Diplomatic Correspondence. The first volume of the diplomatic correspondence, submitted with the President's annual message last December, has just been issued from the Government press. It covers six hundred pages, and relates altogether to Great Britain and the United

The correspondence begins as far back as November 25, 1864, and ends with November, 1865. The long time which has elapsed since the documents were sent to Congress, has deprived them of much of the interest which would have attached to their early publication.

There are, however, some points worthy of notice. Many of the questions in controversy between the two Governments, growing out of the late civil war, are discus length, and the subject of rebel privateers occupies much space in the correspondence. The Secretary of State kept Minister Adams well posted on the condition of affairs, while the latter advised the former of everything which could possibly prove of public interest. The discussions between Mr. Adams and Earl Russell, and the instructions to Mr. Adams from the Secretary of State, cannot fail to form an important part of diplomatic history, while they afford an insight into the policy of the respective Governments.

Mr. Adams, in numerous letters, refers to the violations of the neutrality laws, and among other cases mentions that the United States steamship San Jacinto was wrecked upon a desolated bay of the Bahamas. Her officers and crew found shelter at Nassau until relief could be obtained from the United States. The wreckers, who had re-covered certain portions of the movables o the vessel, presented their claim for salvage the payment of which they required in coin. Nassau being considered as the most con-venient point for settling this claim, the steamer Honduras proceeded thither for the purpose of procuring the coin with which to adjust the transaction. The Consul of the adjust the transaction. The Consul of the United States, in compliance with the terms of her Majesty's proclamation, solicited permission for her to enter. That permis-sion was at once refused by the Governor, on the ground that it was not a case within the exceptions provided by the proclamation.

Mr. Adams says: There was no single day during the month in which this incident happened that thirty-five vessels, en-gaged in breaking the blockade, were not to be seen flaunting their contraband flags in that port. Neither had its hospitality been denied to that hybrid class of British ships running its illegal ventures on joint account with the insurgent authorities in the United States.

To the remonstrance of Mr. Adams Earl Russell replied that American merchants, when neutrals, have availed themselves of similar chances of profit; but that her Maiesty's Government will feel bound to prevent, to the utmost of their power, the vio-

Intion of her Majesty's rights and of her Majesty's declared neutrality.

Mr. Adams, in reply, deeply regretted that he was constrained to say that every well-meant effort of Her Majesty's Government to put a stop to this extraordinary state of things down to April, 1865, had proved almost entirely fruitless.

Mr. Adams, on the 15th of June, 1865, in writing to Acting Secretary of State Hunter, says the intense interest manifested in the fate of Jefferson Davis is one of the phenomena of this remarkable era; and then adds:-"Carefully disavowing the indul-gence of the slightest acrimonious feeling gence of the slightest acrimonious feeling towards Mr. Davis or any of his associates. I have expressed the hope that the ends of justice would be satisfied with the least possible effusion of human blood. We have had enough of slaughter and of public and private misery. Especially had a severe retribution already been visited upon these misguided people, who had, by their wanton obstinacy brought it all upon the country.

country. If even Mr. Davis could be disgraced, and then suffered to sink into oblivion without seriously impairing the force of the exam-ple in the view of later generations, I should be parfectly content. If Mr. Davis, having, under all the safe-guards of our laws, un-dergone a trial for his offence, should be proved guilty, condemned and sentenced to pay the last penalty, the responsibility of interposing would then devolve on the Pre-sident. I have no doubt that he would meet it with the dignity and impartiality that became his office. Neither was I disposed to believe that, whatever might be his de-cision, if given in the manner indicated, it would be attended by any of the evil conse-quences to the reputation of our country all over civilized Europe, which seemed to be a matter of so much concern to our enemies, not less than our friends. Mr. Seward, in replying to this letter, says he had read with pleasure Mr. Adams's remarks upon the question, what penalty ought to be imposed upon Jefferson Davis, which question is so universally and so earnestly discussed in Europe. He adds—

"Your sentiments are deemed just and

This volume contains the correspondence, &c., relative to the assassination of President Lincoln, and Mr. Adams transmits to Mr. Seward very many addresses and resolutions on the subject from all parts of the kingdom, saying, "the interest in this matler is all but universal."

ler is all but universal."

