Miss Anna E. Dickinson on "My Policy."

A brilliant audience thronged the Academy of Music last evening, to extend a welcome to Miss Anna E. Dickinson, upon her first appearance before the Philadelphia public since her return from her lecturing tour in the West, and to listen to her great address upon "My Policy." The stage of the Academy was set as a drawing-room scene, and upon it were a number of well-known citizens. Miss Dickinson was introduced by Mr. Needles, and advanced to the front of the stage, and immediately commenced her address.

She opened by reciting a story, which originated with Marcus Conway, of Kansas, of a noble young cavalier, who became intensely enamored of a masked face at a grande bal, and having sought and obtained her hand, they whirled through the splendid salon in the gay dance, and indulged in the festivities of the occasion, until delighted and entranced, the cavalier could no longer restrain his desire to gaze upon what he believed to be a face divine, and besought his companion to remove her mask. She refused all his entreaties till she led him beyond the merry throng, far out in the night's darkness, and there, striking off the thin covering which hid her face, to his utter amazement and horror, revealed her features, at once repulsive and hideous. And so this young, chivalrous Republic months ago stood entranced at something then deemed noble, lofty and beautiful, yet masked. It was followed, and caressed, and honored, till the nation sought to know it utterly, and it led the young Republic out into the cold, dark night of disappointment, and at last, on the 22d day of February last, the mask which had hidden its true features so long suddenly fell off, and disclosed that which human lips almost refuse to describe.

So one year ago the nation was enamored by a masked man. Following him away from the light and brightness of the nation's victories, into the outer darkness, we unveil the masked face, and discover the dreadful infamy of the man who occupies the White House.

One year ago, standing at the grave of his murdered predecessor, that man vowed to uphold the policy of that illustrious statesman. He promised there to maintain the principle of universal amnesty to poor white rebels and universal suffrage to the masses of loyal blacks—a promise that, so far as he was concerned, every man should have a fair start and an equal chance in the race of life; a promise that loyalty should be honored, and treason be made odious. Has he kept these promises? He has violated them in word, in spirit and in deed most foully. I charge him as alike an enemy of his party, his country and his God. [Applause.] He has striven to mortally wound the friends of the Union, and to foster into life the traitors of the South. He has falsified all his promises in regard to our great Lincoln's policy, and has given us in its place that miserable abortion known all over as "My Policy."

For this I would have him so politically killed, that there would be no hope of a future resurrection. I say, and repeat it, politically killed. For he was determined to force that vile policy upon an outraged nation, declaring that it must and shall be adopted by them.

Congress, during the rebellion, declared that the lands of traitors should be forfeited. But the President has abolished that law and has restored to their estates those who lawfully should be impoverished. Congress declared that Union men alone shall have work in the plan of reconstruction. But President Johnson evaded this by declaring there were none others of the South but rebels to restore the Government of the revolted States; and therefore has strove and is striving to over-ride that declared will of the nation through her representatives in Congress.

"Treason is the greatest of crimes, and must have the greatest of punishment," said Andrew Johnson. But instead of hanging a few of the leading traitors, he has hobnobbed with Toombs, Stephens and other infamous traitors, and the greatest of the Southern criminals has never yet been brought to trial, but is awaiting a day that may come wherein to receive a mock trial, and be rescued from the justice due to our hundreds of thousands of slaughtered soldiers.

"The pardoning power must be sparingly used," said Andrew Johnson; and thereupon he pardoned thousands so freely that counterfeiters and unscrupulous agents, who could be bought with money, were able to flood the land with pardons for whoever were willing to pay the price. The Executive hand was too weak, or too unsteady—which was it?

Then look at the tenor of his addresses to Congress and to his constituents, wherein he declared, with a humility so marked by an utter want of sense, a sarcasm so delicate, an utter disregard of all the rights of the people, that the nation was outraged to the heart.

The late vetoes of the President are plain features of how he declaimed, blowing hot and cold with successive breaths. "Pass the Freedmen's Bureau bill, and I will at once sign it," said the President. Afterwards "the bill is unconstitutional, and I veto it," said the President. "The war is over," "the was is not closed," says the President, one after the other. War! Peace! Peace! War! as it suits the policy of the President.

