The Telegraph and Postal Systems. The Postmaster-General to-day transmitted to the Senate a reply to a resolution of that body relating to the establishment of a telegraph in connection with the postal system. He submits the replies to interrogatories made by himself, from experts in elegraphy, containing much valuable information as to the cost of constructing and operating lines, &c. The mails the Postmaster-General says, are now transported by rail 32,112 miles to which will be added, on the completion of the Pacific Railroad, say, 2,000 miles, making in all 34,112 miles of railway service. Estimating two-thirds of the distance as covered by the principal mail routes, within the meaning of the Senate resolution, the telegraph would be required for 22,941 miles, costing for construction of a single wire line, at one hundred and fifty dollars per mile, $3,411,150.

But as a three-wire line will not be above the average of the facilities required on the principal mail routes, to accomplish any practical purpose in aid of the Post-office Department, it is safe to estimate the construction upon that basis rather than upon a single wire, which will increase the cost The cost of a six-wire line h estimates at $580 per mile, with thirty poles to the mile, and no allowance of extra expenses for running through cities nor subparine cables. The annual cost of main taining lines, salaries, repairs, &c., included he estimates at 10 per cent. on cost of con-struction, and the depreciation of all kinds 8 per cent. per annum. In conclusion he savs:

"I do not submit estimates of receipts. gross or net, which will depend so largely on the manner in which the system will be managed to secure or lose the public confidence, and be so much affected by the character and extent of the compensation of private organizations, that I would regard any estimate too uncertain to be relied upon. As the result of my investigation, under the resolution of the Senate, I am of the opinion that it will not be wise for the Government to inaugurate the proposed system of telegraphs as a part of the postal service, not only because of its doubtful financial success, but also its questionable feasibility under our political system."

Among the documents submitted by the ster-General in response to the reso Iution of Senate, respecting the erection of Government telegraph lines, is the answer of the American, Western Union and United States Telegraph Companies to his inquiries. This document is somewhat voluminous, yet one which cannot fail to attract attention, and will convey many facts not generally known, and of interest to all con-nected with telegraph enterprises.

Among the points reached are:
First—The impracticability of predicating telegraph tariffs on the posteffice system of one charge to all places, and taking the minimum of present tariffs as the standard. This, it claims, would be making what are called "social messages"; suffer for the commercial business, the former being chiefly local and representing the minimum tariff. local, and representing the minimum tariff, and the latter distant. It also shows how impracticable it would be to sustain the lines under such a tariff, unless with enormous increase of business, which, if offered, could not be sent without the correspond ing increase of capital and the absorption of large sums of money, without any certainty of advantage.

Second—The fallacy of the proposal to send sixty-word messages at the present rate of postage, showing that the mere cost of delivering a message in New York exceeds eight cents; and that under ordinary expenses of rent and operators, with the wires constantly occupied during twelve hours each day, at the rate of two thousand words per hour, a six-wire line between Washington and New York would entail a et loss of over three hundred thousand dollars per annum.

Third—The necessity for the size of present tariffs, showing that they have not been increased beyond the general advance of the cost of labor, and other values.

corresponding increase of business from every reduction of tariff, claiming that there is a limit to the expenses by telegraph of commercial and social correspondence, and the mail must necessarily absorb nearly all communication not requiring immediate despatch.

Fifth—The necessity of combination of lines, not only to enable companies to economize their expenses and preserve the value of telegraph property, but for the purpose of sending communication without unnecessary repetition, under a single management and responsibility, thus avoiding the chief causes of error.

Sixth—That these combinations are neces sary as preparatory steps before the con-summation of the enterprises which look to the speedy encircling of the globe, and which, to be successful, must be under a Seventh.—That the consolidation of telegraph companies has been the result of mutual necessities, showing that the tual necessities, showing that the expenses of maintenance, usually regarded as small, are such as to render it next to impossible for two vigorous companies to contend for business and maintain to their properties any commercial value.

Ninth—That the United States revenue tax is over 4 cents on each message, inde-pendent of local and State assessments, which have in some States, been equal to four cents more. The revenue tax on the net receipts of the American Telegraph Company for 1865 were twenty-three percent. If the income tax on dividends and States were added, the total tax would be about one-third of the entire net receipts.

Tenth—That any attempt to found a sys-Tenth—That any attempt to found a system like that proposed and sustain it upon its own revenues, must be unsuccessful. It is claimed that the proper functions of Government are in the protection of private enterprise, and that Government should neither compete with nor depress it so long of the corrections of as proof is attainable of the correctness of the basis on which the business is trans-

Eleventh—That under our institutions, a telegraph system controlled by the Govern-ment must be, in the nature of things, objectionable; especially must it be so to the press, to all actively interested in the politics of the nation, and that the lines could not fail, sooner or later, to become mere Go-yernment vehicles for espionage and power.

