SPEECHES MADE TO ORDER. Great men are not so "slow". An to hammer out orations. Whether they have or not. The time, the cunning or patience. No, when they want their speeches made. They go to some "old hand". Who all the branches of that trade. Does fully understand. Just as each judge of well-made clothes. To Tower Hall directly goes!

EVENING BULLETIN.

TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1866. Persons leaving the city for the summer, and wishing to have the EVENING BULLETIN sent to them, will please send their address to the office.

BROAD STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

From League Island to the northern limit of the city of Philadelphia, a distance of over twelve miles, runs Broad street, a noble avenue, 113 feet wide. There is no straight street laid out of the same length and width in the world. Recent legislation of the State and city has made it practicable to carry out the design of this magnificent street, and many readers of this paper will live to see it all that could be desired. A committee of public-spirited citizens is co-operating with that of the City Councils, and there will be, under their auspices, great improvements effected during this season.

region, and as the Pennsylvania Railroad, connecting with all the others, runs entirely round what is familiarly called "the neck," there is a probability that the greater portion of our heaviest commerce, foreign and domestic, will ultimately be transferred to the southern part of the city. The wharves and store-houses of the Atlantic Petroleum Company, at Point Breeze, occupy about eight hundred feet of the Schuylkill river front, and above them are other extensive wharves in process of erection.

So much for the river boundary. But all through the interior of our peninsula there are many important manufacturing establishments, that must gather around them a large population and help to increase the value of land. Among these may be mentioned the very extensive white-lead works near Gray's Ferry Bridge, Howell & Brothers' wall-paper works, covering whole squares of ground; Campbell & Pollock's and Nichols & Co.'s large cotton mill; Joseph Harrison, Jr.'s, boiler works; the Union Car Company's shops, an extensive rifle factory, and many other manufacturing establishments, employing vast numbers of people. The city is building a substantial bridge at the old rope ferry, and a company of public-spirited gentlemen are about to make a fine turnpike from a point near the old Girard School house to the Bell Tavern, which will be a delightful drive.

JEFFERSON DAVIS AND WILLIAM B. REED.

The magnetic telegraph informs us that Mr. William B. Reed, of this city, has arrived in Richmond, Va., to take part as one of the counsel of Jefferson Davis in his trial. We have heard some Philadelphians express their regret that a townsman of their own should figure in so bad a cause; but they should bear in mind that it is the duty of a lawyer to give his best advice to all criminals without regard to the atrocity of the offences with which they are charged. Sometimes this duty is imposed upon the conscientious and reluctant attorney, as in the recent trial of the butcher Probst, where Messrs. O'Neill and Wolbert, two worthy members of the Philadelphia bar, were, contrary to their own wish, assigned as counsel for a brutal murderer. They performed their duty faithfully. Sometimes it is a labor of love, as in the case of William B. Reed, who doubtless experienced real joy at the opportunity afforded him of serving the "Stern Statesman," for whom he has so warm an admiration. Mr. Wolbert is the grandson of a worthy soldier of the Republic, and although his soul shrinks with horror from the crime of Anton Probst, his sense of professional duty prompted him to take part in the defence of the butcher to the extent of looking out for the legal rights of the latter. Mr. Wm. B. Reed is also the grandson of a grandfater who has figured in American history, and he takes naturally and kindly to the defence of the traitor whose treason he has so long admired and vindicated. That is the only difference between the counsel for Jefferson Davis and the counsel for Anton Probst. It is a pretty wide difference, as those who are familiar with all the circumstances will admit.

PAID FIRE DEPARTMENTS.

There are many good arguments for a paid Fire Department, and none against it. The sensible and responsible portion of the community is unanimous in the opinion that a radical change in the fire system is needed, and yet the movement in this direction is very slow. Amongst the many evils of the present system, few are more annoying than the constant forced levies that are made upon our citizens, under the form of subscriptions to firemen's balls and excursions. It is not too strong language to designate these applications for money as forced levies. A committee of a fire company canvasses a district with a subscription book, under the plea of a necessity for new hose or other apparatus, and it is too common to press the application with a degree of urgency that amounts to a threat. A very recent instance will illustrate the mode of procedure. A committee of a fire company located in the south-western section of the city called upon a gentleman for a subscription one day last week. The gentleman, somewhat wearied by the frequency of these demands, declined to give anything in this particular case, and the man went off grumbling, with the threat that "the next time there was a fire in that neighborhood, they would remember him."

have quoted above, it is certainly time for a reform. Of course there is a large portion of the department which cannot be charged with any such conduct as that referred to, but the whole system is necessarily compelled to share the responsibility. The establishment of a paid fire department, sooner or later, is inevitable, and there is no reason why Philadelphia should lag behind in a reform which has been introduced successfully and economically into every other large city in the Union.

HONORS TO TRAITORS.

The preamble and resolutions offered by Mr. Williams, of Pennsylvania, and adopted by the House of Representatives yesterday, may not elicit any satisfactory information from the President, but will stand as an expression of the reprobation by Congress of the conduct to which they refer. Whatever may be the wishes of others, there is no intention on the part of Congress to connive at treason and disloyalty, nor to ignore the facts which stare us in the face from all parts of the South, despite the complacent assurances of Mr. Seward to the contrary. It is openly asserted by a loyal newspaper published in Augusta, Georgia, that the public civil and military offices in that State have been formally closed on the occasion of honors being paid by living to dead traitors, and that the privilege of doing like honors to the graves of Union soldiers who fell in the South has been obstructed or denied by the Rebel authorities, with the concurrence or acquiescence of Federal officials.

Congress asks the President for information upon this subject and the reply will probably be a red-tape one. There is perhaps no official report in the hands of the President of these infamous proceedings, and yet there is no reason to doubt the truth of the statement. It is perfectly in keeping, not only with the prevailing feeling of hostility towards the Union and devotion to the cause of Secession, but also with the character of many of the federal appointments at the South. Congress is only discharging its duty in laying the true state of Southern affairs before the country and in thus opposing stubborn facts to the poetic fictions of Mr. Seward and the other advocates of the Presidential policy. Congress is constructing such a platform of solid truth as will withstand every assault that hatred for the North and greed for public plunder can bring against it. Should the present application for information be met with anything short of an official denial of the facts as alleged, it is to be hoped that Congress will appoint a commission to investigate and report upon them.

Mrs. Gazzaniga's Concerts, we are glad to learn, will be given in the Academy of Music, on Friday and Saturday evenings. These will probably be the closing musical festivals of the season, and the old admirers of Mrs. Gazzaniga will turn out in force to welcome her on her re-appearance in Philadelphia. The sale of tickets will begin to-morrow, at the Academy and at Trumpler's Music Store, Seventh and Chestnut streets.

A LETTER FROM THE SOUTH, which has been crowded out for a day or two, will be found on our second page. It gives an exceedingly interesting account of the state of affairs among the freedmen on the Carolina and Georgia coast.
