AN AFFECTING SCENE. My uncle, Andrew Peleg, was a man of ambitious means, and when his death was approaching, he gave particular directions about having handsome monuments erected to his memory.

Long time he bore, But no—that's been said so often that it's too great a bore. Then there's "We had a little" Pahaw! that wouldn't do, for I'm not little, by any means.

Advancing from these rates we have pools of all grades, up to the very finest fabrics, at prices reduced to proportion.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

The question of what constitutes cruelty to dumb creatures is now exciting attention in the city of New York.

The Legislature of that State has passed a law creating a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the organization thus created has set to work in earnest to accomplish the purposes of its creation.

It has interferred to stop the shocking cruelty practiced upon sheep, steers and calves driven to market, and it has made an effort to prevent drivers, far more brutal than the beasts they drive, from mistreating those most patient of animals, the horse and the mule.

But this humane association has gone a step or two further; it has remonstrated against the cruelty of boring holes through the finest turtles imported from the coast of Florida, and against the laying of the poor creatures upon their backs in the hot sunshine.

A beneficent Creator has made a law governing all these things, and those who infract His wise ordinances upon themselves, or impose them upon others. Cattle driven over a hot and dusty road into a foul and stifling market-place, and from thence, (in a famished condition), to the slaughter-house, must of necessity, be feverish and unwholesome, and the price of their flesh must fall short of oxen, calves, sheep and hogs treated in a humane, and financially, a discreet way.

Turtles, the fins of which are bored through and pierced for cords; lobsters that have plugs stuck over their claws, and fish that are taken from their native element to gasp out their lives in a hot sunshine, and perhaps to be parboiled in bilge water before they reach a market, cannot be wholesome, and the dealer in them must suffer accordingly; while the damage to the consumer is beyond calculation.

We are not treating this matter in a humanitarian way. We have our own ideas concerning cruelty to animals; but we propose to discuss this question from a fish and flesh-eating point. The laws of humanity and of common sense are accordant with each other, and we would appeal to humanity through selfishness to correct certain evils.

Cattle should never be driven from the drove yard to the slaughter-house with all their imperfections of thirst, hunger, fatigue and feverishness upon their heads. Never torture calves or sheep by leaving them to suffer the anguish of hunger and excessive thirst, while their feet are linked together in a hot sun-bine, and while some coarse and brutal butcher boy drives them to the abattoir with their heads dangling over the tail or the side of a cart. Their flesh is not good, treated in that way. Adopt the French plan and kill your fish as soon as it is taken from the water; the flesh is firmer, treated in this way, and your humanity is thus repaid. Never leave your oysters, dull, insensate and low in the scale of creation as they may be, to lie broiling in the sunshine, or to linger on a slow death in your cellar. They will be the poorer for it, and the measure of charity which you mete out to them will be compensated for in the way of better and firmer shell-fish. As you treat turtle and lobster so will they treat you. A turtle bored through the fins and left to lie upon its back, either in the shade or in the sunshine, is uncomfortable, to say the least, and those who put the creature in that fix must take the consequence of it in flabby flesh and semi-vitality when the animal comes to be killed, and to pay the penalty which decrees all dumb things of flesh kind to the gratification of the human palate. As a mere matter of policy, kindness to animals pays; but as some men are scarcely higher in the scale of creation than the creatures they abuse and torture, it is well to have laws to punish cruelty, and societies to aid in carrying them out.

NEW FIRST CLASS HOTEL AT CAPE HAVEN.

The popular watering place at Cape Haven, so important to invalids and those seeking recreation during the summer months, has for some years called into comparative neglect, owing to tedious and uncertain modes of access. The importance of the beach over all others as a bathing ground, of late, however, has attracted the attention of the Legislature of New Jersey, and a bill has been introduced into that body, which shall provide for the construction of a new and improved mode of access to Cape Haven, and a ball of New York, rendering more direct and convenient access to accommodate those who now through the cool and invigorating shores.

The number of gentlemen who resort to Cape Haven, during the summer months, is so large, that the Legislature of New Jersey, a most liberal charter, and a bill has been introduced into that body, which shall provide for the construction of a new and improved mode of access to Cape Haven, and a ball of New York, rendering more direct and convenient access to accommodate those who now through the cool and invigorating shores.
