The history of mining enterprise is filled with examples of the great influence which a single undertaking will sometimes exert upon the business of a country. lar interest because of its extreme simpli-city. Some twelve or fifteen years ago Prussia consumed, for culinary purposes alone, 257,000,000 pounds of salt per annum, the proportion being about fifteen pounds for each and every inhabitant of the king-dom; a proportion, by the way, which; in keeping with the lethargic spirit of the country, had remained fixed and unvary-ing during a quarter of a century. The HOUSE.--Mr. Baldwin rose to a personal explanation, and said that he had ascer-tained on looking over Executive document No. 125, showing the amount of mileage paid to members of the last Congress, that he was charged with $80 more than he had ing during a quarter of a century. The amount above mentioned was employed solely for household purposes, for the very considerable quantities used in agriculture and by various manufacturing estabactually received, being for two hundred miles of travel more than he had claimed. It was correct on the books of the Sergeant-at-Arms. He found that a similar error was made with other gentlemen, and he therefore asked leave to offer the following: Resoluted Thatthe Committee following: lishments were not taken into account. The amount of salt produced by Prussia at the same time, at the various saline springs of the country, was only 214,000,000 pounds, or, roughly estimated, scarcely seventy-five per cent, of the quantity con-sumed within the kingdom. More than 50,000,000 pounds of salt had, therefore, to be imported into Prussia every year. It was in the hope of doing away with this condi-tion of thing that the Government proceeded to excavate the mine in question. To what Besolved, That the Committee on Appro-priations be directed to investigate and report in reference to the errors in Executive document number 125, and also to consider the expediency of a revision of the existing law in reference to mileage, so as to make the payment of mileage more equal, and more accordant with actual cost of travel to and from the National capital at the present time. There being no objection, the resolution was offered and agreed to.

Mr. Paine, from the Committee on Elec-tion, made a report in the contested elec-tion case of Fuller against Dawson, from the Twenty-first Congressional District of Pennsylvania, and stated that he would call it up next week.
