XXXXXH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION. [CLOSE OF YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.]

SENATE.-Mr. Grimes (Iowa) introduced a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the Secretary of War for a report of he Board of Officers on the subject of Coast

The joint resolution for the representation of the United States at the Paris Exposition was taken up.

The question was upon the amendment of Mr. Harris, to appropriate $25,000 in coin for the erection of buildings for the display of American articles. The amendment was

American and total agreed to—yeas 18, nays 17.

Mr. Harris (N. Y.) offered an amendment making it the duty of agents disbursing money under this joint resolution to report such disbursements in detail to Congress. Adopted.

Mr. Stewart (Nevada) demanded the yeas and nays on the passage of the resolution as amended—yeas 21, nays 13. So the resolution was passed. It goes to the House for concurrence in amendments.

On motion of Mr. Doolittle(Wis.) a resolution was passed that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. Morrill (Me.) moved to call up the bill repealing the city charters of Washington and Georgetown, and providing for their government by commissioners.

Mr. Wilson (Mass.) moved to postpone the above bill till the first Monday in December. He was in favor, he said, of the other proposition, which conferred universal suffrage in the District. The pending bill was made the special order for Wednesday next.

At 5 o'clock the Senate went into Executive session, and soon after adjourned.

House.—Mr. Bingham asked leave to offer a concurrent resolution requesting the President of the United States to transmit resident of the United States to transmit forthwith to the Executives of the several States copies of the articles of amendment proposed by Congress to the State Legislatures, to amend the Constitution of the United States, passed June 13, 1866, to the end that the States may proceed to act on said artioles of amendment.

Mr. Le Blond (Ohio) asked the Speaker whether the concurrent resolution came in by unanimous consent.

The Speaker stated his understanding. that it was reported from the Committee on Reconstruction, and therefore privileged.
Mr. Bingham (Ohio) corrected that, and said he asked unanimous consent to introduce it as a member.

Mr. Le Blond said: Then consent has not been given. The resolution is wrong on its face. It requests the Executive to send copies of the proposed articles of amendment to the different States, and yet the time for the Executive to approve or reject the joint resolution proposing them has not yet elapsed. [A member in his vicinity here said something to him in a whisper.] I am told, he continued, that the Executive is not required to sign a joint resolution proposing nstitutional amendments.

Mr.Randall (Pa.) interrupted and inquired of the Speaker whether there was anything properly before the House.

The Speaker—If the gentleman from Ohio

[Mr. Bingham] makes the report from the Reconstruction Committee, of which he is a member, it is before the House; otherwise it is subject to objection by any member.

Mr. Le Blond, without paying attention to this side scene, went on to say that it had been the practice to submit resolutions, propositions, and constitutional amend-ments to the Executive.

Mr. Bingham challenged him to say when that had been the practice.

Mr. Le Blond replied that it was done under Mr. Buchanan's Administration, and also under Mr. Lincoln's,
Mr. Bingham inquired whether the twelve amendments reported by the First Congress of the United States had ever been submitted to or approved by the President. Mr. Le Blond said that he was aware that in the early history of the country the re-cords showed nothing on the subject. It did not show that constitutional amendments were either approved or rejected by the President; but it was a fact which gentlemen could not escape, that the Constitu-tion made no exception whatever as to the bills and joint resolutions requiring the signature of the President. He denounced this as a move to evade another veto coming from the Executive, and stated that he should object to the introduction, at this time, of the concurrent resolution.

The Speaker—If the gentleman makes the point of order that constitutional amendments must be submitted to the President of the United States, the Chair will decide that Mr.Le Blond-I did not raise that point of order. I want the proposition, when it does come before the House, to be open for dis-The Speaker—The Chair regards the gentleman as having make the object on on that specific ground, also urging it, and the Chair will decide that an objection, if based on that ground, is not good.

Mr. LeBlond—If the Chair sees proper to decide that question— The Speaker—The gentleman reached that point and the Chair decides that the objection is not good. The Chair has the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States for that decision, and has the precedents before him, as he found it his duty to look into the superior.

