WALNUT WOOD .- There are several varities of walnut indigenous to this country. The western forest wood from the rich al-Invial lands of Indiana and Illinois is the best kind for furniture, as the grain is firm and of a purple color. The curl or crotch veneer obtained from this wood is very fine. The curl is formed at the junction of the principal branches with the trunk of the tree. This is cut into veneers the flattest way and produces the feather figure, which is so much admired in polished furniture. Sometimes a large excrescence or wart is found in a gnarled tree weighing a ton. It is formed by disease in the tree—the sap bubbles out at the diseased part and forms the wart which when cut into veneers (the conly way in which it can be used) is the most beautiful and serviceable of all. It is difficult to obtain and, of course, is very valuable. The walnut from Canada and the lake shores is not near so firm in grain, nor so desirable for use. Albany, N. Y., is the great distributing point for this wood, and New York and the Eastern manufacturers depend mostly on it for their supply. The walnut from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware is a very solid wood and is mostly consumed at the Government armories and by gun-makers for gun-stocks. It makes good chairs, sofas and tables, but is not good for doors or panels, as it is liable to warp. The white walnut or butternut is a very soft wood, unfit for furniture, but desirable for wainscoting and other interior work in dwellings. What is called blister walnut is common to all the varieties. From some cause the growth of the tree is deranged and the grain crosses and interlocks. When cut into veneers and polished it has the effect of into veneers and poissed it has the enect of having the figures elevated above the surrounding wood in feathery form, and the illusion is only dispelled by close examination. French wainut (as it is called) grows generally in Europe. The antique pieces of furniture which were brought over at the first settlement of America are made of it. The wood of the tree resembles our butter-nut, but at the roots is most beautifully figured and is used for the most ornamental furniture in connection with bronze tablets and mouldings. The supply of walnut in Europe is nearly exhausted, and French agents have ransacked the Byzantine coast for the stumps and roots of the trees that were cut down years ago. They cut it into veneers not much thicker than wrapping paper to economize. The machine for out-ting is made of a number of circular cutters, about two inches in diameter, secured to a frame, each cutter having a separate axle, and made to revolve at immense speed. The block of wood is secured to a sliding frame and is forced backward and forward under the cutters, thus slicing off one hundred veneers to the inch. This thin veneer requires very careful working, and the care required can only be used to Veneers in this country are cut by two different processes. The first is the circular saw, and was the only way known until a few years ago. The saw plate or wheel is made of iron and is about five feet in diameter, it is flanged or beveled on one side so as to throw off the veneer as fast as cut. The saw teeth are cut in plates or sections about eight inches in depth and thin to the point of the teeth, make a curi of only 1-32 part of an inch. The log to be sawed is secured to a sliding carriage or frame and is forced gradually against the revolving saw, throwing off from twenty to thirty veneers to the inch of the width and length of the log.

There is now a new invention for cutting veneers which has almost superseded the twelve inches radius. These are screwed firmly to the wheel and being ground very saw. It is constructed like a guillotine, with a very heavy knife which is flat on the side mext to the log it is cutting, and beveled on the other side so as to throw off the veneer. This is suspended by heavy machinery. The wood to be cut is first steamed until it becomes soft and is then secured firmly to a carriage under the knife. The knife descends with great force and has also a drawing or as much as two feet wide and seven feet long. There is no waste (as by a saw curf) by the knife, which is an important manner, as it will cut sixty veneers to the inch, whilst the saw only cuts thirty. Very fine veneer is worth twenty cents per foot, and every other foot is wasted by the saw curf in sawing. One guillotine will do more work than fifty saws-but there is one great objection which no doubt will be soon overcome. The steaming of the wood, previous to cutting, lnjures the color and makes it liable to shiver after it is dry. Walnut is disappearing very fast, and the day is not far distant when it will be as scarce in the United States as mahorany is in St. Domingo. hogany is in St. Domingo.

The Presbyterian Church (Old School)— The Louisville Difficulty. LOUISVILLE, June 22.—The Old Louisville

Presbytery adjourned after a four days' session. This body proceeded, irrespective of the General Assembly, to adjudicate the Walnut Street Church case, ignoring the elders indorsed by the Assembly. They adopted the act of their Commissioners at St. Louis as their own, and proceeded throughout on the ground that from the time their delegates were excluded, the Association had no jurisdiction over them and its acts, so far as concerned this Presbytery, are a usurpation. A minority, who desired to sustain the General Assembly, withdrew and formed another Presbytery, which adjourned after denouncing the old Presbytery, and warning the people against BALTIMORE, June 21.—The Presbyterian Churchdifficulty is still under agitation here. Rev. Dr. Backus, of the First Presbyterian Church, corner of Madison and Park streets, the wealthiest and most influential congregation in the city, addressed his people last night, and defended his position. He spoke has been been been a very large and attention. nearly two hours, to a very large and attentive audience. It is proper to state that Dr. Backus has been throughout the war a firm, consistent Union man.

