"Ouida," the author of "Strathmore," and "Grandville de Vigne," has made a long stride forward in the new story of "Chandos," just published by Messrs. J. B. Lippincott & Co. It is a novel of great power, written in strong, manly English. The plot is ingenious and the interest is sustained unfailingly to the close. The principal character, "Chandos," the son of a great English statesman, is the object of the hatred of one "Trevenna," who contrives to get into his confidence, to disgrace and ruin him, and ultimately to become a great public man himself. But retribution comes at last, and the secret of the strange hatred is revealed at the close. More of the plot need not be told, as it might affect the interest of the story with some readers. The fault of this book, as with its author's former ones, is that there is scarcely a virtuous or an honest character in it. "Chandos," who is evidently a pet hero, was a profligate, who had friends in the Demi-monde and the Grand monde, who had mistresses in all the countries he traveled in, and who at one time is agonized by a fear that the woman he loves and has offered to marry, is his own child! Yet he is the superior creature of the story. "Trevenna" is a villain who is drawn nearly as well as Iago. His ruthless, unrelenting pursuit of the hatred to which he devotes his life is portrayed with a genius that is masterly. There are a score or more of other prominent characters, scarcely one of which is without a stain. The exceptions that occur to us are "Lulli," the musician, who is a cripple, and the young girl "Castalia," who is on the point of offering her virtue a sacrifice to "Chandos," when he is suddenly struck virtuous and asks her to marry him. The scenes of the story are shifted frequently, changing from London to Clarencieux, the princely seat of "Chandos," then to Paris, then to Southern France, then to central Italy, then to Venice. In the latter city occurs one of the most highly-wrought and dramatic incidents, which leads to the unravelling of some of the tangled knots of the intricate and not probable story. That the men and women of high English life are such profligates as "Ouida" describes, we are not prepared to believe. But he writes as if he were familiar with them, and, at all events, he makes most readable books, this one of "Chandos" being particularly interesting, and, as we said before, much better than the other two. A fourth, called "Idalia," is announced as in press.

"Gilbert Rugge" is one of the very best novels ever published by Harper & Brothers. It not only has an actual and substantial plot, but that plot is well carried out, awakening fresh interest on every page, and keeping the reader in a state of delightful uncertainty as to what the end will be. The characters are all striking, and drawn by a master hand; that of Sergeant Jack has never been excelled, we think, even by Dickens, and the great novelist himself never produced anything better, more life-like than Mrs. Flue and Joe Bunner. Part of the story is told through the medium of letters, which are most charming specimens of correspondence, and make us think what an enterteining letter-writer the author must be in real life. The hero and the heroines, for of these there are no less than three, are singularly attractive, and there is a fresh to the standard weight. ness and individuality about the whole book that will commend it to a large circle of readers. Just now the reading world is being deluged with treatises upon Cholera. All the "paths" are having their say about it and each is showing the absolute need of adapting its peculiar ideas. Among these various dissertations we are in danger of being greatly embarrassed by our multitude of counsellors. There has been a little hand-book published by Carleton, New York, called "Epidemic Cholera," which appears to be a very sensible and practica little work. It is written by an old East Indian surgeon, who speaks knowingly about the disease and its treatment, and who handles the subject coolly and cheerfully, which after all seems to be two-thirds of the battle. The work is intended to be, what we have called it, a hand-book for those who expect to have to do with the grim disease, if it should make its appearance, and it well deserves careful study. It is for sale by Ashmead & Evans.

"Washington and His Masonic Compeers" is the title of an interesting work just issued by the Masonic Publishing Company, New York. It is a memoir of Washington, in his connection as a Mason, and abounds with valuable historical facts, which have lost none of their interest by the lapse of time. The author, Mr. Sidney Hayden, has evidently bestowed great labor on his work, which will be gladly welcomed by his brothers of the Masonic Order, and will be read with pleasure by those who are never weary of perusing whatever concerns the history of the immortal "Father of his Country." The work includes the Masonic lives of numerous prominent companions of Washington. It is illustrated with numerous engravings, and sadly disfigured by a dreadful caricature of Washington, as a frontispiece. For sale by Moss & Co. and J. B. Lippincott & Co.

One of the most interesting of the numerous "Oil books" yet published is "Petroleum," a history of the Venango oil region, by Rev. S. J. M. Eaton. Starting with a carefully written history of the country itself, the author then traces out the whole course of the development of the wonderful resources which have made this once obscure region so famous. The whole detail of the oil-business is very cleverly and pleasantly laid down and the reader cannot fail to derive a great fund of valuable information from every page. The book is copiously illustrated and very neatly printed. We cordially recommend it to the notice of that somewhat large class of readers who have "done a little in oil." It is published by J. P. Skelly & Co., Philadelphia.

"Josh Billings" is always sure of a large audience, no matter when or where, or what he speaks. Carleton, New York, has Just published a volume of Mr.Shaw's funny sayings, which have become so wonderfully popular. The volume is plentifully adorned with humorous illustrations. For sale by Ashmead & Evans.

Assault with a Knife.-Last night about half-past eleven o'clock, David Esher and Wm. W. Johnson had a quarrel at a lager beer saloon, No. 1321 North Eighteenth street. Esher is alleged to have drawn a knife and cut Johnson in the left temple, causing a painful, though not serious wound. Esher was arrested. This morning he had a hearing before Alderman Fitch, and was committed, in default of $800 bail, for trial.

$800 bail, for trial. SERIOUS FALL.-Last evening, two lads employed in the lithographic establishment of A. L. Weise, No. 333 Chestnut street, attempted to slide down the rope, through the hatchway. The rope gave way and the boys were precipitated into the cellar. One of them, Francis Westfall had a thigh and an arm broken, and was conveyed to the Pennsylvania Hospital. The other was not so badly injured and was taken to his home.

HEAVY ROBBERY.-Mr. Naylor, of Mt. Holly, N. J., was robbed of $5,100 in this city yesterday. He drew the money from bank in $100 bills and placed it in his breast pocket. He then walked up Chestnutstreet to Eighth, and, upon turning into the latter street, discovered that his coat had been cut and the money abstracted. When or where the adroit robbery was committed is not known, except by the thief.

ARRIVAL OF A MONITOR.—The monitor Squando, Lieutenant George P. Ryan com-Squando, Lieutenant George F. Kyan commanding, in tow of the U. S. steamer Lenapec, arrived at the Navy Yard yesterday. The vessels came from Charleston, having left there on the 18th. The Lenapec, which is in charge of Commander Thomas S. Phelps, is to return to Charleston at once, and the Squando will join the iron clad fleet the company to the company to

THE sale of framed engravings last night at Scott's Art Gallery was well attended, but brought very low prices, not more than the cost of the frames; one-half of the catalogue was disposed of. The balance will be sold this evening. This will be the last sale this season. The oil paintings will be sold on Friday and Saturday evenings, 25th and 26th inst.

MAGIC PHOTOGRAPHY.-Messrs. Wilson & Hood, 626 Arch street, have for sale envelopes, with the prepared paper for producing photographic views. With these any one can, in a moment, have a photograph of his own manufacture. They are a decidedly interesting novelty.

CORRECTION.—We are desired to correct an error of our West Philadelphia reporter, who stated that Rev. John Chambers preached in the Berean Baptist Church on Sunday morning last. We are informed that he did not preach there, and it is not at all likely that he ever will.