Mr. Johnson—The Supreme Court never decided a question of order in this House.

The Speaker—The gentleman from Pennsylvania containly does not understand the look into the question.

sylvania certainly does not understand the decision of the Chair, or he would not make the remark he did. The question was raised, distinctly, in 1803, in the Senate of the United States, on a motion that the then proposed amendment should be submitted to the President. On motion, that the Committee on Enrolled Bills be directed to present the President of the Vested to president the President of the Vested to the President of the Presi sent to the President of the United States for his approbation the resolution which nor als appropriate the resolution which had been passed by both Houses of Congress, proposing to the consideration of the State Legislatures an amendment to the Constitution of the United States respecting the mode of electing the President Vice President thereof, it was passed in the negative—yeas 7, nays 23. On a distinct vote—23 to 7—the Senate voted that the Committee on Enrolled Bills should not present the proposed amendment to the President of the United States for his approval; and it was not presented to or approved by him. The same question came up in 1798, in the Supreme Court of the United States depending upon the amendment to the Constitution proposed in 1794; and the counsel, in argument before the Supreme Court, insisted that the amendment was not valid, not having been approved by the President of the United States. Mr. Lee, the Attorney General, in reply to this argument, said: Has not the same course been pursued relative to all the other amendments that have been adopted, and the case of amendments is evidently a substantial act, unconnected with the ordinary business of legislation, and not within the policy of terms of investing the President with a qualified negative on the acts and resolutions of Congress. The court, speaking through Chase, Justice, observes there can surely be no necessity to answer that argument. The negative of the President applies only to the ordinary cases of legislation. He has nothing to do with the proposition or adoption of amendments to the Constitution. In the last Congress, after the constitution. the constitutional amendment was submitted to Mr. Lincoln, it was sent back by him with the remark, that he thought he had no right to sign it, but as it was submitted to him by Congress he signed it, and a resolution was afterwards reported by the Committee on the Judiciary in the Senate, and adopted without a division, stating that "that was

The Secretary was directed not to notify the House of the Senate having received notice that the President had signed the constitutional amendment. In debating that question, the Senator from Maryland [Reverdy Johnson] said: Now, the proposition is that no proposal by Congress of an amendment to the Constitution, although receiving the support of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress, is to be submitted to the States unless the President shall approve it. That is not the case in relation to the other mode of proposing amendments, there being two modes; and stated in the alternative, the other mode is, "or on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds who is Congress to of the several States." What is Congress to do then? Suppose two-thirds of the States propose amendments, has the President anything to do with that? All will admit that he has not. Has Congress anything to do with that? All will admit that their single duty, then, is an imperative duty to call a convention. So that the whole object of the clause, as it seems to me, is merely to of the clause, as it seems to me, is merely to begin a mode by which the people shall have an opportunity of deciding whether the Constitution shall be amended or not. But when, as is stated by the honorable chairman of the Judiciary Committee, every amendment which has been adopted has been submitted to the States without having here are not when the president and when een approved by the President, and when the Supreme Court, at a time wh as high as it ever stood any time since its or-ganization, refused even to hear an argu-ment on the subject, supposing it to be too clear for discussion, it would seem to me that we ought to consider the question as settled. The Senate so voted. The Chair will state, in reply to the remark of the gen-tleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Johnson,] that this is a parliamentary point; it is a question whether the chair shall direct the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution, to be presented by the Com-mittee on Enrolled Bills of this House to the President of the United States, and the Chair has decided that it is not in accordance with the Constitution or with the uniform usage, with the single exception alluded to, as occurring in the last Administration, that it should be so presented. The objection in this case seemed to the chair not merely an objection on a current resolution; it was an betterion on a point of constitutional law.

Mr. Le Blond—With all due reverence to the opinion of the chair to the authorities cited, the question which the chair has presented is an entirely new one, and not the one that I made. The objection that I made s to the introduction of the bill at this time.
The Speaker—The gentleman from Ohio now objects to the introduction of the concurrent resolution, and it is not before the House.

