From Cape May.

[Correspondence of the Phila Evening Bulletin,] CAPE ISLAND, .N J., May 25, 1866.—On Friday we had an impromptu celebration over the opening of railroad communication between the Cape May Depot and Cape Island. As your readers well know, it required almost as much determination to reach the Island, after arriving at the depot, as was required to travel the whole journey, in consequence of the passengers having to seat themselves in uncomfortable hacks to reach their hotels. The opening between the points above named will place the passengers in the centre of the Island, and within walking distance of all the leadand within waiking distance of an one leading hotels. The occasion of the opening was the result of a very happy time, enlivened with speeches and songs, and made highly attractive by the flow of champagne and other refresh-ments of an enlivening character. The Superintendent, J. Van Rensselaer, Esq., was the moving spirit, and by his tact in engi-neering, the celebration was a complete success, both in a spiritual and mechanical

In my last I promised to continue the no tices of improvements here. The Columbia Hotel, under the proprietorship of — Boulton, Esq., also the popular landlord of the old Buehler House, of Harrisburg, has in a state of forwardness many new features which will be wardness to be stated to the state of the s which will be realized by his guests this which will be realized by his guests this season. The dining hall has received improvements which the crowded state of that popular house last season suggested. It has been artistically beautified and handsomely furnished, and for hops, as well as dining conveniences, has no equal on the Island. The ill ventilated chambers have undergone the improvements needed to make them comimprovements needed to make them compare with the other perfections of the house. The other departments have been thoroughly renovated and beautified. The lawns have been enlarged, and trees of native growth and shrubbery have been artistically dis-tributed, surrounding the pebbled walks, extending from the corridors to the bathing houses on the strand. The discipline of the Columbia has been modernized, and when its former patronizers again greet its palatia halls, they will be delighted, and will award merit to the enterprising proprietor for the energy and enterprise displayed in his endea-vors to keep pace with the improvements of the age, and make the comfort and pleasure of his patronizers complete. Mr. Boulton is preparing for the opening of the season on the first of June, when the house will be ready to receive guests. Mr. Dennison, his popular assistant of last season, will again present his smiling countenance to the Columbia.

The weather, with the exception of the last few days, has not offered strong induce-ments to people to visit the sea shore, but to those who always seek an early bath with its invigorating influence, even the past unfavorable weather has had no unpalatable control over, for the breakers have been visited by many the past week.

The other hotels will not open until about the 15th of June, which is, perhaps, as early as the people desire. Congress Hall and the Columbia House will both throw open their doors on the first of June; and I learn that each house will have a liberal sprinkling of the early visitors. The proprietor of Con-

the early visitors. The proprietor of Congress Hall will give a grand reception on Thursday next, when the leading spirits of the country, and the press of the various cities, are expected to be present, and a general good time is anticipated.

The cottages are beginning to display their internal surfaces, experiencing a ventilation previous to the gay and merry throng inhabiting their happy halls. The prospect of a crowded and prosperous season is very promising, many apartments in the various Hotels being already engaged.

> [For the Evening Bulletin.] The Late Captain Whilldin.

During a passage to Cape May in Capt, Whilldin's steamboat, some twenty years ago, the following scene occurred, which made such an impression on the mind o the writer at the time, that subsequent events have scarcely been able to deepen it Among the passengers in the ladies cabin, was a quiet, modest, comely, well-dressed, well-bred young woman, with a dark complexion; about one quarter tinged with the warm blood of Africa. A swaggering, consequential, indolent man came up to the Captain and demanded that up to the Captain and demanded that this young woman sheuld be put out of the cabin, because his daughter and sister were there. The Captain, with the benignant smile and self-control that were habitual to him, said: "Come with me a few minutes my friend." He took him to a part of the boat where a newly-arrived cluster of emigrants were seated on the deck—part of them on the floor—without bonnets, with disordered hair and soiled garments; their few squalid effects tied up in ungainly bun-dles, or scattered by the greasy children, whom they were coaxing and scolding alter-nately. After scrutinizing the group a few minutes, Captain Whilldir said: "Had you rather have this company sit by your sister and daughter than that nice, tidy colored woman? for if I send her out of the cabin I woman? for it I send her out of the cabin I shall take these women in, for they are white! But I am Captain of this boat, and understand the proprieties of distributing my passengers. You may leave the boat if you wish at the next landing but I shall not distribute that ing; but I shall not disturb that young woman, who has been down with me a great many times, and for whom I have a

