EVENING BULLETIN.

TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1866. THE THIRD SECTION.

There appears to have been a strong disposition in some of our best friends in Congress to omit or modify the third section of the joint resolution to amend the Constitution recently adopted by the House of Representatives, and had the professed opponents of the resolutionthe so-called Democrats—acted in good faith on the subject, that section would undoubtedly have been left out or materially modified. But, like their secession friends who professed so much anxiety for the adoption of the "Crittenden resolution" in 1861, they purposely pursued a system of tactics that led to the defeat of their apparent wishes and the retention of the third section, which, had they been sincere, they could easily have had stricken out. It appears that 70 Union members thought that section vitally important to the efficiency of the amendment, while 61 would have been willing, from a sensitive spirit of conmiliation, to omit it. Had the whole of the Democratic members, who so strongly denounced that section, voted with the 61 Union members against the previous question, which was moved by Mr. Stevens, it would have been lost and then the same vote could have stricken that section out. But nearly half of them voted for the previous question, so as to force a direct vote upon the joint resolutions as originally introduced, hoping thereby to make the resolutions obnoxious to the public and to help their prospects at the approaching Congressional elections. This was the animus, but we hope, like many other of their legislative manœuvres, it will prove a delusion.

Let us look, for a moment, at the joint resolutions, to see how this third section stands. They provide in the first place, that no State shall abridge the rights and privileges of a citizen of the United States; secondly, that if any State shall deny the right of suffrage to any class of people on account of caste or color. such class shall not be included in the enumeration upon which representation is based; thirdly, that all persons who voluntarily took part in the rebellion shall be excluded from voting for members of Congress, or President or Vice President, until the 4th of July, 1870; in the fourth place they prohibit the United States, or any State, from paying the rebel debt, or for emancipated slaves; and the fifth gives Congress the power to carry out and enforce these provisions by law.

Now this seems to us a very well constructed arrangement, and the third section we regard as a very proper, moderate and reasonable part of the whole. If any strange people should be told for the first time of the terrible war we have passed through, and of the hundreds of thousands of lives that were lost, and of the hundreds of thousands who were maimed, and of the hundreds of millions of treasure that were expended to save the national life, and that after the suppression of the rebellion it was agreed that the rebels should be reinstated, after so short a time, and after one single Presidential election, upon a footing of equality with the loyal citizens, and soldiers of the nation, they would say we were the most magnanimous and forgiving nation that could be conceived of. It seems to us that the sixty-one members who were willing to have that section stricken out were over tender and indulgent to the rebels and their sympathisers in making such a concession. We do not cherish animosities or bitter memories; nor do we desire to be resentful, much less revengeful, towards the deluded or even the more wicked men who caused the deluge of blood in the late war. But we are not quite ready to take them, with all their continued bitterness, in our arms, and still less to place the power and destiny of the nation in their hands; and to say that we intend to retain the selection of our rulers for one term more in our own keeping is as modest a proposition, we conceive, as could be expected of reasonable and prudent men.

At the last Presidential election, more than a hundred thousand men were in arms against the Government, and Lee and Johnston and Hood were doing their utmost to break and destroy it. Even then they took a lively interest in our election, but they did notask to vote-Now they not only take a warm interest, but ask, with the air of injured innocence, to be permitted to unite with their copperhead friends in taking the Government under their own control. We prefer to do without them, at least for a short time, so as to let their passions cool, and to have the Government move on under loyal management until it is fairly and fully in motion in all parts of the territory of the United States.

We would ask the people of Pennsylvania whether they are ready to receive at the ballot box on a footing with themselves the rebel hosts who dashed so furiously against our lines at Gettysburg, with the fell purpose of overrunning and destroying us? We think we can anticipate their reply, that they would prefer to postpone that arrangement at least for a little while. We have understood that we are indebted to President Johnson for maintaining our hold on Nashville when Bragg invaded Kentucky in 1862, and we know that he (the President) was there in December, 1864, when Hood came to besiege and capture that place; and confess we are at a loss to understand why he is in so great a hurry to place that rebel host on an equal footing with the loyal men who, under Rosecrans and Thomas, hurled them away. We say an equal footing, but we might say a better; for unless the Constitution is amended, in some of the States three white men have as much political power in national affairs as five with us. It is an enigma to us of most difficult solution, and in view of the tremendous consequences at issue, we regard it with anxious and painful solicitude.

