiment, not because the President said it, but because I believe it is a correct sentiment. But that is not what the report says. The committee does not say that only loyal men can vote. I know the President says that, everybody says it who thinks as I do; but the question is what is a loyal man?

question is what is a loyar man r Mr. Fessender-Did he not say those who had been loyal-"those who had not parti-cipated in the rebellion should be those cipated in the rebellion should be these intrusted with the government?" Was not that his recommendation in regard to Ten-Mr. Dixon, in reply, said that he meant those who were loyal at the time of their readmission. He would not say that it was not correct to disfranchise certain leaders; but that to disfranchise a whole people would be impolitic and unwise. Mr. Grimes (Iowa) said there seemed to be some controversy as to what were the views of the President of the United States. From the peculiar position which Mr. Dixon occupied towards the President, he thought he (Mr. Dixon) ought to be inform-ed on the subject. He desired to know from him whether an article in the National In-telligencer of this morning, which he un-derstood was telegraphed to the country last night, represented the views of the President. It purported to give the proceedings of a Cabinet meeting, at which the late report of the Reconstruction Committee was discussed. If he (Mr. Grimes) understood the force of language, this was not the posi-tion of the President heretofore.

If he understood the subject, the Presi-dent now insists that these States shall be immediately represented: that they are en-titled under the Constitution to immediate representation upon this floor and in the other House; that no antecedent condition should be imposed, and that his Cabinet concurs in that opinion. He (Mr. Grimes) supposed that was the proposition just put forth from the White House in opposition to the report of the Committee of Fifteen, the immediate unconditional admission, without any terms or conditions, of the representatives from those States. Mr. Dixon-The Senator from Iowa intimated in his opening remarks that I had ome peculiar knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the President's views. He spoke of the peculiar relations in which I stand to the President. The Senator is entirely mistaken in regard to that. My relations to the President are precisely similar to those of the Senator himself. I have seen the President but once within the space of two months, and then for not over five minutes. I take his views from his written published statements. Mr. Grimes-If the Senator will excuse me, the very fact that the Senator's resolution was identical in spirit and almost in erms with the language attributed in the

be postponed as far as possible to the end that all just influences may be allowed to come to Congress from the country, and that Congress itself may be inspired by the fullest and amplest consideration of the whole question. Why, sir, where is the evi-dence that has been taken before this committee? We have not seen it together yet. That ought to be got together. It ought to be laid before the country, and we ought to get from the committee that just influence which the circulation of that evidence is cal culated to cause. I am sure, wherever that evidence is read, people will say Congress is justified in insisting upon security for the future. To that end, I take it, the evidence was taken; and I hope that Congress will not act until we get from the country the legitimate influence of that evidence. But, sir, allow me to say, by way of comment on the proposition of the Senator from Connec-ticut, that it seems to me my excellent friend when he proposition when he brought forward his proposition, forgot two things. Mr. Dixon—I forgot more than that prob ably. Mr. Sumner-Hesays probably more than Mr. Sumner-Hesays probably more than that, yet two things especially he forgot, which are so essential that to forget them which are so essential that to forget them war to forget everything. In the first place, he forgot that we had been in a war. In the second place, he forgot that four millions of human beings had been changed from a condition of slavery to a condition of free-dom. Mr. Summer dwelt briefly upon these two points, urging that a proposition for reconstruction should embrace security for the future and of protection to the freed-men. men,

Mr. Dixon-One word in reply to the Senator from Massachusetts, with the con-Senator from Massachusetts, with the con-sent of the Senate. The Senator says that I have forgotten many things, and among others the guarantees required by the four millions of slaves who have been emanci-pated. I desire to ask the Senator what guarantee those persons have in the propo-sition reported by the committee. The Senator exhausted all the terms of the Eng-lish language in denouncing a resolution which was before the Senate some time since, and which contained the only guarsince, and which contained the only guarantee for the colored race that is contained in this report. The only guarantee which he says he keeps constantly in his mind, and which I have forgotten, contained in this report, is that providing that if those persons are not allowed to vote in the States in which they reside they shall not be counted in the apportionment of representa-

The Senate has not yet forgotten that the choes are still ringing in this hall of what the Senator said in regard to that proposi-tion. If the English language contains any term of reproach, if it can be carried into any form or shape of opprobrium which he did not exhaust on that subject, and some of which my friend from Maine (Mr. Fessenden) cited as beauties of rhetoric, I am senden) cited as beauties of rhetoric, 1 am mistaken. I think he could have gone no further in denoucing that very proposition which is the only guarantee in this report: and yet he says I have forgotten that they require guarantees. I beg leave to remind the Senator that he too has forgotten his commends on that such as own words on that subject. Mr. Sumner-Not at all.