Nothing further was heard from the com-Nothing further was heard from the complainant or his party, whose respectability depended so entirely upon external incidents as to be seriously affected by the complexions of those with whom they traveled. It would be well if there were more likeminded men with Capt. Whilldin, to control our City Railway Cars; so that ALL respectable and decent citizens might share the benefits of these public conveyances.

AMUSEMENTS. At the Chestnut last evening the Webb sisters presented a spirited bill and made a very favorable impression by their lively. animated, piquant acting, singing, &c. To night they appear in "Pocahontas" and "A night they appear in "Pocahontas" and "A Husband at Sight," and they will have a good house. At the Arch, to the delight of everybody. Mrs. John Drew re-appeared, enacting Kate Harley in "The Needful," and being capitally supported by almost the entire company. Mrs. Drew never acted with more freshness and life and her costuming was most elegant. The scenery was new and worthy of the high reputation was new and worthy of the high reputation of this fashionable theatre. "The Needful" will be repeated this evening. Mr. Edwin Booth appears to night in "Merchant of Venice" and "Taming of the Shrew," both plays showing his versatile powers su-perbly. At Assembly Building we have the Carolina Twins, and in the same edifice Signor Blitz. We learn that in addition to the artists already announced to appear at the Mordaunt testimonial to morrow at the Academy of Music are Miss Effic Germon, Miss Kate Palmer and Mr. S. K. Chester, who have kindly volunteered.

GREAT JOHNSON MEETING.-A meeting of the unterrified admirers of Andrew Johnson was held last night at the Hart Tavern son was held last night at the Hart Tayern, Twenty-fifth Ward, for the purpose of organizing a "National Union Johnson Club." The chief organizer of the demonstration was Mr. Wm. Y. Leader, who delivered a long speech appropriate to the occasion. He then offered a long string of resolutions, which, to his infinite disgust, were almost unanimously voted down.

Mr. Geo. A. Rees then offered a series of resolutions which were unanimously adopted, and the meeting adjourned, without forming a National Union Johnson Club in the Twenty-fifth Ward. It was understood that the real object of the meeting was to manufacture a little political capital, wherewith to operate for an enpointment in wherewith to operate for an appointment in the Revenue service. The following are the resolutions that were adopted: Whereas, The people of the United States having just emerged from an expensive war against the Slaveholders' Rebellion, are not willing to lose the dear-bought results of a victory to the National Union party; therefore, Resolved, That the proposition of Andrew Johnson to admit the representatives in Congress from the rebellious States before the basis of representation is fully settled, meets with our unqualified reprobation.

Resolved, That the conduct of certain smock-faced Republicans who would sell their birthright for a mess of pottage to obtain a share of the public plunder, and to oust men of known Republican principles, is against our idea of right and wrong.

Resolved, That in Major-General J. W. Geary we have a standard-bearer worthy to be Governor of the loyal State of Pennsylvania, and in whom we have every confi strengthen the Secession Democracy of Pennsylvania, and that we will use our best endeavors to crush any attempt at such a result.

The citizens committee consisted of Messrs. Howard Mitchell, Jayne and Kirkpatrick. The act of Assembly, providing for the improvement, was read and approved. The Committee of Councils, it was understood, would report to Councils an ordinance to prohibit the laying of any more turn-outs on Broad street, and providing for the removal of those already are the statement. val of those already on the street as fast as

It is an elegant toilet article, and well worthy the econiums it has received."