But at all events we desire the secuto the country that will be attained by the adoption of these amendments; and we think the loyal men of the nation will ratify them, and sustain the earnest and patriotic representatives who have conceived and proposed them as a part of the fundamental laws for our present and future safety.

GOVERNOR SWANN'S TREACHERY. We have not been much surprised at Governor Swann's abandonment of his party and his avowed principles. For years past we have been under the impression that he was not really the man to lead the loyal people of Maryland, and it has been a matter of wonder with us that he should have been selected for the important post which he occupies. In the darkest time of the rebellion he always appeared to us to be either a very timid or a very unsound leader. He was always immeasurably below Henry Winter Davis and the men of that stamp in anything like radical, out-spoken loyalty. Under the pressure of his pursuit of office, it was necessary to say enough to secure the support of the bone and sinew of Baltimore and Maryland, the plain, rough, unconditionally loyal men of the State. But Governor Swann has, if we do not greatly mistake, no real sympathies with this class of his fellowcitizens. His tendencies are all in an aristocratic direction, and he goes out from the party that made him Governor because he was never of it.

How far Governor Swann will succeed in his attempt to transfer Maryland to the rule of copperheads and rebels, remains to be seen. We have great confidence in the unflinching, uncompromising character of the Union men of that State. They were sorely tried all through the war, and came through the trial gloriously. We do not believe that they will now relinquish the fruits of their hard-won victories, merely because a few office-holders have deceived and now seek to betray them. They will be sustained and encouraged by loyal men throughout the country, and Governor Swann will probably find that he has made a poor bargain, in bartering the confidence and esteem of the loval. hard-fisted, warm-hearted masses of his State, for the hollow counsels and false promises of the Blairs and their copperhead comrades.

MUSICAL. HAYDN'S "SEASONS."-There has been a great demand for seats, for the performance of "The Seasons," this evening, by the Handel and Haydn Society, and with the prospect of fine weather, we shall doubtless see a very crowded house at the Academy. From all that we have heard of the rehearsals, we feel assured that the entertainment will be a most delightful success, and we recommend those who have not yet secured tickets to do so, if possible, before the hour of the performance.

Mr. Gaertner's Matinee of to-morrow will be warmly welcomed by the appreciative. Mr. Gaertner is an artist of whom we are justly proud, and Mme. Abel is, we hear, a worthy pupil of the great Chopin. Mr. Gaertner will also be assisted by our own pianist, Mr. Jarvis, and the other members of the Quintette Club. The programme is a very fine one.

The Artists' Sale of Pictures. The paintintings prepared by Philadelphia artists for public sale, are now on exhibition at the Art Gallery of Mr. B. Scott, Jr., No. 1020 Chestnut street, where they will be sold on Thursday evening next. Among them are some of great merit, and the collection is worthy of the attention of all those who wish to encourage the resident talent we have among us. Although the sale is rather late in the season, and comes after so many important sales of foreign pictures we anticipated a large attendance and spirited competition.

Germantown Residence. Messrs. Thomas & Sons will sell on the 5th June, by order of Orphans' Court. Estate of Wm. W. Knight, deceased, an elegant Modern Residence, Clapier street and McKean avenue. GEBMANTOWN. Immediate possession. Also, three Lots, CHESTNUT HILL. See last page for particulars.

Public Sale of the Property formerly the Bank of Pennsylvania. This very valuable property on Second street will be found especially inviting to capitalists. Situated in the very misst of improvements and in the heart of the business of the city, it will always command good tenants, at remunerative reuts. The limit, $110,000, placed upon the property by an act of Congress, is greatly below its real value, and if it were improved by the erection of inaurance offices or brokers' rooms, on the first and second stories, all of which could be done so that the whole cost need not be over $200,000, a very large income could be derived from it. The lot is 76x250 feet, with streets all round it. Brown Stone Residence and Furniture.

Messrs Thomas & Sons will sell to morrow (Wednesday) morning, at 10 o'clock, at No. 182 South Third street, by order of the Executors of Dr. Jayne, the hancsome Brown Stone Residence and Furniture. FINE WINES.—To-morrow, at 12 o'clock noon, at the Auction Rooms, Fine Old Madeira Wines, Estate of the late Captain Percival Drayton, U. S. Navy. Also. a quantity of Superior Champagne Wine.
