THE NEW COIN.

As a small harbinger of that "good time coming" when specie will once more be the circulating medium of the country, Mr. Kasson's bill, providing for a new five-cent piece, and withdrawing all paper currency under the denomination of ten cents, has passed both houses of Congress. Whether the President will veto it or not. has not vet transpired. There are some of the same objections to it which produced the vetoes which we have already had, and Congress must be prepared to go to the country upon this, as upon other questions. This coin has been adopted, while eleven States are unrepresented in Congress, and how do we know that they will approve its introduction? Besides, the coining of this five-cent piece will employ a host of paid agents, many of whom are women and have no votes, and the expense entailed upon the public treasury will be considerable. Worse than this, it places new power in the hands of the President. The freedmen of the District of Columbia may wish to be honest and incorruptible, but Mr. Johnson tells the London Times that "he often forgets that he is President," and how can he be sure that, in some of these periods of oblivion, he may not tempt some impecunious newsboy or boot-black to do a deed for one of these glittering coins, which he would repudiate with scorn if he were offered the like amount in ragged or discolored paper? If there were no other grounds upon which to fear a veto of Mr. Kasson's bill, these would be more than enough; but there is still another. The President is eminently a conservative. His whole public career, rightly interpreted, proves this. As Senator, Military Governor, Vice President and President he has said things which the unlearned and ignorant have construed into Radicalism, but in the clearer light of the Present, we are able better to comprehend the Past, and we see that Mr. Pickwick or Governor Swann is not more truly conservative than Mr. Johnson. Hence he will object naturally to change, and it is clear enough that Mr. Kasson's bill has a direct and unavoidable tendency to introduce change into the national currency. The change may not indeed be large, but the principle is the same as if it were.

We see but one chance for Mr. Kasson's coin. It discriminates in favor of the copper element. The nickel is limited to twenty-five per cent., but need not have even that proportion. This coppery pre-

We do not believe that any young man in health and strength need seriously suffer for want of occupation in a country like our own, and as to making the obtaining of "respectable employment" a condition of going to work, the idea is almost as silly as the act of self-destruction itself. What did this victim of false pride and morbid sensitiveness consider "respectable employment"? Were wheeling a barrow, handling a pick or a shovel, acting as a bobbin boy, carrying grain to mill, going to sea "before the mast," wielding the hammer or splitting rails, within the range of "respectable employments" in his estimation? Some of the most useful, most honored and most wealthy citizens of the republic followed just such employments as we have named, and had they been made of such stuff as this poor suicide. the world would never have known the example of Abraham Lincoln, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, N. P. Banks and Elihu Burritt; or to come nearer home, there would have been no Girard, Baldwin, Harrison or Dreer to win for themselves the distinction of being good and useful citizens and to adorn and beautify Philadelphia through their enterprise and public spirit. The soldier who dons a red cap and wears the badge of the messenger corps, and who is ready to carry parcels or run errands, strikes us as being a far braver, as well as a wiser man, than the croaker who shoots himself because he cannot obtain "respectable employment." All honest employments that are faithfully followed are respectable, and the man who is unwilling to fight the battle of life, even though he has to begin the struggle in the ranks, is a coward. It was not such men as these that saved the nation when it was assailed by traitors, and we repeat that we have no patience either with the cowardice of the act of self-destruction or with the mawkish tenderness and respect with which the deed is treated.

HAYDN'S "SEASONS."-This charming oratorio or cantata was performed last evening before a crowded audience, in the Academy of Music, by the Handel and Haydn Society. The solo parts were taken by Miss Caroline Richings, Mr. Geo. Simpson and Mr. J. R. Thomas. The chorus numbered about two hundred voices, and the orchestra about thirty-five instruments. The whole was under the direction of Mr. Carl Sentz. It was a treat to have so admirable an artist as Miss Richings for the soprano solos. She sang with great intelligence, elegance and taste, was frequently applauded, and, in the delightful song, with chorus, "A wealthy lord," she was enthuponderancemay save the bill from a veto, siastically encored. Mr. Simpson sang
