Twelve hundred miles and more From the stormy English shore, All right, the seventh night, On her course our vessel bore. Her lantern shone ahead. And the green lamp and the red To starboard, and to larboard, Shot their light.

Close on the midnight call What a mist began to fall,
And to hide the ocean wide,
And to wrap us in a pall!
Beneath its folds we past:
Hidden were shroud and mast, And faces, in near places Side by side.

Sudden there also fell A summons like a knell:

Every ear the words could hear— Whence spoke, who could tell? "What ship is this? where bound?" Gods, what a dismal sound! A stranger, and in danger,

"The Virginia, on her route From the Mersey, seven days out: Fore and aft, our trusty craft Carries a thousand souls, about."
"All these souls may travel still,
Westward bound, if so they will;
Bodies, rather, I would gather!"
Loud he laughed.

"Who is't that hails so rude. And for what this idle mood?
Words like these on midnight seas. Bode no friend nor fortune good!" Care not to know my name, But whence I lastly came, At leisure, for my pleasure, Ask the breeze.

"To the people of your port Bear a message of this sort. Say, I haste unto the West, A sharer of their sport. Let them sweep the houses clean: The fathers did, I ween, When hearing of my nearing As a guest!

"As by Halifax ye sail And the steamship England hail, Of me, then, bespeak her men; She took my latest mail-T was somewhere near this spot: Doubtless they've not forgot. Remind them (if you find them!), Once again.

"Yet that you all may know Who is't that hailed you so, (Slow he saith, and under breath,) I leave my sign below! Then from our crowded hold A dreadful cry uprolled, Unbroken, and the token, It was Death.

XXXIXTH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

EDMUND CLARENCE STEADMAN.

S[close of Yesterday's proceedings.]

SENATE.—The morning hour expired, and the Post Office Appropriation bill was taken up, the pending question being on Mr. Trumbull's amendment.

Speeches were made by Mr. Nye (Nevada)

in support of the measure and severely censuring the President, and by Messrs. Doo-little and Cowan in answer to Mr. Nye. Mr. Howard obtained the floor, but yielded to a motion for a property of the state of the sta to a motion for an executive session, after which the Senate adjourned.

House.—The reconstruction report being under consideration, Mr. Beaman (Ky. favored the amendment, but was opposed to the third section. Mr. Farnsworth (Ill.) and Dawes (Mass.) took the same position. Mr. Rogers (N. J.) spoke against the measure. He was followed by Mr. Bingham (Obio) in advocacy of it. (Ohio) in advocacy of it.

Mr. Stevens closed the debate. He said he was very glad to see the great unanimity existing among all the true friends of the Union in the House upon all the provisions of the proposed amendment except the third section, but he was grieved to see any division among them on what he considered the vital proposition of the whole amendment. Without it, it amounted to nothing; without it, he would not give the snap of his finger whether the joint resolution was passed or not. If it failed, there would be no power left among the friends of the Union in the left among the friends of the Union in the next Congress to carry out the measures of the Government. Heshould be sorry if the third section was struck out, because then, before any portion of the amendment could be put in operation, the other side of the House would be filled with yelling secessionists and approving copperheads.

Mr. Thayer (Pa.) reminded Mr. Stevens

Mr. Triayer (Fa.) reminded Mr. Stevens that the third section did not affect the eligibility of those persons as Representatives, but merely excluded them from voting, and he asked him whether he thought he could build a penitentiary big enough to hold eight millions of people.

Mr. Stevens—Yes, sir. That penitentiary which is guarded with bayonets down below, and if they undertake to come back we will shoot them. The penitentiary of is the penitentiary that they deserve to have till then. After some further remarks in the same strain, Mr. Stevens withdrew the motion to recommit, and moved the previous ques-

Mr. Garfield (Ohio) inquired of the Speaker whether in case the previous question was not seconded, it would be in order for him to move to amend by striking out the third section, and offering the amend-ment suggested by Mr. McKee, preventing those who had voluntarily taken part in the rebellion, from holding office under the United States Government.

The Speaker replied that the motion to amend would be in order if the previous Question should not be seconded.

Mr. Garfield expressed the hope that the previous question would be voted down.

The House divided, and the Speaker counted—yeas, 90; nays, 59, the Democrats almost all voting yea, in order to prevent any amendment of the joint resolution.

At this time the galleries were crowded, and as the vote progressed the greatest interest and excitement was manifested by members, some of whom stood together in groups discussing the chances, while some were more actively employed in arguing the consequences, and trying to enforce their views upon others. The Democratic members generally carried out their policy, which was to prevent any amendment of the joint resolution.

Mr. Washburne also moved, on similar grounds, and for the additional reason that the doorkeeper wanted some days to clean the hall and put it in its summer trim, that when the House adjourn to-day, it adjourn to meet on Monday next. The Cunard Mail Steamers. Authentic information has been received that the British Government has notified the that the British Government has notified the Cunard company of the termination of their mail subsidy when the present contract expired next year. The policy of discontinuing special subsidy grants for the transatlantic mail service, under which system monopolies were granted to certain favored steamship lines, and of establishing a self-sustaining ocean service on the basis of postage earnings, inaugurated by the Post Office Department of this country, and so successfully defended and maintained by Postmaster General Dennison in his administration ter General Dennison in his administration of the department is thus concurred in by

This intelligence will be gratifying to cor-respondents on both sides of the Atlantic, inarmuch as the heavy subsidy paid by the British Government to the Cunard line of packets has been the chief chervelet to the British Government to the Cunard line of packets has been the chief obstacle to the establishment of reduced rates of postage between this country and the United Kingnom, and to countries beyond using the British means of conveyance. It will also strengthen the Postmaster General in his opposition to the various speculative lobbying schemes for mail subsidies which are being pressed upon the consideration of Congress by parties desiring monopoly grants to establish steamship lines to Europe. The public may now look forward to an early reduction of international to an early reduction of international postage to European States advocated in the last annual report of the Postmaster

The Steamer Swatara. The U. S. steamer Swatara has returned from her experimental cruise of four months in the West Indies, ordered thither by the Navy Department for the practical instruction of twelve midshipmen of the last gradution of tweeve midsnipmen of the last graduating class in engineering. Four of them were placed in charge of the deck; the second squad had charge of the engines, and the third squad had charge of the boilers, fires and coal-bunkers. Commander Jeffers, in his report, says that they soon acquired such proficiency in the handling of the engine, and a knowledge of the causes of the vario difficulties met with in the management of a quick-working engine and the remedies to be applied, that it was rarely that they had occasion to send for the engineer in nominal charge to advise them.

It is not, he says, possible or desirable for a naval officer to become an engineer without neglecting the more important parts of his profession, while it is entirely within his capacity, with his general scientific education. to run an engine after a certain amount of practice. He thinks it highly necessary that all midshipmen studying engineering should be attached to a full-powered screw steamer, where some difficulties and pecusteamer, where some difficulties and peculiarities are developed hourly.

He says the young gentlemen have shown accommendable degree of determination, zeal and interest in carrying out the views of the department under the somewhat trying circumstances of a crowded apartment, and the ship being almost constantly under steam in a hot climate. The instruction initiated by the Secretary of the Navy has become necessary, owing to the substitution of steam for sailing vessels.