Mr. Sherman inquired if there was any question before the Senate.

The Chair said there was not. Mr. Sherman call d for the regular order.

Mr. Guthrie (Ky.) introduced a resolution for the codification of the laws relating to customs. Referred to the Committee on Commerce, The Postoffice Appropriation bill was ta-sm equally sure that if the committee had postponed their report until the last week of May, they would have made a better one than they have made in the last week of April. I hope, therefore, following out that idea, that the decision on this question will be postponed as far as possible to the end thet all inst infurences may be allowed to MALAWARE MINING COMPANY OF MI S. upon a subject, which conclusion has been assented to and reported, that at any rate the members of the commute should as stain from pressing individual views to in-fluence the general action of the body. It tends at once to weaken the report itself. I accede, sir, to what has been said by the honorable Senator (Mr. Dixon) with regard to the eminent standing of the press from which he has read; but, sir, eminent as it is, I think it is not immodest on the part of the Committee of Fifteen, selected with very considerable care, and, with one exception, perhaps, [laughter], gentlemen who are eminently fit for the position which was assigned to them-it is not, I say, very imlest in them to suppose that, after months of deliberation, after great care and reflection, after careful examination of the subject before them, not only as to what it was wise to do, but as to what could be done-it is not immodest to say that their opinions anited, or the opinions of a very large ma-jority of them, might be supposed to come somewhere near in wisdom the opinions of an individual who may write for a newspaper. Mr. Dixon—I suppose the Senator from Maine did not intend, in his opening re-marks, to question my right to offer the amendment? Mr. Fessenden-Not at all. I only sug-

Mr. ressence -- tot at an. 1 only sug-gested to the Senator that when he stated that the wisdom of those remarks of the Post might be hoped to have some effect upon this body, it was rather an inti-mation that this body could not be expected to act wisely and justly. Mr. Dixon-The word "even," as used by me, may have, I think, a different mean-ing from what the Senator supposes, My meaning was that these remarks ought to have influence even upon so distinguished and so wise a body as this. But I will con-sent to strike out the word "even" if it is an offence to the Senator.

Mr. Fessenden- Not at all.

Mr. Dixon—I meant to say, and I now repeat, that, even in such a body as the Senate of the United States, words of wisdom like those might have their effect. I certainly would be the last person to reflect on the Senate, or to reflect on the committee. But I suppose I have a right to say that I do not think the report of the committee con-tains all the wisdom which even may exist in the Senate or in the committee itself. Now, Mr. President, I beg leave to say a

Now, Mr. President, I beg leave to say a word with regard to that report. As to the measures which the committee have pro-posed (but for my great respect for the members of the committee and its chair-man, and even if I were not forbidden by my knowledge that they are incapable of such a thing), from the bare reading of their reported resolutions I should suppose that. as this writer intimates whose language I have adopted, the object of the report was to present a scheme which could not be ac-cepted. I am forbidden to entertain such cepted. I am forbidden to entertain such an opinion by my great respect for the committee. I know they are incapable of apything of the sort, and I therefore am obliged to suppose they thought this might be accepted; that it might possibly, under some supposable circumstances close the the agitation which is prevailing on this subject, and result in the readmission of members from the rebel States. That, no doubt, was their intention.