He, however, never took any partin politics, but wherever good was to be done, and charity to be bestowed toward the Union cause and Union soldiers, there himself and family might be seen. No better, no purer man lives. He announced his firm determination to stand by the church.

There were some specifications in the late actions of the General Assembly which he could not approve, but these were of minor consideration compared with the paramount duty of preserving the Church in its integrity as an organization. He differed entirely from Rev. Dr. Bullock and others who had recently withdrawn from the Old School. He especially eschewed schisms, and believed the course adopted by these erring brethren calculated to do harm in this respect. The duty of all true members of the Church was to try and correct errors, even of the General Assembly, rather than encourage irritations. It was the Christian's duty to do so.

All men are liable to go astray, and if found doing so they should be kindly treated, calmly reasoned with, and brought back. For his part, Mr. Backus said, he would stand by the Church as it now is, and lebon messently to smend any errors. and labor incessantly to amend any errors or wrongs committed, whether by the General Assembly or individuals. He advised others to do likewise. He believed politics had nothing to do with pure religion, or church affairs, but because some of his brethren differed from him in this, it was no excuse for disrupting so old and rev-erend an institution as the Presbyterian Church. The congregation of Dr. Backus is about equally divided in political senti-ment. No vote is to be taken on the question.

The Congregation of the Fourth Presbyterian Church met last night and voted almost unanimously to sustain their minister,

Rev. Mr. Leifener, in his protest against the General Assembly and withdrawal there-from. After the vote had been taken and the resolutions adopted, Mr. W. C. Arthur arose and said that he protested against the action of the meeting. Though one of the oldest members of the congregation, yet many did not know him. He and his family had been snubbed by the congregation, and had been kept in the back-ground. They had endured it all; had listened to sernions and prayers of which they did not approve; had never heard the President of the United States prayed for in the church but once, and on that occasion many their health and composed their health.

turned their backs, and some left the church. There were men in the congregation who would have cut their throats two Amid cries of order, the Moderator declared the language uttered was improper and should not be used.

Mr. Arthur—Is it not true?
The Chair—No sir.
A Voice (very decidedly)—It is false.
Mr. Arthur—Thank you, sir.

Mr. Arthur proceeded in some further remarks, concluding by presenting a written protest, similar in character to the one presented at the meeting of the Franklin Presbyterian Church, signed by himself and J. Fleming Arthur. The protest states in effect that the church edifice was erected for n organization in communion with the Old School Presbyterian Church of the United States, and should not be perverted from its uses; that nothing is to be gained by a separation from the present connection to join the Church South; and that i the majority of the congregation persist in the action they have taken they should abandon the church, property, which right-fully belongs to those who continue their relations with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

On motion of Mr. G. F. Anderson, the protest was received and made part of the record of the meeting. After prayer by Mr. Gustavus Ober, the meeting adjourned.

Explorations of the Nile Sources. Samuel White Baker, M.A.F.R.G.S. And Gold Medallist of the Royal Geographical Society J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO., Publishers, PHILADELPHIA.

"In the history of the Nile there was a void; its sources were a mystery. The Ancients devoted much attention to this problem; but in vain. The Emp-ror Nero sent an expedition under the command of two centurions, as described by Seneca. Even Roman energy failed to break the spell that guarded these secret fountains. The expedition sent by Mehemet All Pasha, the celebrated Viceroy of Egypt, closed a long term of unsuccessful search.

"The work has now been accomplished. Three English parties, and only three, have at various periods started upon this obscure mission; each has gained its end.

"BRUCE won the source of the Bine Nile; Speke and Grant won the Victoria source of the Great White Nile; and I have been permitted to succeed in completing the Nile sources by the discovery of the great reservoir of the equatorial waters, the Albert Nyanza, from which the river issues as the entire White Nile.

"The journey is long, the countries savage; there are no ancient histories to charm the present with memories of the past; all is wild and brutal, hard and un feeling, devoid of that holy instinct instilled by nature into the heart of man—the hellef in a Supreme Being, in that remote wilderness in central Equatorial Artica are the Sources of the Nile."—Preface.