Mr. Le Blond.—That is the only objection that I made.

Mr. Bingham then gave notice that he would introduce the concurrent resolution on Monday morning.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the bill to provide for restoring the States late in insurrection their full political rights. Mr. Hale offered the following amendment to the bill: Provided, however, that this act shall not be construed to deny the right of each house of Congress to be the judge of the each nouse of Congress to the July of the election returns and qualifications of its own members, or to prohibit the admission by either House of any members duly elected and qualified, on taking the required oaths of office, at any time.

Mr. Orth made a speech in support of the oill, after which the bill went over till Monday next.

Mr. McKee, from the Committee on Claims, reported back the Senate bill to reimburse the State of West Virginia for moneys expended for the United States, in arming, equipping and paying military forces to aid in suppressing the rebellion, with amendment to appoint three Commis-sioners instead of one. The amendment was agreed to and the bill passed.

The Speaker announced as the special committee on the Rousseau-Grinnell affair, Messrs. Spalding, Banks, Hogan, Raymond and Moorhead. On motion of Mr. Ward (N. Y.), leave of absence for one week was granted to Mr.

The Mississippi Levees. The report of Major General A. A. Humhreys to the War Department, concerning the levees of the Mississippi, was transmit ted by the Secretary of War to the Senat yesterday in response to a recent resolu-tion. The breaks are shown to be very numerous, and the results of consequent over-flows innumerably disastrous. He recom-mends at the present time, in accordance with his instructions from the War Department, the following repairs: First, five levees on the Seasoo Bottom, 699,000 cubic yards, at a cost of $305,000; second, eight levees on the Tensas Bettom, 739,000 cubic yards, costing $295,000: third, three levees on the Mississippi Delta, 554,000 cubic yards, costing $217,000. The three make an ggregate expense of $817,000 for 1,982,000 ubic yards.

The General states that at present prices the crops of cotton grown in the alluvial region above Red river in 1860 would amount to $108,000,000, and that the product of the sugar region below at present prices was equivalent to $50,000,000. He estimates that the complete and permanent repair of all the levees of the river would require $1,200,000 for the State of Arkansas; $1,500,000 for Mississippi, and $1,200,090 for Louisians

—a total of $3,900,000. It appears that the repairs made last win-ter upon the levees in Louisiana amounted to 700,000 square yards. He refers to statements in his report of a former examination of the levee systeem, which assume that the cost of all the levees of the river, if none were then in existence and a complete an sufficient protection should be secured would amount to $26,000,000, and to perfect those already in existence would require

He estimates the alluvial lands of the He estimates the alluvial lands of the Mississippi at 31,700 miles, of which 12,300 square miles below the Red river lie in the sugar region, of which one-third might be brought under cultivation. This would open a million and a half acres of sugar lands in addition to the million acres now open to cultivation. Of the remainder 16,000 square miles are cotton lands, and 16,000 square miles are cotton lands, and are of the most fertile alluvium, two-thirds of which should be made available to culture. This would give 7,000,000 acres of cultivated land capable of growing a bale of cotton per acre, or about double the whole cotton crop of the United States in 1860.

we think has ever yet been made by anybody. Their effects have abundantly shown to the community shown to the communi

vegetable, are free from any first of many contents been made which surpass belief, were they not substantisted by men of surher exalted position and character, as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergy men and physici ans have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of our remedies, while ethers have sent us the assurance of their conviction that our Preparations contribute immensely table relief of our afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The agent below named is pleased to furnish grafts our American Almanac, containing directions for the use and certificates of their cures, of the following.

Oscitiveness. Fillious Complaints, Rheumatism, Droposty, Hearburn, Headache arising from foul stomaris, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatnlency, Iors of Appetite all Diseases which require an evacuant medicine. They also by purifying the blood and atimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be surposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuragis and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Ki'neys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body, or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by apprincipled dealers with other preprentions which they make more profit on. Demand Ayre's and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.