Mr. Seward, under date of Sept. 5th, 1865, wrote to Mr. Adams: "Sw—I have to inform you, by direction of the President, that the will neither make promises nor grant either passports or permits for return to rebels now abroad. Applications for pardons will be considered only when the persons making them are residing in the United States: and, in any case, there must be an States; and, in any case, there must be an unreserved, not a conditional, appeal to the mercy and magnanimity of the Govern-

Mr. Adams, in a letter dated September last, speaks of his excursion to Ireland, and while alluding to the secret organization of the Fenians, says:
"I have never anticipated any difficulty that would prove serious. The disaffected class may be large, but it is poor, unarmed, and generally wanting in the elements of moral power. Any resolute violence could end only in the slaughter of thousands without the possibility of obtaining a single object. The effect would be merely to play into the hands of their opponents. A far more dangerous policy would be to keep up and assiduously extend the secret disaffection, which might parhaps be done by the aid of American sympathy, until the pro-crastination of uneasiness should weary the Government into radical measures, to re-move a constant danger by promoting the transportation of the disaffected poor at the public expense. In England, few persons consider insurrection a possibility. In Ire-land, few have it ever out of their minds; conscious of the existence of the evil, and conscious of the existence of the evil, and hopeless of any system of remedy, instead of thanking America for the relief which emigration gives them, they are disposed to quarrel with her, because she creates in her people a desire to go. Important Political Movement. A number of Fenian leaders have visited Washington during the past two weeks and have freely announced their purpose never again to co-operate with the Democratic party. They excuse themselves for having voted with this organization during the war by alleging that it was impossible to rally their people in favor of emancipation and arming the negroes; but now that the whole world seems on the eve of a great uprising, the spirit of conversion is powerfully at work among the Irish masses, and no-thing stirs them so much as the remem-brance of the mistakes they made in the past by helping the pro-slavery politicians to power. All through the west the Irish leaders are open in denouncing the copperheads. and equally open in declaring their determination to show their sincerity at the coming elections. Certain it is that the radical Republicans are ready to unite with the Irish n any future practical organizations against their British oppressors. That portion of the Union which borders upon Canada is controlled by Republicans of this stripe, and you need not be surprised if future elections disclose a hearty co-operation between them and the Irish population. The latter now see and confess how wrong they were in not following the counsels of their eminent friends and countrymen, Meagher, Brady, Corcoran and Bishop Purcell, when these insisted that it was their duty to go with the party against slavery, and not with the falsely-styled Democracy. Whatever the radicals in Congress and elsewhere may have thought of Fenianism per se, and may think of the Congress and the recent prothink of the Government or its recent proclamation, they are now clearly en rapport with the Irish leaders, and ready to assist them in any of their future honest designs. Disorder in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, June 23.—Yesterday's Bowling Green Gazette says: In consequence of rumors in town that the negroes in Woodburn and Franklin are organizing to take Sheridan, the murderer of Donovan, from the jail here, the police had been greatly strengthened by a volunteer force. If Harper and the negroes are both on the rappers the Greatte space at that a transrampage, the Gazette suggests that a strong force should be out constantly on duty. The Democrat learns that a desperate character, named Orange, who was sent to the Frankfort penitentiary, on a charge of murder and arson, some time since, and who was pardoned by Governor Bramlette, was killed a few days since, by a posse sent was killed a few days since, by a posse sent out by the Sheriff of Butler county, to capture a family of desperadoes named Burns, on the Greenville road. The posse called on Orange for assistance, which he refused to give. He was killed in an altercation which ensued.

At Bradenburg, on Tuesday, three suspicious persons put up at a hotel, saying they intended to leave for St. Louis. After night they hitched their horses in front of the hotel. Some men approached them, when one of them, named Joe Smith, told the parties they came to arrest them. All three thereupon drew navy revolvers, whereupon thereupon drew navy revolvers, whereupon Smith caught one by the throat, knocking him ever the head with his pistol. The other two broke for the door, with drawn weapons, firing as they went out. General firing then commenced between the young men and the thieves. Their horses breaking loose, they escaped, but the next morning some young men recaptured two of the thieves and their

The Case of Jefferson Davis. Mobile, June 23.—Surgeon Craven's description of the shackling of Jefferson Davis, as published in this morning's Register and Advertiser, causes universal indignation. That paper, in commenting upon it, says:
"The treatment of Bonaparte by Great Britain was noble, chivalrous, humane, courteous, magnificent, when compared with the indignities inflicted in the name of Republican America upon Jefferson Davis, It was not Jefferson Davis alone who was subjected to cruel indignity by this act. The outrage was committed upon eight millions of people, whom they professed to regard as brothers. The iron entered into their souls. It enters now into the soul of every honest man or virtuous woman who reads the shameful story—a story which will stir the soul of the veriest stoic that cons it."