Twelfth denies all the public statements made, of the cost of constructing lines, as visionary and untrue. It is shown that the expenditures for the wire cables laid in the Hudson river, to connect New York and Washington, exceeds the whole amount of the public estimates made of the cost of an entire line between those cables.

Much collateral information is given, including the financial results of the past six years, and the difficulties and perplexities of the business. It appears from this answer that there are over seventy telegraph offices in New York city, with a force of three hundred and seventy-five persons; that there are now thirty wires between New York and Washington, and that nearly one hundred wires leave the city of New York.

The American and West Union Companies have about two thousand offices with five thousand employes.

The names of thirty companies are given with an aggregate capital of fifty millions of dollars employing six thousand persons.

A description of the various telegraph inbition which more or less mar all great enterprises. But it may also prove that the work of assimilation to all the phases of public necessity is steadily advancing, and that even the processes which now give offence, and seem like attempts to absorb the vitality of a great and wondrous system for purposes of more power or actorion. purposes of mere power or extortion, are in reality necessities for carrying to successful fruition the greatest achievement of our times.'

The answer is signed by J. H. Wade President Western Union Telegraph Company; E. S. Sanford, President American Company, Wm. Orton, President United States Telegraph Company.

From our Third Edition of Yesterday.

From Washington. [Special Despatch to the Bulletin.]
WASHINGTON, June 4.—It is said that the British Minister has made a demand upon our Government for the surrender of the Fenians who fell into our hands. It is not at all probable that the request will be complied with. The Government has come to no decision as to what will be done with them, Charles O'Connor has had frequent interviews with the President yesterday and today in regard to the trial of Davis. He says that they are ready to proceed at once with the trial, and that if the Government is not ready they ask that he (Davis) be put upon his parole in such security as may be required. They offer any amount, from one hundred thousand to ten million dollars. The matter is before the President. The Senate Finance Committee to-day had under consideration the tax bill, but made ittle progress. Movements of General Meade. WATERTOWN, NEW YORK, June 4th. Gen. Meade and staff passed here this morn ington his way to the North. General Sweeny and one hundred and fifty Fenians were on the same train. The United States Marshal here seized nine boxes of arms and accoutrements on Saturday evening's train. All is quiet north of Ogdensburgh this morning. BUFFALO, N. Y., June 4.—All is quiet on the Niagara frontier. The arms of the cap-tured Fenians are on board the steamer Michigan. The British colors captured by the Fenians at the battle of Ridgeway, which the Canadians call Limestone Ridge, are also on board the Michigan.

General Meade and U. S. Attorney Dart-well, were at Potsdam, to-day, to look after Sweeny and his base of supplies. The report that Head Centre Day was captured in Canada is untrue, but it is certain he is not visible to the naked eye on this side. A ridiculous rumor has been published by the Post of this city that Kingston has been captured by the Fenians.

BUEFALO, June 4.—A gentleman just from the other side states positively that at the battle of Waterloo, yesterday, only four of the Canadian Volunteers were killed and about twenty-five wounded, three of them severely. The report that Lieutenant Col. Beaumont was killed was false, as no such officer was with the British forces. In fact, the only officer killed or wounded, as far as known here, on the British side, are Ensign McEachern killed, and Routh seriously wounded. Captain Bonstead was wounded. Ensign Fahey had his leg broken and Lieut Campbell had his arm broken by a Mojor General Mende Serenaded at Og-densburg.

Ogdensburg, June 4, Midnight.—Major General Meade was tendered the compliment of a serenade by the citizens of this place this evening. At about 10½ o'clock an immense bonfire was lighted at the inter-section of State and Ford streets, near the Seymour House. An excellent band of music was in attendance, and after a few patriotic airs, Major General Meade appeared on the steps of the hotel, and addressed the large gathering of citizens as

My fellow-citizens of Ogdensburg: I appear before you in response to the very flat-tering compliment which you have been pleased to pay me this evening by the se-renade I have listened to. I regret that it is not in my power to make any extended remarks. First, that I have not the capacity so to do, public speaking not being my vocation, but principally that I am very actively engaged at this moment, and have been ever since my arrival here, in attending to my public duties. I take this occasion, however, to return to you my sincere and grateful thanks for the very flattering compliment you have paid me.

It is always very gratifying to my feelings to receive the approbation of my fellow-citizens, particularly when I know that the compliment comes from so many of the gallant men who served under me, and brayely upheld the honor and integrity of their coun-of the Potomac, which for two years I had the honor to command. It is extremely gratifying to meet them-gallant soldier hat they were—to-day.

I remember their services well, and I was glad to see them to-day. [Cheers.] With these few remarks, if you will accept them, I will return to my duties, which I