"Consistency thou art a jewel," even for a President. "But the enormous expense of the Freedmen's Bureau," said the President. $11,600,000! when the President, in 1864, favored the admission of Texas, causing for that State alone an expenditure of more than a hundred and fifty millions.

The President vetoes the Freedmen's Bureau bill, whereupon Congress substitutes the Civil Rights bill. But the President, with the consistency of the Arab sheik, who was asked for the loan of a rope and replied he had always need of it when he did not want to lend it, vetoes the bill against which he can find no sound grounds of objection.

While these bills were under discussion, every breeze from the South was filled with the groans of suffering humanity; every wind bore the scent of the charnel-house horrors there perpetrated; of men driven out with their families to starvation and death; of little children torn away from their parents and bound out for life; of men and women lashed and hung for paltry offences by due process of law; of men and women, citizens of the United States, carried out in the open market places and sold into slavery for a term of years or for life. For God's sake stop these abominations! cried the people of the land. Congress heard it and said "We will." "I object," said the President, "for the sake of the blacks, to prevent an amalgamation of the races, by keeping blacks from marrying whites." It is a brutal appeal to the prejudices and ignorance of the community.

Andrew Johnson knows full well that social rights has no more to do with the question of civil rights than his policy has to do with honor, justice and manliness. Civilly, I stand here disfranchised, classed on the level with black men, children and idiots, but I can truly and proudly declare that I do not believe that any amount of legal degrading of civil rights or wrongs inflicted, could reduce me or any other respectable woman to the social level of the man capable of making the speech on the 22d of last February. [Applause.] It is not the North and Congress, but the President and the former wealthy slaveholders of the South who were the slavery amalgamation propagandists. He it is who strives to brutalize the negro, against the voice of the true representatives of our country who seek to vindicate and maintain the manliness of those oppressed black citizens of our land.

I say here, in full understanding of the awful truth I declare, had Andrew Johnson maintained the position he assumed twelve months ago, the massacre at Memphis would have been impossible. I would pray for the rocks to fall upon and annihilate me rather than to stand in the place of the President of the United States, when the Great Master makes an inquisition for the blood of the slain in the streets of that city of Memphis.

This awful lesson is full of impressive truths in regard to the real longing and intentions of the rebellious men of the South. Had the blacks in that city had the privilege of voting, the authorities there would have protected them in their right to unmolested life and happiness. The only true way to uphold the humanity of all the citizens of the United States, is to give all absolute equality before the law. [Applause.]

Andrew Johnson uphold the policy of his predecessor—of that great, good President, Abraham Lincoln. [Applause.] The policy of him who said shortly before his assassination, "If ever I grant universal amnesty, I shall exact universal suffrage." Andrew Johnson, who declares he fears a war of races, and who is doing all that can be done to instigate it. He following the policy of our late great President?

I appeal from the President of 1866 to the statesman of 1864; from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

A Republic bought at the price of intolerant wrong, to an unprotected portion of the people, is worse than the most despotic monarchy. We are under the view of the people of the world. Our failure now to vindicate our assertion of the rights of all men to life liberty and happiness, will put back the handmark of progress on the dial of the world.

The Rebellion was instigated and begun by the South. Does any one suppose that if the South had made up its mind to stay in the Union that the North would not have gone on in riveting the chains upon itself, choking itself with cotton dust, and blinding itself with gold?

The Government to-day is not the Government of five years ago. That Government founded itself upon the shackles of millions of slaves. Thank God we now stand freed from that terrible, wicked oppression, acknowledging the rights and humanity of all men.

"My policy, virtually declares the President, is to disfranchise loyal men, to give all power to the Rebels and take it from Unionists; to force the Southern leaders into Congress, and give the reins of power into their hands.

The war did not end with the surrender of Lee. The moral victory of every war depends upon the moral gain that is obtained after its close, by the vindication and maintenance of the immutable principles of truth for which the contest was inaugurated and waged.

It is perfectly clear that if the President's declaration that we are not at war be true, then the President is clearly liable to be impeached for his unlawful act of disposing and replacing officers over a community without their acquiescence, in his declared time of peace. [Applause.]

In fact the President is demanding that rebels shall take part in the legislation that is to declare whether we shall obtain and secure the moral victories of the war.

