BUSINESS NOTICES.

CAUTION TO STRAWBERRY EATERS. In partaking of the most delicious and most popula of berries, you will have to be cautious in regard to three thirgs; In the first place, don't consume too many, (a quartat a time is enough for any moderate person,) nor take a drink of ice-water, or cold milk, mediately after them. Secondly, if you wear a pany, don't allow a very large quantity of cream to accumulate on the hirsute ornament. Thirdly, be careful not to stain your new summer suit, though it was bought so very cheaply, at Tower Hall! WE HAVE-

EVENING BULLETIN.

VEGETARIAN PATRIOTS.

There is a select class of public men who have long claimed position as leaders of public opinion at the North. Horace Greeley and Henry Ward Beecher are perhaps the most prominent types of this class. They are philosophers and philanthropists, shrewd, accomplished and ismatic. Occupying prominent pohe apostles of freedom, almost the and doings during the war have shaken the faith of many in these pet idols of the Pulpit and the Press. Men begin to question whether they really are leaders, or whether, from some superior buoyancy which nature or circumstance has given them, they have not merely floated uppermost in the great on-going tide of an advancing civilization, pushed forward by the force of growing public sentiment, and not, in reality, forming or controlling that sentiment. The old apostolic order of developing human thought and principle was to begin with milk and to go on to strong meat, and this order of progression seems to be the only rational one. But these would-be leaders have reversed the bill of fare, and from the strong meat with which they formerly fed the people they have come down first to a mild vegetable diet, then to milk, and finally to milk and water. Very unlike each other in many respects, 'the one vastly more robust, modern and manly than the other, there is a strong tendency to moral vegetarianism in both. Like the kettle in the "Cricket on the Hearth," "Greeley began it." Starting with that tremendous "On to Richmond!" of his, which afterwards passed into such a by-word. he dwindled down to an "On to Niagara" policy. His nerves, weakened by his preference for a vegetable over an animal diet, could not stand the shock and din of the battle. His gushing humanity was too much for him. Step by step he edged out from the front rank of the advancing hosts of freedom. Step by step he lingered and halted and hesitated. And at last we find him, far at the rear, hugging to his bosom that estimable man, Jefferson Davis, and imploring the relentless President to let the poor unfortunate fellow go free. Mr. Greeley's gentle nature, kept tender by his vegetarian habits, melts before the errible sufferings of the dyspeptic prisoner at Fortress Monroe, and he rushes to his relief. Greeley, as well as some others that might be mentioned, has "changed his Israelites." So with Henry Ward Beecher. Having taught his people all manner of warlike lessons; having proclaimed death and destruction to rebels and traitors; having dangled the hangman's noose from his pulpit as play. fully as he might toy with the tassels of his pulpit-cushion; having fed his flock upon the most substantial meats that the political pulpit can supply, down he goes! His brazen trumpet gives place to the dulcet shepherd's pipe. He berates his people for holding fast to the doctrines he has so long taught them. His sturdy advocacy of the North gives way to a simpering sentimentality for the South. He wakes up to the conviction that vegetables and milk and water are better for the rising generation after all, and he wonders and argues and scolds because thestrong men of the nation, who have grown up to the stature of their new liberty and their enlarged civilization, will not go back with him and eat green herbs in place of wholesome meat. The masses of the people have set their faces the other way, and while a few of their teachers may proclaim their new convictions that they have been wrong or crazy all through the war, the effort to make the rank and file of the army of freedom believe it will prove a lamentable failure.

PENNSYLVANIA SUMMER TRAVEL. Our advice to persons contemplating travel beyond the lines of Pennsylvania, this summer, is that of Punch to parties contemplating marriage: "Dont." There is so much that is novel and interesting in the State, that the whole summer might be passed in varied and healthful excursions, without ever passing beyond its limits. Besides, it is a mortifying fact that there are more Philadelphians familiar with New England, New York and the Canadas than there are familiar with the interior of Pennsylvania.

The great Central Railroad, traversing the entire State from East to West, will take the traveller to many points of interest. From the fine old city of Lancaster he can make pleasant excursions to Ephrata Mountain Springs, to the quaint old Moravian village of Litiz, and to other interesting localities. He is also within a half hour's ride of Columbia, on the Susquehanna, which is always beautiful. Harrisburg has good hotels and most picturesque surroundings. From there the tourist may go up the beautiful Cumberland Valley to Carlisle and Chambersburg, which are historic towns, and in themselves very interesting. Gettysburg is also within easy reach of Harrisburg, and the battle ground, and the national cemetery which Mr. Lincoln dedicated, will make it forever interesting and memorable.

At Huntingdon the traveler may diverge to Broad Top, where there is an excellent hotel; and he may go on to the famous Bedford Springs, which have medicinal qualities and beautiful surroundings unsurpassed by any watering place in the country. At Altoona and Cresson there are fine hotels, and weeks may be enjoyed there breathing the pure mountain air, making pleasant excursions in all directions, fishing, shooting, &c. West of the Alleghenies are many other places worth visiting, especially the great metropolis of western Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh. The vallies of the Delaware, the Lehigh and the Schuylkill abound in attractive places. The Water Gap, Easton Bethlehem, Mauch Chunk, Pottsville and other places, can all be visited with pleasure and advantage. A new railroad route, by the North Pennsylvania sitions of influence, they have come to road, takes the traveler to the fine and be counted as the leaders of the people, prosperous town of Wilkesbarre, where there is an elegant new hotel, and where founders of the new order of things. | many days could be passed pleasantly, But their erratic and eccentric sayings | for the beauties of the Wyoming Valley cannot be over-rated. From there it is easy to go to Danville and the prosperous town of Williamsport, which is in the midst of a lovely country, and has also the advantage of a first-class hotel. All along the West Branch of the Susquehanna there are attractive places and the Philadelphia and Erie railroad will then carry the tourist to the great oil region, which, of course, every person of leisure will endeavor to visit. Meadville is an interesting and growing place, and so is Franklin, on the Allegheny, while Erie, our only port on the lakes, is well worth visiting on many accounts.

In an article like this, it is impossible to indicate one hundredth part of the places in Pennsylvania that deserve to be visited by Philadelphians away from home in the summer. They should abjure, for one season at least, Newport, Saratoga, Sharon, Niagara, the White Mountains and the St. Lawrence, and study the geography, the scenery, the wealth and the places of historical interest in the interior of their own State.
