An Interesting Case.-It is known to AN INTERESTING CASE,—It is known to most of readers that in consequence of domestic differences between Mr. Theodore W. Les and his wife, of this city, the couple separated. They had one child which Mr. Lee obtained control of in spite of the opposition of the family of Mrs. Lee. That lady was a daughter of the late John Grigg. The differences between Mr. and Mrs. Lee have recently been revived in another form. The present suit was brought by Mr. Lee to obtain possession of a portion of the estate of his deceased father-in-law, Mr. Grigg. The case was argued before Justice Thompson, and was held under advisement. The bill in equity sets forth that Mrs. Lee had left her husband's house, "without reasonable or just cause," and that she has since refused to live with him.

The complainant further avers that John Grigg died

A NEW CHESTNUT STREET IMPROVE-

A NEW CHESTNOT STREET IMPROVEMENT-BIRDSALI'S SALOONS.—"Girard Row" on the north side of Chestnut street, between Eleventh and Twelfth, seems doomed to change its aspect greatly under the pressure of the western march of improvement. Its marble entrances are giving place to low windows, disshing plate glass, and wide and elegant doorways. The latest improvement we have to chronicle is the opening of the confectionery, ice cream and dining saloons of Mr. J. H. Birdsall, at No.
It21 Chestnut street. Mr. Birdsall has for many years been favorably known in this line of business, and he has brought a ripe experience to bear in arranging and been favorably known in this line of business, and he has brought a ripe experience to bear in arranging and fitting up the saloons on the first and second floors of his new quarters. The apartment on the lower floor is devoted to the corfectionery business, in connection with the ice cream and dining tables. The kitchen is closely connected with this department and it is furnished with every convenience known to the modern cusine. In the second story the large saloon is located and tables are placed for a very large number of guests. Arrangements have also been made for private rooms for dining and supper parties and in every respect Mr. Birdsall has made his establishment elegant and complete. We have no doubt that with his tact, taste, enterprise and general facilities, he will make the new saloons as iashanable as any in the city.

DARING ROBBERY.—The residence of Mr. DARING ROBBERY.—The residence of Mr. James Gwin, No. 1168 Vine street, was robbed yester day of articles valued at about $300. When Mr. G. re turned from church he found the servant girl lying at the foot of thegellar stairs. She was insensible. The proper restoratives were applied and when the girler turned to consciousness she stated that two men called about 11 o'clock and loquired for Mr. Gwin, and represented themselves as acquaintances. They insisted on remaining until the family returned from church. They were left in the sitting room; and the girl states that, shortly afterwards, while coming from the cellar. She was met at the head of the stairs by one of the men, who struck her and knocked her down. She had no further knowledge of what occurred, as she was insensible, and remained so until the family came from church.
