SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1866.

CHANGING FRONT.

There are few military manceuvres so difficult and dangerous as that of changing front in face of the enemy, and the larger the front the greater is the risk of the evolution. It is as true of political as of military movements, and it may be set down as an axiom that where an important change is discovered in the relative position of two bodies in the political arena, as, for instance, between a representative and his constituents, it is safe to assume that the smaller body is the one that has changed front. Both from the difficulty and risk of the manœuvre and from the other well-known principle that "large bodies move slowly," it is almost possible that a great number of people scattered over a vast country, should suddenly and simultaneously abandon principles which they have held for years, and adopt, without any consultation, precisely similar views in opposition to those formerly held. But nothing is easier than for individuals to do what masses cannot do. Innumerable considerations may operate to change their political professions.

The fascination of holding office bewilders and dazzles and destroys thousands of men, who would be fair, honest men, as the world goes, in private life, but who become hopelessly corrupt before they have been long subjected to the temptations of public life. First to gain and then to retain office becomes their aim and end, and the "Vicar of Bray" was only a single type of a great class of men, who change their Fifth avenue, that has grown rich front as easily and with as little conscience as he did. There are other men who change front from a natural thirst for political scheming and intrigue, and a still smaller class who do so from an obstinate adoption of some error into which their own ignorance or want of judgment has betrayed them. But, with the aid of revolvers, bludgeons, the whether belonging to the very small mistaken convictions, or the very large class whose political faith is the somewhat low, but well-understood principle of "bread and butter," they all change front individually and not en masse.

These simple propositions are a sufficient answer to those who are just now attempting to demonstrate that the great Union party of this country has changed front, and that the small body of officeholders and office-seekers who form the new Presidential body-guard are the only persons who remain true to the principles of our great leader. Abraham Lincoln. To establish such an absurdity it is necessary to presume that the whole Union side of Congress, almost the entire Union press of the country and the great body of intelligent, loyal people who endorse and approve the general policy of Congress have suddenly "gone about," and, ignoring the doctrines which formed their great principle of cohesion throughout the war, have marched off in a solid body, without consultation and without purpose, and taken up an entirely new position. No candid or sane man does believe that any such miracle has been wrought. There has been some changing of front both in high and low places, but it has been among individuals, who now seek, by raising the old cry of "stop thief," to cover their own misdeeds. The device is too thread-bare to deceive any intelligent mind, and the attempt to fasten a responsibility upon the great Union party indissolubly together. THE MEETING TO-NIGHT.

A good deal of curiosity is excited to know whether any of the prominent office-holders of Philadelphia will commit themselves to the demonstration at the Academy of Music, this evening. No names of citizens of any consequence have appeared in connection with this movement, which is designed to distract the Union party of the State, and yet it will doubtless be a little trying to the nerves of some of the timid sort, who are naturally anxious to carry water on both shoulders, and to shape their principles, so to speak, according to their interests. We admit the awkwardness of the situation, but as every man laying claim to a grain of common sense must know that the object of the meeting is to introduce dissension and division into the loval ranks of our city and State, there will be no difficulty in our friends deciding in which boat they propose to sail. They cannot serve two masters.

THE WIND AND THE WHIRLWIND. New York has a fresh cause for perplexity and agitation. This time it is not stump-tailed cows, bogus babies, a Dead-Rabbit riot, a Fenian mass meeting, the relief of Broadway, filthy market houses. an aldermanic feed or a hubbub over the horrors of the tenement houses. The present excitement is caused by a little municipal "job," which is designed to affect Fifth avenue, and consequently, instead of Tammany Hall, the "Pewter Mug" and the groggeries of Sixth Ward being convulsed from their centre to their circumference, consternation prevails among the crême de la creme of Gothamite society. The inciting cause of all this stir is nothing less han a proposition to widen Fifth avenue by taking away the railings and doorsteps in front of the dwellings, and carrying the sidewalks close up to their walls. Nobody seems to have asked for it and everybody protests against it; yet this makes, apparently, not the slightest difference to the city legislators, and the probability is that the work will bedone, make or mar whom or what it will.

There seems to be some uncertainty as to what is the motive for this little piece of vandalism. It is at least certain that there is no rush of pedestrians or vehicles along the avenue, to render increased facilities necessary; nor is it probable that there ever will be any such rush. One theory started by the press of New York is that the Common Councilmen want to make a "job" for some political favorites, and the other is that the City Fathers are after a little game of black-mailing the Fifth avenue people into paying them to let their fine thoroughfare alone. Neither theory is very creditable to New York municipal morals, but either is extremely probable. We do not know whether it ever occurs to the people of New York that they have sowed the wind and that they are in constant danger of reaping the whirlwind. Loose morals in business. that manifest themselves in every way, from wholesale frauds upon the revenue, to Peter Funk mock auctions, have tended to put honesty at a disc unt: political tactics that have elevated to the highest offices in the city, gamblers and shoulder-hitters, bore their fruit in mayoral propositions to secede from the rest of the country and make New York a "free city;" demagogueism which put a lottery-policy dealer in the position of a journalistic leader of the ignorant and disaffected masses, to encourage rebellion in other States and to foment the most shameful and the most terrible riot of modern times, as a war measure against the Government. These are among the workings of the management of New York public concerns. upon false invoices and sharp practices generally, now trembles in its shoes, for the hand of the Vandalis threatening to destroy its beauty. The "dangerous classes" now control the city through its Common Council and Board of Aldermen, just as they controlled it in 1863 torch, the stake and the halter. Three class of those who act upon honest but | years ago sacked dwellings, mutilated human beings, and burned orphan asylums were the testimonies of the working of a bad system; to-day, Dead-Rabbitism develops itself in the threat to mutilate the most beautiful streeton the continent. What does Mackerelville care for Fifth avenue? No more than it cared for the laws of humanity or for the integrity of the nation in 1863. Three years ago the troops that drove Lee back from Gettysburg had to be hurried North to save New York from Dead Rabbit rule, for the city was unable to protect itself. Who will rush to the rescue now, when the marring of Fifth avenue is the only stake at issue? New York for its own purposes encouraged Dead-Rabbit ascendancy. As it made its bed so it must lie.