But I beg leave to say that it seems to me that it is utterly impossible that that should ever be the effect of it. For example, al-low me to particularize. After the States have accepted these terms, after they are represented in this body and in the House of Representatives for a period of nearly four years, if they accept the proposition next fall they are to be denied the right of voting for their own Representatives in Congress, for we are told every day—and I believe it is to a certain extent true in some States—that the whole mass of the people participated in the rebellion, or at least in the language of the report, "adhered to it." The language of the report not only excludes those who were original conspirators, but also those who may finally have adhered to the rebelion. Now consider the proposition for a National Intelligencer this morning to the President led me to the inference.

Mr. Dixon-If it is identical in spirit, then the Senator, is mistaken in another point, when he says that the President has now when he says that the resident has now taken new views and new grounds. He says that the language attributed to the President in the paper from which he has read is identified in spirit with the resolution that I have offered. My resolution is taken from the President's veto message of the Freedmen's Bureau bill more than two months ago; so that the Senator will see that he is mistaken in supposing that there has been any change in the President's views if mine are identical with his, and I do not suppose there has been any change. I do not suppose that the President has changed from the views contained in that resolution. I copied the resolution from the words of the President contained in the veto message, because I thought they were extremely well expressed, and because they were my views.

were my views. Now, I desire to say, with regard to this resolution of mine, that I have not offered it in consequence of any consultation with any human being. I have not seen the President nor any member of the Cabinet, nor any human being with regard to it. I read this article in the Evening Post, and it struck me as being true, and as coming from a source entitled to great weight and authority. I knew it would be respected by this body, from the character of the writer. I thought it correct, and it was exactly in accordance with my sentiments. exactly in accordance with my sentiments. Mr. Dixon made some further remarks in advocacy of the resolution he had offered. Mr. Grimes-I did not intend to convey Mr. Grimes—I did not intend to convey the idea that the Senator from Connecticut has a master; but I submit, after all he has said, whether I was not perfectly justified in saying that peculiar relations subsisted between him and the President, when he himself admits that he went not only for the spirit but for the identical language of his resolution to the celebrated veto message of the Freedmen's Bureau bill. Mr. Dixon said it was not uncommon for a resolution to be offered in language taken from a President's message. Mr. Sumner (Mass.) rose. Mr. Sherman called for the regular order, which was the Post-office Appropriation

Mr. Sumner-I shall say but a few words I would observe that the question involved in this proposition of the Senator is so im-portant that it may be considered as per-haps always in order to discuss it. I don't haps always in order to discuss it. I don't know that we ought to pass a day without introducing it in some way. I certainly do not deprecate this discussion, but while I say that I am very positive on another point, I deprecate any effort now to pre-cipitate a decision on that question; and I most sincerely hope that the Senator from Maine, the Chairman of the Committee of Reconstruction, will bear that in mind. I do not believe that Congress at this mo-ment is in a condition to give the country the best proposition on this question. I am the best proposition on this question. I am afraid that excellent committee has listened too much to the voices from without, insisting that there must be an issue presented to the country. For myself, I have always thought that call was premature. There is no occasion now for an issue to be presented. There are no elections now pending in any of the States. The election in Connecticut is over, The election in New Hampshire is over. There are be no elections before next autumn; and what is the occasion now for an issue to be presented to the country? I see none unless Congress, after the most mature and careful discussion of the whole subject, is able to present an issue on which we can all honestly and as one phalanx go forward to battle. Now, sir, I do not in-tend to be drawn into any premature dis-cussion of the issue presented by the report of the Committee on Reconstruction. I merely speak now to the question of time, a we that that report pould not have

The Postonice Appropriation bill was ta-ken up as the unfinished business. The pending question was upon the following amendment of Mr. Trumbull: "No person exercising or performing the duties of any office which by law is re-quired to be filled by the advice and consent of the Senate, shall, before his confirmation by the Senate, argeive any solution or account of the Senate argeive any solution or account of the Senate argeive any solution or account by the Senate argeive any solution of the Senate argeive ar by the Senate, snan, before his communication pensation for his services, unless he be com-missioned by the President to fill up a va-cancy occurring by reason of death, resig-nation or expiration of term of office during the recess of the Senate and since its last adjournment, or removed for acts done in violation of the duties of his office; the case and cause of removal to be reported to the Senate at its next session. After debate by Messrs. Howe and Guthrie, the amendment was adopted by the following vote—yeas19; nays 11.
