POOR JEFFERSON DAVIS! The schedule of meals furnished to the President of the late Confederacy, at the public expense, at his lodging, in the United States hotel at Fortress Monroe...

Surgeon Cooper, U. S. A., who was sent to look especially after the comfort of this poor, unfortunate martyr to the principles and practice of Secession...

How much "Mister Davis," as your Southern Secessionist and your Northern Copperhead are prone to style him, is to be puffed! If this Professor Monroe diet is persisted in we shall have some thing more than "verigo," "severe facial and cranial neuralgia," "erysipelas inflammation of the posterior scalp," and a peculiar sensitiveness to the creeping of boots that demands the laying down of matting for the feet of watchful sentries...

Jefferson Davis as a representative man, his history is an improving lesson. A cadet at West Point, his education was paid for by the "general public," which favored him and gave him an honorable title and support after he had graduated from the National School...

Surgeon Cooper thinks that stewed oysters, mutton chops and beef steaks are calculated to excite "an erysipelatous inflammation of the posterior scalp." We would suggest a course of the scanty rations of maggoty-meat, and wormy meal that were served out under his own eye to Union prisoners in Libby prison, and on Belle Isle...

Jefferson Davis now has the freedom of Fortress Monroe, with liberty to roam through it at pleasure from morning until night. Dick Turner is kept closely confined in a strong cell in Libby Prison, where he was once the jailor. If Turner, the subordinate, deserves this punishment, why should Davis, the principal in his crime, be allowed comparative freedom?

WE have frequent opportunities to admire the proficiency of public officials in the great art of "Not doing it." Boards, Trusts, Departments, Commissioners and Companies vie with each other in "not doing it," with an energetic unanimity which, while we suffer from it, we cannot fail to admire.

Mr. Whitall, in a most indiscreet attempt at explanation. He stated that a number of tents were offered for sale very cheap (as if money were any object), and this would be a good time to procure tents. Mr. Whitall is a most estimable and well-known member of the Society of Friends, and evidently clings to the traditions of his fathers, in his principles of economy and prudence...

What a figure, true enough! Taking the cholera comes. Let it get fairly hatched and fledge. Give it a chance upon the crowds in the theatres. Then advertise for proposals for the best Russia tent-duck. Then is the time to count your chickens. Meantime, rise superior to the prejudices of the vulgar and ignorant public, and show the tax-payers of Philadelphia that the Guardians of the Poor know "How not to do it."

JEFFERSON DAVIS AND THE PRESIDENT. The New Orleans Picayune has a Washington correspondent who is a very warm supporter of President Johnson, and who writes as if he were in his confidence. In a late letter he says that there is no prospect of Jefferson Davis's being tried for treason, though President Johnson is anxious for it. He goes on as follows:

"And I beg that none of your readers will misapprehend the President's motives in this. He is not anxious for the conviction of Mr. Davis, still less Mr. Davis to be executed. If he should be tried and convicted (an exceedingly improbable event) the Executive clemency would be at once invoked. What President Johnson desires is to have the highest judicial tribunal in the land decide, after hearing all the facts and examining the law of the case, whether the acts which are charged against Mr. Davis amount to treason or not. That those acts do amount to treason, no legal mind can for a moment suppose."

If these are really President Johnson's views and a part of his "policy," will he or his friends and organs explain what is treason? He used to have very decided opinions on the subject, and professed a desire to have an opportunity of making treason odious and having traitors punished. Hence said: "Show me a man who has given instructions to take our forts and custom houses and arsenals and dockyards, and I will show you a traitor!"
