518 MARKET STREET. JEFFERSON DAVIS'S TRIALS. Mrs. Jefferson Davis was suffer'd to go
And visit her husband at Fortress Monroe,
And they call'd (of course) one another dears, And the "statesmen stern" was melted to tears-Said, "Affliction sore, long time he bore,"
And he'd rather not suffer any more, That it wasn't right, but decidedly wrong To shut him up in that casemate strong. Mrs. D., to settle the statesman's gall, Said, "My dear, you'll never be tried at all.
"And"—here Jeff. D. turn'd round to his wife And said. "I am tried every hour of my life: "I'm tried by the fare, I hate the grub,
"And the water sometimes is as clear as mud;
"But the sorest trial they've put me through Since the time I was torn away from you, "The worst privation I've had to endure, "Was my keeper's refusal to procure
"From the "STAB," that house of increasing note, "A pair of Pants and a Vest and Coat. "For I read the papers and all say go

EVENING BULLETIN.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1866.

FUNDING THE NATIONAL DEBT. Mr. Sherman's bill to fund the various issues of Government securities, and issue a new loan, with interest at five per cent. per annum, has now been sometime before the public. The present condition of our debt, which was created under the pressing emergencies of war, is such as to operate badly upon the government as well as upon the people. For a large part of the debt the government pays a higher rate of interest than banks and individual bankers pay, and higher than is legal under most of the State laws. A vast amount of capital that would be employed in private enterprises, for the benefit of the whole community, is consequently absorbed in the seven-thirty or the six per cent. gold interest bonds of the United States.

The funding of the debt, in accordance with Mr. Sherman's plan, would convert it into something similar to the British "Consols," though the interest on them is only three per cent. per annum. But it would make all the government securities uniform, as the consols are. The bill before Congress makes such provisions as ought to be satisfactory to the holders of bonds now paying a higher rate of interest, and we presume that in the course of its passage it will receive such minute examination as will lead to new guarantees that the people will not suffer by the change. That they will all benefit by the reduction of the public debt, and the diminished taxation that is sure to follow, can. not be doubted. A government like ours should never hereafter pay a higher interest than five per cent. per annum. The trial that it went through in the four years' war has established its credit so securely that it could go into the market for a new loan at as low a rate as any Government in the world. It was all very well, during the war, to offer seven and three tenths, or six per cent in gold. But the war has established the Union as a perpetual institution, and the financial stability of the Union is as firm as the political. We. therefore should never go above five per cent. interest in any future loans, and as rapidly as it can be done with safety, the present indebtedness should be funded and a uniform one of five per per cent interest be substituted. The measure introduced by Mr. Sherman is not a partisan one. It will operate on all sections and all classes alike, and it has received the approval of leading Democrats as well as leading Republicans. Some modification in the details of the bill may be needed; but the bill, in something like its present shape, should be passed without unnecessary

POLICE DUTY.

We observe by an an advertisement that "The Citizens of Philadelphia" are to give a "Complimentary Testimonial to Mr. James Dorsey, the captor of Probst," at Concert Hall. We do not know anything about Mr. James Dorsey, except that he is a member of the Sixth District Police, and one of three officers concerned in the arrest of the murderer Probst. He may be, and probably is, a worthy and excellent officer, as we believe is true of most of the present police force, and would probably always do his duty, when his services were called for. But it is a practical question whether there is any propriety, whatever, in giving complimentary testimonials to Mr. Dorsey or any other officer for the performance of a very simple, obvious and easy duty. While the officers who arrested Probst would have deserved the severest punishment if, by their negligence or want of intelligence, they had permitted him to elude them, we cannot approve of the idea that there was anything in the fact or circumstances of the arrest entitling Officer Dorsey or his colleagues, to public demonstrations or pecuniary rewards. By the Act of Consolidation the principle is clearly established that police officers are not entitled to rewards which may be offered by the authorities for the apprehension of criminals. This provision is based upon the simple theory that a police officer does nothing but his duty in doing all that he possibly can in the detection and arrest of such characters.

In the case we are referring to, there is an additional objectionable feature in the fact that the officer who is the object of this demonstration is placed by it in quite a false position before the public. So far as we have been able to ascertain the facts of the case, they go to show that the chief credit of the arrest is due to another officer, named Thomas Weldon, an old and experienced member of the police force, at whose instigation Dorsey pursued and overtook Probst. In the Mayor's official order, Weldon is named first and Dorsey second, and while both should be commended as active and valuable officers, the "Dorsey testimonial" looks like an attempt on the part of that officer and his friends to monopolize credit which, in fact, is shared by two of his brother officers, and by at least one of them, in larger measure than justly belongs to himself.

WASHING PAVEMENTS. Mayor McMichael has given notice that the ordinance forbidding the washing of the sidewalks between the hours of seven A. M. and seven P. M. will be strictly enforced. This wholesome arrangement will enable citizens to walk through town dry-shod during a reasonable portion of the day, and while Bridget is restrained from scattering the limpid element in season and out of season, to the damage of trails, tempers and trousers, a judicious economy is enforced in respect to the too free use of the Schuylkill at a time when there is the heaviest drain on the reservoirs. Death of I. P. lintchinson. Philadelphia has lest one of her oldest and best citizens in the death of Israel Pemberton Hutchinson, Esq., who expired at one o'clock, this morning, at his residence in Walnut street. His illness was brief, and for some days there have been no hopes of his recovery. He was in the seventyseventh year of his age. He was the son of Dr. Samuel Hutchinson, a prominent politician of his time, who died in the yellow fever of 1793.

Mr. Hutchinson when a lad entered the counting house of Joseph S. Lewis & Co... and soon afterwards went out for them as supercargo to Lisbon. He concluded to remain there, and although a youth and poor, he began business and soon became the leading man in the commerce of the Subsequently he was applace. pointed United States Consul, and afterwards was Chargé d'Affaires. He was a great favorite with the King, Don John, who had him frequently at his palace and delighted in his society. Coming back to the United States in middle life, he married the daughter of Charles W. Hare, Esq., of this city. He returned to Portugal and remained a few years, when he closed his business there and came home. He spent a year or two in New York and came about the year 1839 to Philadelphia, where he has PR lived ever since, in the enjoyment of a large fortune, which he has used in the most liberal way. Physically he has not been active for some years, but his strong, clear mind showed no sign of failure up to the time of his last illness.

There are few men who have done more for this community than Mr. Hutchinson. He was an active, generous and judicious friend to all young men in business who sought his counsel or aid. His admirable business talents were recognized everywhere, and he had been invited to serve as Director or Trustee in most of our important commercial or financial institutions. At the time of his death he was still a director of the Farmers' and Mechanics Bank, of the Philadelphia Saving Fund, the Philadelphia Contributionship, the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, and of other of our oldest and best institutions of the kind. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs, and his zealous loyalty to the Union cause was shown in many substantial ways during the rebelbellion. He was a genial, high-minded gentleman, whose death will be deplored by a large circle, and whose memory will be cherished and honored by his family.