I wonder if President Johnson remembers what one Andrew Johnson said, on the question of the expulsion of Jesse D. Bright, in January, 1862. "If we have not the physical and moral courage to exclude from our midst men whom we believe to be unsafe depositaries of public power and public trust, we are not entitled to sit here as Senators ourselves." Congress is simply putting in force the policy of Andrew Johnson, delivered in January, 1862. [Applause.]

Riding in the cars a few days after the delivery of that speech on Feb. 22d last, Miss Dickinson saw an old man who had given two of his boys to graves upon the battle fields, read the report of that speech, and as, with tremulous hands, blinded eyes and quivering lips, he put the paper down, heard him exclaim, "My God! my God! my boys have died in vain!"

However many may be willing to confess, it was by the path of liberty we walked to victory; by emancipation we saved our country. But by saving us those slaves have destroyed themselves. While the aristocrats of the South owned the slaves, they despised them; now that they have been conquered by them they bitterly hate them. Does any one suppose for an instant that these aristocrats will fail to remember that the blacks fought them and conquered them on battle-fields? Will they ever forget that the first soldiers of the Union blue that marched into their fallen capital, were black soldiers of the Union army? How terrible that we should ask them to fight for us, and then allow them to be butchered for their glorious services to freedom!

"May Heaven defend and God Almighty protect us from the rebels aided by the President's policy," wrote a freed slave at the South to a friend at the North.

What is the result of the President's policy as marked to-day? The result is so plain that "he who runs may read" it. We find the rebels of the South re-echoing the voice of the President to be restored their rights, as if they had never rebelled against the Union of their fathers, massacred their brethren upon hundreds of battle-fields, and starved them in loathsome dungeons. It is thus they cry, urged on by the moral and physical power of the President.

Who supports the President to-day? Ex-rebel General Lee, the lone State prisoner at Fortress Monroe, Stephens, Toombs, Beauregard—every man who fought at the South against the Union, and every man who staid home at the North and opened fire upon the Union from the rear. Thus every enemy to the Republic sustains the policy of the President. Beverly Tucker, who wrote, "this President, made by an assassin's blow, is doing an assassin's work," supports him.

Men anxious to sell themselves body and soul for the spoils of office—men hankering for the flesh pots of Egypt—are the supporters of the President's policy in the Republican party.

There is but one duty clear and plain before every man and woman at the North, that is, to speak out honestly against the rebels of the South, and the man who supports them at the White House; that is, to sustain Congress. [Great applause.]

It is not sufficient that we agree with them in spirit, but we must speak out and strengthen them with our voice. In this patriotic city, even the great Loyal League has refused to speak out a loyal voice to strengthen Congress in the loyal work.

Congress must know from the East as from the West, by grand and glorious gatherings like to-night, not to honor me, but the great and grand principles I maintain. Congress must know that the people sustain them, and lovingly wish them "God speed."

Congress, like a beleaguered garrison, sits within the walls of the Capitol at Washington, looking out across the country. From Maine to California, one State responding to the voice of another, let the cry ring out manfully for Universal Freedom, Universal Suffrage, Universal Justice!

O great country, thy night wears apace! The morning light dawns. The nation is blessed. The smile of God illumines and thy glory is thine own.

CHILD SHOT—A MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.—Allen N. Rhoads, aged three years, while walking with his cousin, Laura Theobold, aged nine years, was shot at the southwest corner of St. John and Canal streets. The little sufferer was removed to his uncle's residence, at Third and Poplar streets, where he died on Thursday. The cause of the shooting is a mystery. Laura states that she had the child in her arms, and that she heard no report of a fire-arm. The child appeared to have no life in him, and this led her to judge that he was sick. On examination, at his uncle's house, a wound was discernible in his left shoulder. It was at first supposed to be a bruise from an accidental fall. A post mortem examination being made by order of Coroner Taylor, a large sized minie ball was discovered, that having entered the left shoulder had passed down, breaking the seventh rib, and had lodged in the lungs. None of the neighbors heard a report of fire-arms during the whole of Wednesday. The parents of the child reside in Schuylkill Haven, and at the time of the occurrence the mother and boy were on a visit to this city.

