FAME The Prince of Wales, his fame to aid, Made an extensive wholesale raid On birds well fed, and, though half tame, Yet still denominated game His Highness butcher'd left and right, Thousands of birds killed off outright, And after he was well tir'd out, His prowess was soon nois'd about, And he was call'd, in wond'ring tales, That Prince of Sportamen, Prince of Wales. It is astonishing to see,

How lords, and men of high degree. Will labor in pursuit of fame, To get some empty-sounding name;— Here people work for no such end, But to their calling close attend . Still, sometimes, if eclat they'd seek, They make a short tour for a week. And knowing well what they're about, They first obtain a good FIT OUT. EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1866.

Persons leaving the city for the summer. and wishing to have the EVENING BULLETIN sent to them, will please send dress to the office.

LEAGUE ISLAND. , If it were possible, it would give us great pleasure to print in full the speeches of Philadelphia's faithful rep-League Island bill. But it would be unfair to print one without printing all, and we must be content with assuring our readers that Messrs. Kelley, O'Neill, Myers, Thayer and Randall all distinguished themselves by their zeal in behalf of the measure and by the ability of their arguments. The consequence was that, in spite of the most strenuous opposition, the bill was carried by a large majority. If Pennsylvania were as well and as faithfully represented in the Senate as she is in the House, there would be more confidence in the ultimate passage of the bill. But unfortunately neither Mr. Cowan nor Mr. Buckalew takes the slightest interest in the prosperity of the State or of its metropolis. And if they did take any, they are utterly without influence. Both are so absorbed in the work of getting traitors back into Congress and turning true men out of office, that they can give no time or labor to a great and indispensable national enterprise, which would especially benefit the State of Pennsylvania. Still we trust that the bill may be carried through the Senate on its own merits; for the arguments in favor of it are unanswerable, the necessity of a great naval station for iron clad vessels is admitted by every one, and League Island has been recommended as the only suitable location by the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and by a great number of distinguished and judicious naval officers.

THE FENIAN COLLAPSE. The second attempt of the Fenians to invade the British provinces has come to an inglorious end. It is hard to conceive of worse management than that of the Fenians in both the Campo-bello and the Canadian undertaking. The latter was altogether the most formidable; but it consisted only of a general assemblage of undisciplined men, mostly without arms, at different points along an extended frontier, and every movement was so public that the Canadian and the United States authorities were equally well informed of all that was going on, and of course they both acted promptly, and the result is the disbanding of all the parties that meditated invasion. They are now hurrying back to their homes, furnished with transportation by the United States. A few lives have been lost, a great deal of the money of hard-working Irishmen and Irish women has been wasted, agood deal of alarm has been created, and the Governments of Canada and the United States have been put to consider- the owners and publishers of the Pennsylable expense, by the foolish conduct of vanian of this city, and as the senior mem-

tion of Ireland seems further off than ever before. Indeed in Ireland there is profound tranquility, which does not seem likely to be seriously disturbed again during this generation at least. In Canada, where it has been reported that many thousands of Fenians were ready to rise, it does not appear that a single man joined the invading parties. either at Fort Erie or at Pigeon Hill. On the contrary, there were many desertions before the final order for retreating was given.

However little the British and Canadians are entitled to the sympathy of the government and people of the United States, there can be no doubt that it was right to enforce the neutrality laws. These Fenians are mostly naturalized American citizens, who ceased alike to be Irish citizens and subjects of Queen Victoria. when they took the naturalization oath. It is wholly unlawful for them to organize expeditions on American soil against a power that is at peace with the United States. It would doubtless gratify most of the people of the United States to see Ireland free and independent. But if this is ever to be done it must be through operations on Irish soil, and the United States are not to be involved in a war on account of it. We have had enough of war to last us for a life time, and we trust that we may never have another. unless the Union or the national honor is endangered.

SUPERIOR STATESMANSHIP. The Petersburg Daily Express is a small but very rabid secession sheet, of the same school as the Richmond Examiner and the Memphis Avalanche. On Saturday last this interesting journal made its appearance in full mourning, in honor of the rebel dead, and favored its readers with an article upon the subiect which is worthy of note. It is argued | highest degree satisfactory. that, upon the whole, the South has gained immensely by the war. The material loss is admitted to have been heavy, but the amount of glory that has been won is more than an ample compensation. The South does not regret the sacrifices of the war nor "look back to the flesh-pots of Egypt with longing and tearful eyes." Not by any means. Glory is what the South lives on and glory is a perfect drug just now in the Southern market. It is admitted that "our rights have been wrested from us for the time, but they were not basely surrendered," and therefore the Express hails the rebel celebration of Saturday last with unfeigned delight.

