In 1851, he said, the Legislature directed the Governor to procure a fing to be presented to each regiment, to be returned at the expiration of its term of service with suitable inscriptions of the doings of each organization. It was thought that the occasion of the return of these standards should be made a grand one, to be participated in by those who have followed the flags through many battles, the widows and orphans or those who have falled. He also invited the officers of the General Government, officers of other State Governments, and General officers and others who have been distinguished during the war.