THE U. S. STEAMER CHATTANOOGA.—This splendid steamer will leave the Navy Yard this afternoon on a trial trip, and will remain at sea for six or ten days and return again to this port. The Chattanooga carries 17 guns, consisting of 8-inch Dahlgrens and two 100-pounder rifles. The following is a list of the officers of the vessel—Captain, James P. McKinstry; Lieut. Commander and Executive Officer, Jas. H. Gillis; Surgeon, Robert T. Macconn; Paymaster, A. W. Russell; Chief Engineer, Geo. S. Bright; Lieutenants, Geo. M. Bache, A. H. MORE DAMAGE.—The fire at the Victoria Coal Oil Works at Twentieth and Washington streets, again broke out about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. There are two large tanks on the premises, which contain about five hundred barrels of oil. The superstructures over these fell in, causing the oil to run over and float into the yard, setting fire to some fencing, shedding, and oil tanks. These burned fiercely, and soon communicated the flames to a frame building in a remote corner of the yard, causing a small still, which had been erected therein by Professor Vanderweich, for experimental purposes, to ignite and burn until entirely consumed. The Professor will suffer a loss of $1,000, upon which there is no insurance. A building in the southern part of the yard belonging to Henry Disher, which had been vacated and the furniture removed the night previous, took fire at the gable end, which was part destroyed.

ZANE STREET GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—The commencement exercises of the Zane Street Grammar School for Girls took place yesterday afternoon. The building was crowded to excess. The songs and recitations, original and selected, were rendered by the scholars in a pleasing manner. During the intellectual entertainment Miss Webb received a pretty present from the graduates. It consisted of a silver egg stand, a glass stand and salts. Miss Susie R. Mitchell, who stood number one of the candidates at the High School in 1865, was the recipient of a handsomely-finished gold pencil. Speeches were made by Edward Shippen, Esq., the President of the Board of Controllers, Richard R. Ludlow, Esq., Professor Rhoads, of the Central High School, and Messrs. Beesly and Riché.

BOAT CAPSIZED—MAN DROWNED.—A boat containing two men, who were engaged in fishing in the Schuylkill below Fairmount, yesterday afternoon, got too close to the dam and was capsized. Charles Harmer, one of the occupants of the boat, was drowned. His body was recovered last evening. The deceased was thirty-three years of age, and resided at 753 Buckwell street. He was employed at the Philadelphia Gas Works.

WHITSUNTIDE.—To-morrow the grand festival of Whitsuntide will be celebrated at the Cathedral, Eighteenth and Summer streets, with unusual pomp and splendor. Grand Pontifical Mass will be celebrated by Right Rev. Bishop Wood, at half-past ten o'clock, A. M. The choir aided by a powerful orchestra, will sing Beethoven's Grand Mass in C, and Haydn's Te Deum. The Church will no doubt be crowded.

ADDITIONAL FACILITIES.—On and after this evening the Union Passenger Railway Company will run a night line of cars on the Fairmount and Navy Yard branch of their road, which passes through Ninth and Seventh streets. The cars will leave the depot on their first trip down at 11.48, and will continue running during the remainder of the night.

THE GERMANTOWN WATER WORKS.—These works are now in possession of the city, and under the control of the Water Department. The purchase money, $112,000, was paid this week in bonds of the city. The old works will be used to supply the citizens of that place until the new works at Roxborough are completed.

COLUMBIA HOUSE,
CAPE MAY, N. J.,
Will be Opened on the 1st day of June, 1866.
Many improvements have been added to this large and popular establishment since the close of last season. "Bergfeld's" celebrated Band has been secured, and nothing will be left undone to sustain the well established reputation of the house.
It has long been admitted that Cape May possesses a better and more secure beach than any other sea-side summer resort in the country. It is the only beach where ladies and children can bathe in the ocean by themselves with security.
Excellent railroad facilities and largely extended hotel accommodations must command for Cape May a preference over any other sea shore resort in this country.
The Columbia House is located close upon the beach, with a full ocean view from the fronts of the house. Its bathing-rooms are new, and nearly built. Its lawn has a fine group of shade trees, and well laid-out walks. Its dining-room is very large and airy, and is so situated as to secure a fine ocean breeze at all times of day and evening.
There are connected with the house several fine cottages which may be secured by families or parties who desire more private quarters than rooms in the hotel.
