THE BECONSTRUCTION REPORT. The constitutional amendment reported by the Reconstruction Committee was adopted by the House of Representatives, yesterday, by the unexpectedly large vote of 128 to 37. Every Republican member voted for it, and every Northern copperhead and so-called

Mr. Raymond, of New York, whose paper has condemned the report, and who has been regarded as the champion of the President among the Republicans, voted for it. There were ten votes for it more than the required two-thirds.

men in the House have sustained the report of the Committee is as gratifying as it is unexpected. They have not acted hastily nor in temper. They have had time to hear from their constituents and to learn whether they considered the President or Congress the truest interpreter of the wishes of the people. The constituencies of Congress are they whose votes made Andrew Johnson President, and they know the principles for which they voted. They and their representatives have now unanimously pronounced their disapproval of the course pursued by the President in reference to the lately rebellious people, and their determination that they shall not be represented in Congress until sufficient guarantees shall be given that the peace of the country and the security of the Union are never again to be disturbed.

The firmness and fidelity of Congress are most reassuring. Neither the passionate abuse of the President, nor the favor extended to his opinions by his Cabinet, has affected a single vote of the Republican members. If the Reconstruction report is a radical one, then every Republican member is a radical, and there is but a pitiful show for the proposed new "third party" that was to be formed, with the Johnson Republicans in the House as its leaders. There is not a single Johnson Republican in that body, if Johnsonism means opposition to the Constitutional amendment. We wait to see whether the President will be content with having in Congress 24 no supporters of his policy but the petty minority of members who were his bitter assailants a little more than a year ago.

A telegraphic despatch from Richmond informs us that the anniversary of the death of Stonewall Jackson was observed yesterday at the late capital of the "Confederacy." Business was generally suspended in the city, addresses were made, and the rebel graves in Hellywood and Oakwood cemeteries were decorated with flowers. The writer of this article chanced to be in Richmond last month, when the anniversary of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln came around. There was no suspension of business on that occasion, and the "only place where there was any recog-. nition of the anniversary of the most appalling calamity in the history of America, was at the headquarters of the Federal forces.

It will be urged in justification of this