But the bag which contained the cat was insecurely fastened, and with the memory of Pollard and the fear of a military visitation before its eyes, the Express slips in a saving clause at the end, intended to make everything safe in that direction, and in so doing the cat escapes. It says:

"In saying this, we disclaim any want of fealty to the Federal Government. When those who are now making merchandise of our rights shall be thrust out of the temple of Liberty, the title of the South to superior statesmanship will be again vindicated."

Here is the beginning and end of Southern loyalty. The South is bent upon again vindicating its "superior resentatives in the House in favor of the statesmanship." The world knows what this superior statesmanship has done for the country in the past. By a long process in which cunning and bullying were blended, with consummate skill, the North was shorn of its power and reduced to a political vassalage to the South. By the artful sophistries of this same superior statesmanship the whole body politic of the South was inoculated with the pestilent heresies that have since borne such deadly fruit. The ruling spirit of the rebellion, the arch-traitor who made himself the head and front of the great crime against the life of the nation, was Mr. Reed's "stern statesman," who seems to be about to "vindicate his superior statesmanship" by slipping his head out of the hangman's noose that he so eminently de> serves. The North hashad an overdose of this "superior statesmanship." It costs too much. The statesmanship that has carried the country through the war and crushed the rebellion is good enough, with all its short-comings, to control our national affairs, now that we have reached a condition of peace. If it is deficient in some of those superior qualities which the wire-workers of the South developed in such a high degree, it has certain elements of devotion to country, obedience to law, love of liberty, and practical, honest common sense, which make very good substitutes for Southern brilliancy. The Amendment to the Constitution will deprive the country of the valuable services of the superior statesmen who have adorned the rebel army and the rebel Congress; but the country has great vitality and will be able to worry along without them. Who knows but that the north, which has developed so much ingenuity and such fertility of all manner of resource during the war, may, after awhile, itself rise to that lofty level of "superior statesmanship" which the South has so long monopolized, and which it is now so anxious to exhibit > once more on the floors of Congress. Death of Benjamin Mifflin, Esq. We regret to announce the death of Benjamin Mifflin, Esq., which took place at his residence, in South Twenty-first street, last evening. The deceased, who was in the 67th year of his age, had been in ill health for a considerable period, and his death was not unexpected. For many years Mr. Mifflin was connected with journalism in his State. More than forty years ago he was associated with the Hon. Simon Cameron in the publication of the Doylestown Democrat. He subsequently became one of the Fenian leaders; and yet the libera- | ber of the firm of Mifflin & Parry, he was long identified with the paper referred to. Mr. Mifflin's connection with the Pennsylvanian was during its best days, and among the well known gentlemen who occupied editorial positions upon it during his proprietorship, we might mention the lamented Joseph C. Neal, with John W. Forney, and L.A. Wilmer.

After the retirement of Mr. Mifflin from the Pennsglvanian he entirely relinquished his connection with journalism, and between that period and the time of his death he held several important public offices which he filled acceptably.

In this private life the deceased was remarkable for his kindly and gentle disposition, and his personal amiability and sterling qualities disarmed the prejudices of those who differed from him in partisan feeling and opinion at a time when politics ran high, and when he was the principal. high, and when he was the principal proprietor of a paper which was the recognized local organ of one of the great political parties of the day. The deceased had no enemies and many warm friends, and his death will be regretted by all who knew him.

APPLETON'S HAND BOOK OF TRAVELS We learn that that valuable work, Appleton's Hand Book of Travel, will appear in a new edition this year, and with a wast amount of fresh matter. It will be in three parts, published separately at first, and then bound in one volume, viz: "The Southern Tour," "The Western Tour" (comprising the Pennsylvania routes of travel and objects of interest), and "The Northern and New England Tour." "The Southern Tour" will be published in a few days. Mr. Edward H, Hail, the editor, is now in this city and would be glad to receive any information of interest to the citizens of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania, or to visitors to our State.
